Newton has still more to be proud of. As a certified life coach and clinical hypnotherapist, he knows how to get results. His positive attitude and friendly demeanor are infectious. Newton has been dubbed "America's Life Coach" as a result of his coaching success. With his business partner, Laura Kronen, a top lifestyle stylist, he has presented his words of wisdom at seminars around the country and continues to encourage people to live the best life they can by using positive thinking. "The way you think, the words you choose are very important," Newton said. "By using words of power each day, you will feel different at the end of the day. Your breathing is slower, your energy increased, and your sleep is improved."

Newton created a new live show last year entitled Hypnotastic, which, he says, is a Vegas-style casino show. "It's a stage hypnosis extravaganza," he said. Newton is taking his show on the road in the next couple of weeks and was planning a show for his new town on August 21. "We've had a scheduling conflict with the venue we wanted to use," he explained. "So the show is being postponed. We will definitely hold a show in the Boston area by the end of the year and all of my Hingham friends will be invited." Newton said that because he is a trained life coach and clinical hypnotist, he knows how to put on the perfect show. "I know how to build anticipation and create excitement," he said. "I will astonish and electrify audiences in each city."

Growing up in St. Louis, Newton said he never wanted to move to Los Angeles to be an actor or be famous. He just wanted to entertain audiences. He mentioned that his grandmother was a comedienne during World War II and had performed with Phyllis Diller. "It's how she made an audience feel," Newton said. "I wanted to do that, too."

Newton said that being the host of a game show helps him to do just that. "I get to share moments with contestants," he said. "I can give them life-changing sums of money. I see the looks on their faces, the tears, their hands shaking, hear what they're saying. Those are incredible moments." He also said the schedule of a game show host is much different than people may think. "We can shoot a whole week's worth of shows in one day. I just shoot a show, go back and change my clothes, shoot another show, change my clothes again. The entire season can be completed in a matter of weeks."

The flexible schedule allows Newton to work on his other endeavors, including a syndicated radio show that he hosts called Life Radio with Todd Newton (www.voiceamerica.com). He said he recently interviewed his game show idol Bob Barker. When he asked Barker what his definition is for success, Barker said, "It's doing what you love to do." Newton is certainly doing that.

Shouldn't your bank be a credit union?

You've probably heard. Maybe you've seen it in the news. More than ever before, consumers are leaving the Big Banks and moving their accounts to safer, more consumer-friendly community institutions like Crescent Credit Union. With the recent scandals and sub-prime mortgage debacle, it's no wonder more and more Americans are looking for a better place to bank.

And now, when the mega-banks should be going out of their way to do good by their customers, they're raising credit card rates, creating new fees, and tightening lending restrictions.

At Crescent, we feel there's a better way to bank. Visit Joanne Defeo and her staff at 85 Pond Street, Route 228 in Norwell, or call 781-871-4202 and find out why your bank should be Crescent Credit Union!

Don't miss 'Sunset at the Abbey'

Atlantic Symphony Chamber Players to present concert

Season Star subscribers get admission to all 13 ASO events from August through May 2011.

As the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra prepares for its traditional "Sunset at the Abbey" pre-season concert at 4 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 28, at Hingham's Glastonbury Abbey, it has extended the deadline to qualify under its new Season Star subscription program. Season Star subscribers get admission to all 13 ASO events from August through May 2011.

ASO supporters will qualify as Season Stars, at a cost of $300, through Aug. 28, when the Abbey program kicks off the 2010-2011 performance year on the lawn of the Glastonbury facility. Audience members, who bring chairs or blankets and often pack a picnic basket, will be treated to acoustic classic-rock special guest Border Road in addition to the ASO Chamber Players.

With its blend of music from the blues to the Beatles, and lots in between, Border Road played to a packed house recently at the C-Note in Hull. And it has drawn raves for performances in other venues, as well. The ASO Chamber Players are led by ASO music director Jin Kim. Admission to the Abbey program is $10 for adults and seniors, with youth through age 18 admitted free. Glastonbury Abbey is at 16 Hull St., Hingham. In case of rain, the performances will be at First Parish Meeting House, 23 No. Main St., Cohasset Common.

Kim already is preparing the all-professional ASO for its first full symphonic concert of the new 2010-2011 season, Saturday, Oct. 16, at 7:30 p.m., at Duxbury Performing Arts Center, 73 Alden St. Kim's pre-concert lecture will start at 7 p.m. That program will include the "Roman Carnival Overture" of Hector Berlioz, Aaron Copland's "Appalachian Spring" and Antonin Dvorak's popular Symphony No. 9 "From the New World."

In addition to its concerts on the South Shore, the ASO will perform April 2 at New England Conservatory's Jordan Hall, before wrapping up the season with a May Pops Concert at Thayer Academy Center for the Arts in Braintree. For a performance schedule and more information, visit the Web site at www.atlanticsymphony.org or call 781-331-3600.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Many of us are moved by music, but how many of us are so incredibly moved that it inspires us to make music the focus our lives? One young man, Robert "Rob" Mortenson of Foxboro, did just that. Winner of our Summer Music Festival's Malcolm W Rowell Jr. Scholarship, Rob sums up his experience with music in the following essay:

"From a very young age, I thought that I had it all figured out. I would finish high school, major in pre-medicine in college, and go on to medical school. From there, I'd become very wealthy, happy – successful. People always say that 'if you find a job you love doing you'll never work a day in your life.' I always just shrugged this off, thinking 'Well, I won't mind being a doctor – the pay is great.' Now being a young adult, I realize how lucky I was to be influenced by the incredible music teachers and performers that I've gotten to know.

Three summers ago was my first year at the South Shore Conservatory. It was my private instruction with Eric Laprade that made me fall in love with playing the tuba. To this day, I often think of Eric's ceaseless encouragement, determination and humility. It is performers and teachers like this who can truly touch the hearts of students and musicians.

Next year I will be studying tuba performance at New England Conservatory in Boston. Ultimately, I'd love to be playing in a pit orchestra, symphony orchestra or brass quintet. More importantly, though, I want to move people. I want to share my emotion with them through music and make them feel like they have never felt before. This idea of moving someone emotionally means far more to me than a paycheck for a gig. Similarly, I want to teach private studio lessons. My mother once told me that the only thing more rewarding than her own successes, are those of her children. By teaching privately, I hope to replicate this idea. Essentially, I aspire to be a teacher, an artist, a storyteller – a musician. In the end, I decided that the only thing that constantly challenges me, inspires me and nourishes me is music."

Next year I will be studying tuba performance at New England Conservatory in Boston. Ultimately, I'd love to be playing in a pit orchestra, symphony orchestra or brass quintet.

The Rowell Scholarship is awarded annually to one deserving Summer Music Festival student. Winners must have been a Summer Music Festival participant for at least two years, submit an academic resume, been accepted at a Conservatory or university, and be pursuing a music education degree, and write an essay about how music affected their lives.

As winner of the Rowell Scholarship, Rob, principal tuba for the Foxboro High School Concert Band, Wind Ensemble, and Orchestra, receives $1,000 toward his college tuition. He graduated from Foxboro High School this past June.

Elaine Sorrentino has been South Shore Conservatory's Communications Director since 1993. She has met many amazing students over the years, and realizes that each has his/her own inspiring story to share.

Engage in learning experiences that inspire extraordinary levels of personal growth.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 30, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This could be the time to try soothing whatever bad feelings might be lingering 'twixt and among colleagues, friends or family members. But be sure you do so without favoring any side.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An idea is only an idea until you put that clever Bovine mind to work to develop it from concept to substance. This could lead to something rewarding, both emotionally and monetarily.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The early part of the week could have some disconcerting moments, but approaching them with a calm, unruffled attitude goes a long way toward helping to get things nicely settled down.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Getting used to change continues to mark much of the week. But accepting what you have to do makes adapting that much easier. A welcome visitor could turn up sooner than expected.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Learning how to live with a decision is a challenge, but one you Leos and Leonas could really enjoy. You'll also be pleased to see your social life take that upsurge you've been hoping for.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Use your perceptive Virgo instinct to help you see the positive aspects of what, at first, appears to be a disappointment. You could find that it proves to be quite the contrary.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your ability to maintain a balance between sense and sentiment once again helps you sort through apparently conflicting choices and ultimately arrive at the right decision.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Before you seek the advice of colleagues about a potential career move, you might be better off getting counsel from someone who won't be affected by the choices you make.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It can be a challenging week for some relationships if the normal give-and-take flow changes with one side doing most of the giving and the other the taking.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A new opportunity could bring with it much anticipation along with some anxiety. Take time to sort out your options as well as your emotional considerations.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Are you sure you have all the facts you need to let that matter move to another level? Don't be rushed into a decision unless and until you feel it's the right thing to do.

7 (February 19 to March 20) Pace yourself as you prepare to take on that more demanding project. Be careful not to let your energy reserves drain away. Take time to relax with people close to you.

(c) 2010 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have the ability to see both sides of a situation. You would do well as a counselor or a judge.

KING RICHARD WANTS YOU!

By Frank Mand
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Kitchen wench, scullery maid, forester, fletcher, peasant.

If any of those titles appeal to you, saunter on down to 235 Main St. and make your mark on the parchment: King Richard's Faire is hiring.

Be advised, though, that whatever title you take, the reality is that these paying jobs are what Ryan (in the distinctly non-medieval trailer where you apply) calls "the skeleton" of their annual production.

They are hiring people to work in the box office, to maintain the grounds, to do maintenance, to staff the concession stands, and support the fantasy behind the scene in general during the event's 16-weekend run that begins on Labor Day and runs just over a month (Sept. 4 is the start date this year).

Alas, the featured players – the king and queen, knights, ladies, courtiers, fools and the like – are all hired during tryouts in Boston and Providence in the early spring.

Still, it's a job, and it's a job where, if you like, you can wear tights, pumpkin pants or a sport a wreath of laurel in your hair. You are free to answer inquiries using terms like "mayhaps," "perchance" and "belike," all of which mean "maybe."

If you still harbor fantasies of a fuller immersion into the Dark Ages, there will be an opportunity to apprentice (which translates as no pay and long hours) to some of the featured players by first participating in a special program.

If you have an interest and some background in the theatrical arts (singing, dancing, sword play and such) and don't need to be paid, then consider trying out The King Richard's Faire Apprentice Program. If you're accepted, they'll teach you manners, customs, dialect, stage combat, the art of interactive theatre, improvisation and costuming of the times.

If you just need a job, though, in this century, head right on down to the "office" at 235 Main St. in Carver (well off Route 58, down a long access road, across a large parking lot alongside the façade of the fair's customer entrance) and speak with Ryan.

King Richard's is hiring now and will continue to take applications through their season because, as Ryan notes, seasonal work staff often comes and goes.

Actually, what Ryan said when asked how many openings they have is, appropriately enough, "the more the merrier."

Out of the water

Black Rock, Sandy Beach and Sandy Cove closed after sampling

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

As of Thursday, three beaches in Cohasset were closed due to high bacteria levels. The board of health was re-sampling on Thursday, after the Mariner went to press, and expected new results by Friday afternoon.

Health Inspector Tara Tradd, who conducts the weekly water quality tests, reported Wednesday afternoon that Black Rock Beach, Sandy Beach and Sandy Cove has to be closed for swimming.

Bassing Beach in the harbor, which is usually subject to a closure when there is rainy weather, remained open for swimming.

The board of heath takes water samples each Tuesday to ensure the ocean water is safe for swimming. Beaches are closed if tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water or an average of 35 colonies over a five-week period.

All three closed beaches were well over the 104 enterococci guideline. Black Rock recorded 318. Sandy Beach had 414, and Sandy Cove recorded 197.

Tradd said the heavy surf and churned-up ocean could be to blame for the high bacteria counts, in addition to first flush stormwater runoff from the heavy rains. Historically, those three beaches, because of their location on open ocean, are the cleanest and rarely closed.

A breath of Fresh Air

Cohasset family is host to NYC youths

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There's nothing wrong with a little fresh air

And for youths in the heart of New York City, that couldn't be truer.

Each summer, the Fresh Air Fund sends inner city youths out in to the county for a little fun, sun and clean air. A Cohasset family, the Goldens of King Street, have been a host family for the Fresh Air Fund program for 10 years.

In that time, Jody and Shaun Golden and their three children — Will, 15; Curtis, 13; and Corey, 12 — have welcomed two children into their home, and in many ways those children have become part of the family.

The Fresh Air Fund, an independent, not-for-profit agency, has provided free summer vacations to more than 1.7 million New York City children from low-income communities since 1877. In recent years, nearly 5,000 New York City children have made their way to the suburbs and small towns of 13 states.

The Goldens have had a long history with the Fresh Air Fund. As a child, Jody's family in Connecticut hosted two Fresh Air children, a boy and a girl. When she and her family moved to Cohasset, a friend asked her to become a Fresh Air family, and she agreed.

In 2001, the Goldens hosted Jamaree Coram of Brooklyn into their home for two weeks. He quickly became part of the family and returns to Cohasset every summer, and even a few winter breaks.

The fire department's new Engine 2 is built to suit its evolving mission, beyond fighting fires. The truck will be outfitted with basic and advance life-support equipment.

There's a new truck in town

Fire department takes delivery of new engine

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Hello, fire truck.

The Cohasset Fire Department has purchased a brand new, custom-built, shiny red fire engine. The Pierce Contender Rescue Pumper is expected to be part of the town's vehicle inventory for the next 24 years.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia said the engine was made to Cohasset's specifications to ensure it would grow with the department and the ever-evolving role of the fire department.

"As the mission of the fire department changes, we have to adapt our equipment," Silvia said.

In the past the role of the fire department was largely to fight fires. Now, its role largely focuses on fire prevention, emergency medical services and hazardous material response.

"We need (our equipment) to hold the tools need for that mission change," Silvia said.

To that end, the new Engine 2 has more compartments than any previous Cohasset engine. The truck will be outfitted with basic and advance life-support equipment.

"It carries everything an ambulance does; it just doesn't transport (anyone)," Silvia said.

The truck holds 1,500 feet of four-inch hose and 500 gallons of water, and has room for four passengers. The engine meets all of the National Fire Protection Associations specifications, including the diagonal yellow striping on the rear of the truck.

One of the custom changes was to remove two seats from the usual six-passenger design to make room for the medical equipment. The compartments, one to hold the advanced life-support equipment and one to hold the basic equipment, are easily accessible in the front cab of the truck.

The side compartments also include touches to ensure the equipment the firefighters/EMTs need in an emergency is at their fingertips. One compartment includes a swinging pegboard with space to hang equipment on both sides. The storage space looks enormous without

Holly Hill Farm's Summer Outdoor Film Series will conclude Saturday, Aug. 28, with a showing of "A Chemical Reaction." This award-winning documentary is a story about the origin of the natural lawn care movement in Canada and the United States. It is also a tool for individuals and organizations interested in reducing and/or eliminating pesticides from the environment, especially around homes and schools.

The film will begin at 7:30 p.m., but people are invited to come at 5 p.m. for a "locavore" potluck dinner made from local ingredients. People are asked to bring recipes and register to fhhf@verizon.net. An indoor venue is available, so come rain or shine. Donations will be accepted to benefit The Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center that uses the farm as its outdoor classroom.

For directions or for information about the film, visit hollyhillfarm.org or call 781-383-6565. Holly Hill Farm is at 236 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset.

NephCure Walk at Wompatuck State Park

NephCure Foundation — the only nonprofit organization committed exclusively to support research seeking a cause for two potentially devastating kidney diseases, nephrotic syndrome (NS) and focal segmental glomerulosclerosis (FSGS), improve treatment and find a cure — is sponsoring the NephCure Walk at noon on Sunday, Oct. 17, at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham.

Last year, area families weathered a nor'easter and came out to raise more than $35,000 to fund research at Children's Hospital in Boston, Beth Israel Deaconess and Massachusetts General Hospital. Many families on the South Shore, including the Broderick family of Cohasset, have been affected by these diseases. There are no FDA-approved drugs for these chronic kidney diseases and no cure.

To learn more about the NephCure Foundation or to sign up to walk or volunteer, visit online at nephcure.org or call Kathleen Broderick at 781-383-6339.

Land protection along Weir River Estuary to be discussed

The public is invited to hear Steve Sloan, southeast region director for The Trustees of Reservations, and others talk about their role in land protection in the Weir River Estuary at the annual meeting of the Hull Land Conservation Trust at 4 p.m., on Sunday, Aug. 29, at the Estuary Center, 333 George Washington Blvd., in Hull.

Almost 80 percent of the close to 600 acres of undeveloped land along the Weir River Estuary has been protected. In recent years, efforts in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull have connected protected land.

Where Cohasset meets Hull along the end of Straits Pond across from Black Rock Beach, the Cohasset Land Conservation Trust paid the legal expenses that allowed it to receive a donation of land in Hull from the Winsor family. The conservation restriction on the land is held by the Weir River Watershed Association.

In Hingham, the most recent land protection efforts also include protection of wetlands on Rockland Street as part of the development along George Washington Boulevard and purchase of the Amonte meadow on Rockland Street using Community Preservation Act funds. CPA funds also protected the Cushing property along the Weir River between Foundry Pond and the TTOR Weir Farm.

In Hull, a private owner has donated land along the estuary narrows to the Wildlands Trust of Southeastern Massachusetts, and acquired the Straits Pond "island" and the hummock off the Weir River Woods for back taxes, and the Hull Land Conservation Trust has acquired of the Chatham Street property to protect habitat and provide an entrance to the Weir River Woods.

Water ban won't be enforced

Cohasset Water Department has imposed a mandatory water restriction for all customers effective Monday, Aug. 23. The move is caused by the continued lack of rain.

On Thursday morning, water commission Chairman Chris Seebeck said enough rain had fallen this week to possibly cancel the ban. As a result, the water department will not be enforcing the ban until the commission could meet sometime next week.

Under the restrictions, outdoor watering is allowed using handheld water devices only. The restrictions do not allow permanent irrigation systems or unattended sprinklers to be used. Irrigation systems are to be shut off immediately.

Under the department's rules and regulations, failure to comply with the mandatory restrictions will first result in a written warning. Subsequent violations can result in a penalty of $50 for the first occurrence and $100 for each subsequent violation.

Under the Massachusetts DEP Water Management Act, the Cohasset Water Department is only allowed to pump and average 950,000 gallons per day on an annual basis.

The department recommends several ways to use water wisely inside the home to help in the water conservation effort:

- Avoid running dishwashers and washing machines with partial loads.
- Repair all leaks.
- Turn off the water while shaving, brushing teeth and washing face or hands.
- Fill water jugs and refrigerate to avoid running the water to get it cold.

For information and conservation tips, call Cohasset Water Department at 781-383-0057 or visit the website at cohassetwater.org.

Home Instead SENIOR CARE®

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

A FRIENDLY REMINDER

Many seniors who have made the decision to "age in place" find themselves in need of companionship. In addition to assistance with daily chores, they look forward to weekly or daily visits from a friendly face. Some seniors feel that a request for visits is burdensome to their family. In some cases, the family lives too far away to stop by frequently. In such instances, a home healthcare aide can prove invaluable since he or she can offer not only practical assistance but companionship as well. Your home healthcare provider can "match" your senior loved one's personality and needs with a caring and compassionate aide who can spend quality time with the at-home client.

If your loved one could use a friendly face - for companionship or for help with daily tasks around their house - then you need to call our office today. We are proud to place compassionate and caring aides with our clients on a flexible schedule, whether they need full-time, live-in help or just occasional respite care overnight. We will offer simple companionship if that's all your loved one needs, but we can also provide assistance with grooming, bathing, cooking and dressing. Call 781-878-2994 to find out how our wide range of services can make life easier for you and for your loved one. We are located at 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

Stolen checks cashed at Stop & Shop

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset Police helped two local communities resolve a case involving a breaking and entering and false checks.

Back in July, the residence of a 73-year-old in Braintree was broken into and checkbooks were stolen. Over the past few months, the stolen checks have been cashed at more than one Stop & Shop location, including Cohasset and Braintree.

With the help of Stop & Shop's loss prevention department, the police were able to obtain video of the men allegedly cashing the checks. The suspects were recognized as being previously involved in a similar breaking and entering and stolen checks in Weymouth. Weymouth Police identified the suspects as David Donahue, 26, of Weymouth, and Charles Richardi, 23, of Weymouth.

Cohasset Police issued both men charges of four counts of cashing false checks, a felony offense; and four counts of larceny under $250. The total amount of the four stolen checks allegedly cashed at the Cohasset Stop & Shop location is $551.29.

"We were able to close our own case with the help of Braintree and Weymouth police departments," said Lt. Bill Quigley.

Missed turn, hit wall

Expired license

An officer on patrol Tuesday on Chief Justice Cushing Highway ran a registry check on a 2003 Dodge Intrepid. The license plate was hanging off a little bit. The registry check revealed the owner of the car, a 55-year-old female from Hull, had an expired license. The vehicle was pulled over in the Shaw's parking lot and the expired license was confirmed. The driver was issued a citation for unlicensed operation of a vehicle and the car was towed.

Stolen car recovered

On Tuesday, a 2006 Jeep Grand Cherokee was stolen from Union Street in Hingham. The owners reported the car stolen and Hingham Police Department put out a "BOLO" (be on the look out) for the SUV. A Cohasset officer on patrol spotted the vehicle parked at the Beechwood Ballpark. The officer watched the car for a couple of hours to see if anyone returned to it. No one did. The car was towed to Hingham Police headquarters for processing.

Unregistered

A 1999 Jeep Cherokee was pulled over near the intersection of Beechwood and Route 3A on Wednesday. The officer pulled the car over due to an expired registration sticker on the license plate. The driver, a 44-year-old female from Marshfield, was given a written warning for driving an unregistered vehicle. The vehicle was towed and the woman called for a ride.

Accident at Pond Street

Around 9 a.m. on Wednesday, there was a two-car accident at the intersection of Route 3A and Pond Street. A 2003 Chrysler PT Cruiser driven by a 20-year-old woman from Scituate was traveling southbound and rear-ended a 2009 Hyundai Sonata driven by a 44-year-old Cohasset man. The Sonata had stopped at the red light at Pond. The man was taken to South Shore Hospital by ambulance and his car was pulled into Brown's Auto Repair for safekeeping. The driver of the PT Cruiser was issued a citation for following too close.

Bridge jumpers

A group of youths who were jumping off the Border Street Bridge were told to move along after they trespassed on private property. The police department received a call from a Border Street resident about a group of eight to 10 youths in her backyard. She told the youths to leave, but they began arguing with her. Police arrived and the youths were told to leave the bridge area.

E-mail tip

An e-mail came through on the anonymous tip e-mail account about two alleged drunks in Beechwood Cemetery. Officers responded and spoke to two people they believe to be the subject of the e-mail. They were sent home.

Lt. Bill Quigley said the e-mail tip line is not the way to report crimes in progress. A 911 call, or a call to the police department's business line, is more appropriate. The e-mail tip line is not monitored at all times.

Two-car accident

A two-car accident occurred at the intersection of Beechwood and Route 3A. A 1996 Chevy van operated by a 40-year-old man from Plymouth was traveling southbound on Route 3A and looking to take a right onto Beechwood. At the same time, a 2006 Toyota Sienna driven by a 21-year-old woman from Scituate was headed northbound attempting to take a left turn onto Beechwood. The Toyota cut the Chevy off and the cars collided.

Both vehicles had to be towed from the scene and both drivers were transported to the hospital. The Plymouth man driving the Chevy was issued a citation for operating unlicensed.

Red light

An officer doing traffic enforcement on Sohier Street on Wednesday night observed a 1990 Toyota Corolla run a red light at the intersection of Ripley and Sohier streets. The officer ran a registry check, revealing the owner of the car, a 37-year-old from Hingham, was unlicensed. The car was pulled over and the driver was issued a summons for unlicensed operation and failure to stop at a red light. The car was towed.

Fight

A Cohasset father came to the Cohasset Police Station last Thursday to report his 13-year-old son had been in a fight with a 14-year-old Scituate boy on Government Island the previous day. The police sat both boys down with their parents to address the situation. The parents of the Cohasset boy did not want to press charges.

Kayak recovered

A resident of Jerusalem Road called to report a kayak had washed up on a private beach and she thought it could belong to the family that had reported a kayak stolen as reported in the Mariner. After some corroboration, police found it was the same kayak. Police believe the kayak floated off the beach and ended up further down on Jerusalem Road and was not stolen after all.

Off the road

Early Saturday morning, around 1a.m., the driver of a 1997 Volvo station wagon lost control of the car and ended up in someone's lawn on South Main Street. The car ended up resting on some bushes and appeared to have driven through a mailbox and wall. According to the report, the 19-year-old driver from Scituate told police he was driving 50 mph in the 30 mph zone. He was rushing to get home because he was past curfew.

The teenager refused transport to the hospital. He was issued citations for negligent operation of a motor vehicle, failure to drive in marked lanes, speeding and not wearing a seatbelt.

Propane fire

A propane tank for a grill on the back of a porch on Border Street caught fire last Saturday afternoon. The fire department responded and the fire did not go inside the house. Part of the siding was burned in the fire.

Speeding motorcycle

While doing traffic enforcement on Forest Avenue, an officer observed a 1993 red Honda motorcycle traveling over the speed limit. The motorcycle was heading southbound on Route 3A with a female passenger last Saturday afternoon.

The officer pulled the motorcycle over and found the 34-year-old man of Rochester, Mass., driving the motorcycle had his license suspended. According to police, it was not the first time the man had been pulled over after his license had been suspended. He was arrested for operating after suspension (subsequent offense), speeding and not having his driver's license in possession. The woman passenger was brought to the Hull police station to wait for a ride.

Package stolen

A resident of Forest Avenue returned from vacation and found a UPS package that had been delivered had been stolen. The resident told police she knew the package had been delivered because a friend left a phone message telling her she left an envelope with $90 in it with the package on her porch.

The incident is under investigation.

License suspended

On Sunday night, an 18-year-old in a 1988 Chevy pickup truck with no brake lights was spotted by an officer on Sohier Street. Registry checks showed the man's license had been suspended. He was arrested for operating with a suspended driver's license and operating with defective equipment. The truck was towed.

Tweaks to wind bylaw

Alternative energy committee sends draft to planning board

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The primary changes coincide with some of the major concerns brought forward during the public hearing process for the first wind turbine proposal in 2008 and 2009.

The topic of wind turbines is a timely one.

In recent years, wind turbines on the top of one of the highest points in Cohasset elicited much discussion from residents both for and against.

The same questions came up over and over. Where are these machines appropriate? What should they look like? Do they belong in residential areas? Are the impacts on neighbors and natural beauty worth the benefits of clean and affordable energy?

Since 2007, Cohasset has had a zoning bylaw in place to govern the permitting of wind turbines. There has been one application — a private developer with a proposal for two 100-meter turbines on a hill off Route 3A — under this bylaw, which the planning board denied earlier this year.

In the wake of the denial and all the concerns with the bylaw residents raised along the way, the alternative energy committee (AEC) has been conducting a public process about a possible rewrite. Earlier this summer, committee members held two public discussions on the wind turbine bylaw and then took the information gathered and incorporated it into a new draft of the wind turbine bylaw.

Andrew Willard, chairman of the AEC, said the committee made a few substantial — and more restrictive — changes to the bylaw and sent it to the planning board for further review. The primary changes coincide with some of the major concerns brought forward during the public hearing process for the first wind turbine proposal in 2008 and 2009.

"There were three big discussion points" during the first turbine application, Willard said, referring to noise, height and setback, which were brought up as concerns repeatedly. "All three points have been made more restrictive in the new (draft) bylaw."

The state regulation on noise — no more than a 10-decibel increase at the property line — remains in place, but the new draft also requires the wind turbine to not increase noise above ambient at any permitted residential building by more than eight decibels.

The current wind bylaw allows turbine towers of up to 100 meters, or 328 feet, to the hub. Under the new draft, the maximum height is lowered to 80 meters, or 262 feet.

To address safety concerns with the setback, the draft makes it more stringent. In the current language, there must be a setback equal to the height, including the turbines' blades, from the nearest residential property line. In the new draft, the setback is increased to 1.5 times the height of the turbine (including the blades) to the nearest property line and at least equal to its height to any structure or road that is not a part of the turbine's operation.

Additionally, to further protect residential buildings, a turbine can't be built within three times its height to the nearest existing residential structure.

The newly drafted height regulations align with the state regulations.

The AEC also clearly defined the expectations for flicker impact. Instead of reading there will not be "significant shadowing or flicker impacts," the new draft sets a clear guideline of not more than 30 minutes each day for all private structures within a half-mile of the turbine.

Willard also said discussion would continue regarding including something in the bylaw about providing an economic benefit to the town.

Although the AEC has completed its draft, the draft still has to make its way through revision and discussion with several other boards. Willard was not overly optimistic about having a new draft of the wind bylaw ready to go before November's special Town Meeting.

Willard said the AEC plans to meet with the planning board on Wednesday, Sept. 22.

"We've finished wording changes and have sent our draft to the planning board," Willard said.

Turkey Hill wind turbine project

The Trustees of Reservation are looking to place an 80-meter wind turbine on the Cohasset side of Turkey Hill. Last week, they held an informational meeting at the Cohasset Town Hall on the project. Although they have not submitted a formal application to the town, they are scheduled to have an informal meeting with the planning board on Wednesday, Sept. 1.

The alternative energy committee has met with the group as well, but its members do not feel they have enough information as of yet to take a position on the project. Sound and flicker studies are ongoing.

And DeCaprio makes three

Water commission gets third member

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Town Manager Bill Griffin said Peter DeCaprio was the only one to express interest in the water commissioner's position.

After nearly three months with just two members, the water commission is now a full board.

Peter DeCaprio, who has served on the capital budget committee, the budget planning group and the water planning group, stepped up to fill the void.

Selectmen and the two members of the water commission, Christopher Seebeck and Glenn Pratt, voted unanimously in favor of DeCaprio's appointment. DeCaprio will fill out the remainder of the year and the seat will be up for election in April.

In late May, longtime water commissioner John McNabb, who was in his fourth term, resigned from the board. During a special Town Meeting in June, residents addressed a $750,000 shortfall for fiscal 2010, which ended June 30, and passed a significant rate hike to get the water department out from a projected $1 million deficit in fiscal 2011. Although Town Meeting passed the measures to bail out the water department, many voters expressed a need for change and called for a closer look at past practices.

Given the state of controversy surrounding the water department and its troubled financial situation, the town manager's office was not flooded with residents interested in filling the position. In fact, Town Manager Bill Griffin said DeCaprio was the only one to express interest.

"Thank you for stepping in the so-called breach here," selectmen Chairman Karen Quigley said.

Selectman Paul Carlson, who also chairs the water planning group, said DeCaprio has been a very valuable member of that group. The appointed group was put together to come up with solutions, both short- and long-term, to get the water department back on track financially.

"(On the water planning group we) spent a great deal of time evaluating the water department's operations and finances. While the department suffered as much from an ill-timed wet summer in 2009 as much as anything else, our work on the water planning group also indicated that the department need additional resources with respect to financial planning and modeling," DeCaprio stated in his letter of interest for the position.

DeCaprio's full-time job specializes in utilities. The funds the company manages own large stakes in many different utilities — electric, gas, and water.

"I believe my familiarity with the utility industry and its operations could be useful to the department," DeCaprio wrote in his letter.

DeCaprio has sat on the capital budget committee, an appointed board, for about five years.

Selectmen vice-chair Ted Carr said he has been impressed that when the call goes out for a need in the community, "we find really capable people with really interesting backgrounds."

Sign up for Cohasset Day

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Every day is Cohasset Day if you live or work in this beautiful coastal town, yet Sept. 12 is officially the third annual Cohasset Day, and it promises to be a great one. Mark your calendar for a family day of fun, shopping, eating, parades, music and dancing in the streets.

The rain date is Sunday, Sept. 19.

A highlight of the day is a parade down Main Street, and it's open to all local organizations that would like to adorn their uniforms or their 02025 pride and march together for the sheer fun and camaraderie of it. If your Boy Scout or Girl Scout Troop, sports team or local organization would like to be part of the parade, please contact Cohasset Day chairman Tim Chamberlain at tchamberlain@kodaventures.com.

Join in the decorated bicycle parade. Each participant is encouraged to decorate their bike and ride alongside family and friends. For information, contact Beverly Bielewicz at beverly@paperscapes.biz.

Cohasset Day is designed to bring families to the village and Town Common for some old-fashioned fun. In addition to the parade, the day includes a fashion show, the third Cohasset Classic Car Concours, music all afternoon by Rusty Skippers, the Aldous Collins Band and featuring the Jackson Weatherbee Band. There will also be children's games on the Common, a special farmers' market, South Shore Center Art exhibit and historical society open houses.

Families can feed their appetites by purchasing tickets for Fine Foods Galore, a sampling from some 20 restaurants and local vendors. The food sampling costs $10 for individuals and $20 for a family. All other events are free. Proceeds of Fine Foods Galore will benefit Cohasset Elder Affairs and Cohasset Food Pantry.

Become a sponsor and showcase your business or organization at this lively event in the village. More than 2,000 visitors from Cohasset and surrounding towns are expected. For information, contact Pete Brown at pbrown@campanelli.com or Darilynn Evans at darilynns@verizon.net.

A full calendar of the day's activities will be included in upcoming Mariner articles. For now, mark your calendars for Sunday, Sept. 12, as the day we celebrate Cohasset!

Dead end for Cedarmere project

Forty-acre property is now being marketed

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"The project is absolutely dead as far as (developer Leggat-McCall) is concerned."
Al Moore

The stagnant building site of the proposed Cedarmere housing development, located just north of the Beechwood and Route 3A intersection, has been that way for more than three years, and the message at last week's planning board meeting was clear, according to Chairman Al Moore.

"The project is absolutely dead as far as (developer Leggat-McCall) is concerned," Moore said.

The 104-unit housing project on a 41-acre parcel between Route 3A and Beechwood Street was permitted more than three years ago. Site preparation began for the property and one house was built, but construction stalled when the real estate market soured. The condominium complex was set to include 27 units of affordable housing.

Mahmood Malihi, executive vice president of Leggat-McCall, came before the planning board to let them know the project was a dead end from their point of view. Malihi could not be reached for further comment.

Leggat-McCall is helping to market the site to other potential developers or owners. Moore said it was conceivable someone would buy the land and develop the permitted project, but he doubts it.

Leggat-McCall wanted to keep the planning board informed in case they saw something happening at the site, Moore said.

In April 2005, Leggat-McCall bought the 40-acre parcel, fully permitted, for $17-million. The developers have been before the planning board a handful of times over the past few years since construction was halted in 2006 due to a slow real estate market. At the time, the hope was the delay would be only a few months.

In June 2008, representatives from Leggat-McCall said the market and troubled economy had placed the project in a holding pattern. About a year later, they told the planning board nothing had changed substantially that would indicate it was time to move forward.

At different times, the planning board has pushed for the developers to do more, especially with the road construction and large dirt piles seen by neighbors and from Route 3A.

NephCure Walk at Wompatuck State Park

NephCure Foundation, the only nonprofit organization committed exclusively to support research seeking a cause for two potentially devastating kidney diseases, Nephrotic Syndrome (NS) and (FSGS), improve treatment and find a cure, is sponsoring the NephCure Walk at noon, on Sunday, Oct. 17, at Wompatuck State Park, Hingham.

Last year, area families weathered a nor'easter and came out to raise more than $35,000 to fund research at Children's Hospital in Boston, Beth Israel Deaconess and Massachusetts General Hospital. Many families on the South Shore, including the Broderick family of Cohasset, have been affected by these diseases. There are no FDA approved drugs for these chronic kidney diseases and no cure.

To learn more about the NephCure Foundation or to sign up to walk or volunteer at this year's Walk, join others from 7 to 8 p.m., on Wednesday, Aug. 25, at Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For more information about the NephCure Foundation visit online at Nephcure.org or call Kathleen Broderick at 781-383-6339.

Ten proud members of the Riley family cheered the runners on from the side of the road.

Boesky telling of love and loss

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset. Well, after a rather damp week with some much-needed rain, the summer weather has returned. Yeah! Make sure to get in some nice summertime fun at the beach, pool, out on the boat or whatever keeps you happy while enjoying family and friends and making those memories to hold onto for a long time to come! Make sure to send any celebration news, event information, vacation or summer news you may like to share, as well as any photos you would like to share. All items should be sent in no later than 5 p.m. on Tuesdays for that week's copy of the Cohasset Mariner!

HAVE LUNCH WITH BOESKY

Buttonwood Books & Toys on Route 3A in Cohasset is hosting "Lunch with the Author" on Friday, Sept. 17, at 11:30 a.m. Author Amy Boesky will be discussing her book "What WE Have: One Family's Inspiring Story About Love, Loss, and Survival," a memoir about her family's experience with hereditary breast and ovarian cancer. The author and her sisters come from a family in which many of the women have died of ovarian cancer at a young age.

All three sisters opted for the doctor-prescribed solution of preventative surgery before the age of 35, yet, despite this medical Sword of Damocles, Boesky's book is more than a retelling of her family's hardship. It is a narrative of love, warm family relationships and all the joys and unexpected challenges of daily life.

Amy Boesky is an associate professor of English at Boston College. She has degrees from Harvard and Oxford, and has written several books for children and young adults. Twenty percent of the book sales from the event will be donated to Journey of Hope: The Campaign for Healing, Caring and Comforting, a fund-raising program in support of South Shore Hospital's cancer care program. Advance reservations and tickets ($8 per person) are necessary. To reserve, please contact Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

SEE "A CHEMICAL REACTION"

The Friends of Holly Hill Farm's Summer Outdoor Film Series concludes this Saturday, Aug. 28, with a showing of "A Chemical Reaction." This award-winning documentary is a heart-warming, inspirational, human-interest story about the origin of the natural lawn care movement in Canada and the United States. It is also a powerful tool for individuals and organizations interested in reducing and/or eliminating pesticides from the environment, especially around homes and schools.

The film begins at 7:30 p.m., but you are invited to Holly Hill at 5 p.m. for a "locavore" potluck dinner. Please bring your recipe made from as many local ingredients as possible, and make reservations to fhhf@verizon.net. An indoor venue is available, so please come rain or shine.

Donations will be accepted to benefit The Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the non-profit education center that uses the farm as its outdoor classroom. For directions or additional information about the film, visit hollyhillfarm.org or call 781-383-6565.

That is the news for this week, and I am so looking forward to some news, photos, celebration info and wishes in the next few weeks. Make sure to send them all to me no later than 5 p.m. on Tuesdays.

Sewer flush has positive impact

John Beck, chair of the sewer commission, reported that the Aug. 20 flushing of the sewer main from Whitehead Road to the common was successful.

"The flushing has had a very positive impact thus far. There were no complaints of odors during and following the flushing of the line," Beck said in an e-mail.

A potassium permanganate solution upstream of the transition manhole, where the system goes from pressurized to gravity, oxidized the flushed contents before they reached the open manhole suppressing the odor.

Beck said more flushing may need to be done in the coming months.

"We will keep a close 'nose' on the situation," Beck said.

The odor canisters, one at each manhole, will be replaced with new chemicals on a two-week recurring basis to help contain any associated odors.

Cohasset family is host to NYC youths

The Golden family has also visited Jamaree, who is now 17, in his home in Brooklyn.

"We stopped hosting him through the Fresh Air Fund and now he just comes on his own," Jody said.

Last year, the Goldens met Fatou Doucoure, 10, who returned this summer for two weeks. Fatou lives in the Bronx. Her summer vacation has been packed with activity, including plenty of swimming and a trip to Vermont. Like Fatou and Jamaree, more than 65 percent of Fresh Air children get invited back by their host families year after year, summer after summer

"The primary reason for the Fresh Air Fund is to get kids out of the city and give them the opportunity to do some thing they might otherwise not do," Jody said.

One of the wonderful things about the Fresh Air Fund, Jody said, is you don't have to do anything but live your normal life. When her children were younger, they spent a lot of time at Sandy Beach and playing in the backyard.

"In general we don't necessarily do anything in particular," Jody said.

Jody said she does try to incorporate activities that focus on the visiting child's likes.

"Fatou in particular loves to swim, so we try to swim a lot," she said.

Last summer, they spent a lot of time in friends' pools, and this summer, they went swimming in a lake in Vermont. Fatou even got to try tubing and kneeboarding. She named the Vermont trip as her favorite part of the visit.

Fatou also gets the chance to have a pet — the Goldens have two Portuguese water dogs, Puck and Lucy.

Jody not only serves as a host, but also as co-chair of the Fresh Air program for the area with Kristen Giarrusso of Hingham. She works with prospective host families and current host families on the South Shore.

The Fresh Air Fund matches host families with a child. A host family can request a specific sex and age. For families thinking about hosting a child, Jody said one of the keys is to stay low-key.

"You have to stay flexible and be open-minded," she said. "It's about giving kids a chance to experience normal things we do and often take for granted. In New York, these kids aren't doing much outside the apartment or streets of New York."

Three firms interested in water audit

One of the clear directives following from the Special Town Meeting on the water department in June was to perform a complete financial and operational audit of the department.

A request for proposals (RFP) went out in July to solicit an agency to audit the water department's finances, capital spending program and operations. A RFP is a solicitation and outline of services the town is seeking.

The RFP calls for a 60-day turnaround from the date of hire, and the estimated cost is between $30,000 and $50,000. The Advisory Committee has pledged a portion of its reserve funds to pay for the audit.

Three firms responded to the RFP: Eric A. Kinsherf, CPA, of Bourne, Financial Advisory Associates, Inc. of Buzzards Bay and Melanson Heath & Company of Nashua, N.H.

In a letter to selectmen, Town Manager Bill Griffin discloses past associations with two of the companies. The president of Financial Advisory Associates, Michael Daley, was Griffin's finance director when he worked in the Town of Plymouth. Griffin hired Daley and they worked together for a number of years. Daley left Plymouth shortly after Griffin left in 1995 to form his own consulting company.

Melanson Heath & Company was the auditing firm that was used for the six years Griffin worked as town administrator in Dedham.

Astronaut Steve Bowen coming home

Cohasset's hometown astronaut, Steve Bowen, intends to make his way back to Massachusetts, back to the place he grew up, in November.

Selectmen vice-chairman Ted Carr, who has been communicating with Bowen, brought this to the attention of the rest of the board on Monday night.

"He's very interested in coming back to town and wants to return our flag," Carr said.

When Bowen flew on a 12-day space flight aboard the shuttle Atlantis in May, he carried the official Cohasset flag. During the trip, Bowen performed two spacewalks while Atlantis was docked to the International Space Station.

Bowen, who is also a highly decorated nuclear powered submarine captain in the Navy, has traveled to space twice. In 2008, he was part of the Endeavor crew, which also made repairs to the space station. On that trip, he went on three spacewalks.

Carr said he hopes to have Bowen recognized in some sort of public way while he is here. Bowen also plans to speak with the students at Cohasset schools, Carr said. He visited all three schools in February 2009.

Both Veterans Day and Special Town Meeting were named as possible events were Bowen could appear.

No cell-phone policy at selectmen

Selectmen Chairwoman Karen Quigley reported there have been several complaints of static interference on the televised meetings. Quigley said the static is likely due to the board's cell phones going off either for incoming calls or text messages during the meeting.

Quigley asked the selectmen if they would be willing to institute a no cell-phone policy during meetings. The other selectmen agreed.

If a selectman has to be reached during a meeting, the selectmen's office phone will be answered. Quigley also asked the audience members to adhere to the policy as well.

Police chief review postponed

Police Chief Mark DeLuca has been on the job for approximately six months and was scheduled for an update and review on Monday night. The chief and many members of the police department showed up for the meeting.

However, the television feed for the meeting was not working properly. Audio could be heard, but no video. Citing public interest in this agenda item, the board and DeLuca decided to postpone the discussion until another meeting.

The review will likely now take place on Monday, Sept. 13.

Hope is good-natured, but not overly fond of other cats.

Hope springs eternal

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is looking to find a home for Hope. Hope is a young, gray female. She had a litter of adoptable kittens and is now awaiting a home of her own. She's all gray and may very well be part Russian Blue. She is good-natured but is not overly fond of other felines and would prefer to be an only cat and receive all the attention.

You can visit Hope during open hours Saturdays from 2 to 3 p.m. and Mondays from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient or if you have any questions, please give Shirl a call at 781-925-3380. Check our other felines at hsar.org.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue offers a monthly low cost spay/neuter clinic. To take advantage of this, call Mary at 781-925-3121. If you'd like to volunteer for a two-hour per week shift, please call Nancy at 781-925-3628.

The shelter is at 50 L Street in Hull. If you'd like to make a donation, the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. Many thanks to all of our supporters including the Hingham Journal and the Cohasset Mariner.

Fire Chief Bob Silvia shows off the fire department's custom-built Pierce Contender Rescue Pumper. He expects the engine to service the town in various capacities for the next 24 years.

any equipment in it, but Silvia is certain that will change.

"We're going to fill it up the new one, I know it," he said.

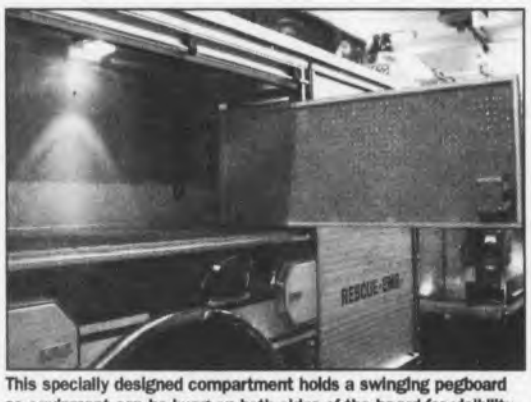
The new engine is expected to have a 24-year life — eight years as a front-line vehicle, eight years a secondary piece and eight years in a reserve role. Like all of the fire department's rolling equipment, the new engine will undergo both daily and weekly checks to ensure all the equipment is in working order.

"We try to really stay ahead on preventative maintenance to stretch the life of our vehicles," Silvia said. "We're very meticulous."

The rescue pumper's arrival has been months in the making, literally. Town Meeting appropriated $365,000 for the engine purchase earlier this year. The truck cost about $350,000, and the remaining monies will go toward outfitting the engine with all its equipment, Silvia said.

"We're spending the next month installing the equipment, pump training and driver training," said Silvia, who aims to have the new rescue pumper on the road and in service by the end of September.

Cohasset firefighters will be out and about on the streets in the coming weeks to ensure they are familiar with the feel of the truck and its controls.



Once the new engine is in service, the pumper that has been serving as Cohasset's reserve piece will be sold to Scituate, where it will continue to be used at the Humarock fire station.

Several members of the fire department traveled to the Pierce manufacturing plant in Bradenton, Fla., a month ago to inspect the truck. Another inspection took place after the truck made its way to Walpole, but all along the way, Pierce sent weekly photographic updates of the truck in progress.

"We have about 200 photos showing the development from day one to what you see now," Silvia said.

The rescue pumper holds 500 gallons of water at all times. This panel of controls helps the firefighters regulate the water while on scene at a fire.

This specially designed compartment holds a swinging pegboard so equipment can be hung on both sides of the board for visibility and easy access.

Sandy Beach has only been closed three other times since 2002. All of the closures occurred during storms.

Bassing Beach, the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Sandy Beach and Black Rock beach are tested weekly during the summer. The results are posted on the department of public health's website. Testing results for all sampling stations are available on the DPH website dating back to the summer of 2002.

Tradd was hopeful the beaches could be re-opened for the weekend after the re-sampling results came in.

To find out if the beaches are closed over the weekend, visit mass.gov/dph and click on beach water quality locator.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Fifteen minutes and beyond

Back in 1968, it was Andy Warhol who is credited with initiating the expression: "In the future, everyone will be world-famous for 15 minutes."

What he did not add was that some people are going to stretch that into hours, days and even weeks.

Here in Cohasset, one of our claims to fame is that we are now known for being the "snobby and arrogant" community that forced a $92,000-a-year teacher/administrator to resign after she posted unflattering comments about the parents and students on Facebook.

June Talvitie-Siple, former CHS program supervisor for the science and mathematics department, has continued to embarrass the town by talking to any media that will listen, including appearances on morning talk shows in New York.

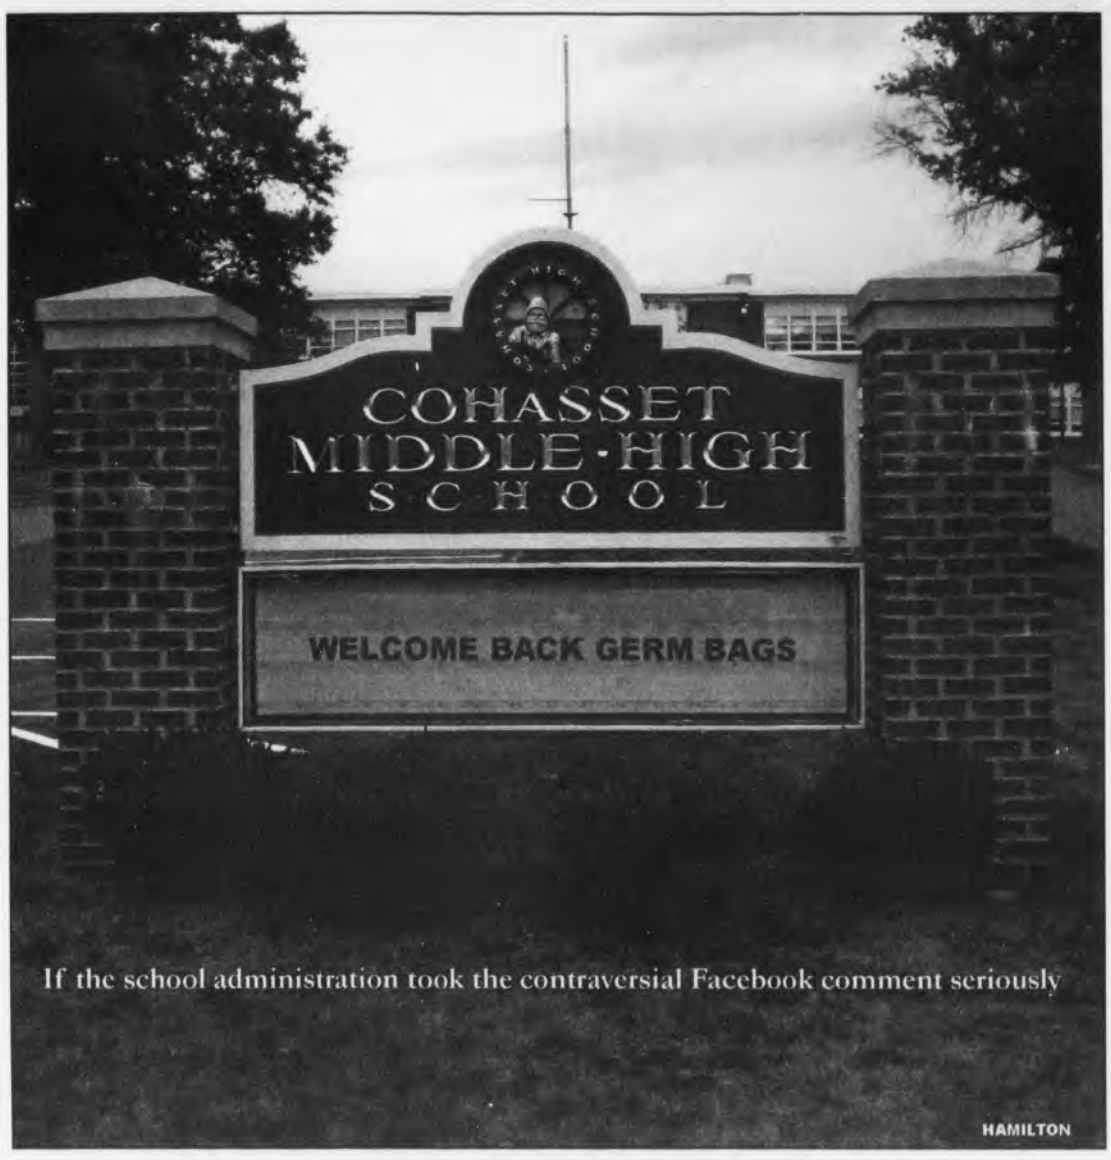
She has somehow morphed into becoming a "victim" — who says she worked 12- to 15-hour days and caught germs from all the "germ bags," ending the school year with pneumonia. And on top of that, she had to deal with all those snobby, arrogant parents and students who possess a sense of entitlement.

Siple is not getting any sympathy from us.

Siple taught two classes. If her classes were typical in Cohasset, then they probably were reasonable in size (number of students) and the students were likely highly motivated and ready to learn.

There are plenty of teachers out there who need work and might like to teach small classes in a nicely renovated building, in a small town, where parents and students are involved and care about education.

In fact, the way we figure it — that $92,000 salary could easily cover at least two teacher salaries.



Our Cohasset Mariner story on Siple's resignation has attracted a record number of comments from bloggers on wickedlocal.com/cohasset. Some bloggers have made valid points while others have been just as ridiculous as Siple.

One of the arguments in favor of Siple that we find the most outrageous is that she was exercising her "freedom of speech." A freedom, by the way, that she is continuing to exercise every chance she gets.

Yes, she was/is exercising her freedom on speech — but along with that freedom and basic right — is accepting the consequences of your speech.

In this case, trashing the school whose taxpayers were paying her generous salary resulted in her being sent packing.

If the school administration took the contraversial Facebook comment seriously

Protecting land in the estuary

WIER ESTUARY

JUDITH VAN HAMM

You are invited to hear Steve Sloan, Southeast Region director for The Trustees of Reservations, and others talk about land protection in the Weir River Estuary at the annual meeting of the Hull Land Conservation Trust at 4 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 29, at the Weir River Estuary Center, 333 George Washington Blvd., in Hull.

While estuaries rank along with tropical rainforests and coral reefs as the world's most productive ecosystems, none of the natural habitat along the Weir River Estuary was legally protected from development before World War II. The movement to suburbia that followed the end of the Great Depression and World War II created concern about protecting open space in Massachusetts, including along the Weir River Estuary.

Since 1945, many people in Hingham, Cohasset and Hull and beyond have worked to preserve the land along the estuary. The Weir River Estuary currently has almost 600 acres of undeveloped land. Almost 80 percent of it has been protected so far.

The first three places in the estuary where land was put into public ownership were the Weir River Woods in Hull and Foundry Pond and World's End in Hingham.

In 1949, the Rockaway-Nantasket Land Company conveyed the 10.5-acre Weir River Woods to the Town of Hull, probably for back taxes. The Weir River Woods is in the Rockaway Annex neighborhood, which was Jones Island until George Washington Boulevard was built through the salt marsh in the 1930s. The town expanded trails in the Weir River Woods using a Bicentennial grant in 1976. In 1983, Herbert G. Blackman gave 5.7 acres of woods and salt marsh at the edge of the town's portion of the Weir River Woods to Tufts University, which had been bringing geology students since the 1950s to study core samples of the ancient drowned forest in the salt marsh around the Weir River Woods. In 1986, the town portion of the Weir River Woods was further protected at Town Meeting by formally putting it under the conservation commission.

Conservation along the estuary began in Hingham in 1961 when the Sportsmen's Club donated the land around Foundry Pond to the Hingham Conservation Commission. The protected area around Foundry Pond now includes 26 acres.

In 1967, the Committee to Preserve World's End, chaired by Sam Wakeman, completed raising $450,000, the equivalent of $3 million in today's dollars, donated by more than 1,800 people. These funds enabled The Trustees of Reservations to purchase the 248-acre World's End reservation from the William H.C. Walker family. Walker's wife was Helen Brewer, granddaughter of John R. Brewer, who in 1855 purchased the original portion of what was to become the World's End Farm. Walker had held a dream of the land being put under conservation in spite of its consideration in 1945 as a site for the United Nations headquarters and in 1965 as a site for the nuclear power plant that was eventually built in Plymouth.

By the 1950s, the need for legal protection of natural resources at the local government level was well known. Massachusetts invented the municipal conservation commission. In 1957, Rep. John Dolan of Ipswich filed a bill in the Legislature that became the Conservation Commission Act. The new law enabled municipalities to establish conservation commissions through a vote of the local legislative body — Town Meeting or city council.

In 1972, the state Legislature passed the Wetlands Protection Act, one of the most important protections for the estuary. Under the act, no one may "remove, fill, dredge, or alter" any wetland, floodplain, bank, land under a water body or land within 100 feet of a wetland without a permit from the conservation commission.

In 1985, Bob Beal of Hingham, Kevin Conway and Ed McCabe of Hull and others worked together to have the Weir River Estuary designated by the state as an Area of Critical Environmental Concern. The Weir River Estuary ACEC includes 950 acres of water-sheet and land within the 100-year flood plain. Projects within an ACEC are reviewed with closer scrutiny through the existing state environmental regulatory and review framework to avoid or minimize adverse environmental impacts.

In 1996, the Rivers Protection Act was passed after many years of dedicated support from legislators and citizens across the state. The law creates a 200-foot riverfront area that extends on both sides of rivers and streams. The final legislation took a measured approach to environmental protection: work in the riverfront area is not prohibited, but applicants must demonstrate that their projects have no practicable alternatives and will have no significant adverse impacts. Existing structures such as single-family homes and accessory uses are exempt from the Rivers Protection Act. One result of the Rivers Protection Act in the Weir River Estuary was the creation of a 200-foot buffer along the estuary when the Avalon Estates apartments were built on the Hall Estate in Hull near West Corner.

This article is part of a series on protection of the Weir River Estuary by Judeth Van Hamm.

Greenbush trivia and a Jacobs Meadow update

Every once in a while, we take a brief, very unscientific survey of Greenbush ridership using the number of cars in the parking lot as a proxy for a count of riders. On Tuesday, Aug. 24, we took such a survey. As you can see from the accompanying table, it has been more than 18 months since we ventured into the Greenbush parking lot for a count of cars.

Several things come to mind from the data. First, the number of cars is a bit higher that it was in early 2009 at the last survey, which looks promising in terms of increasing ridership. This is especially true since the ridership is typically lower in the summer months due to vacations. Also, remember that the drop in the number of cars from earlier months to late 2008 and early 2009 was due in large part to the increased parking rates, when they were raised from $2 to $4 per day. Perhaps the new cell-phone pay method is making it easier for commuters to use the parking facilities.

We would expect that when schools reopen, the ridership might bounce up a bit more. We will plan to take another survey later this fall to see if our guesses are correct.

Greenbush ridership

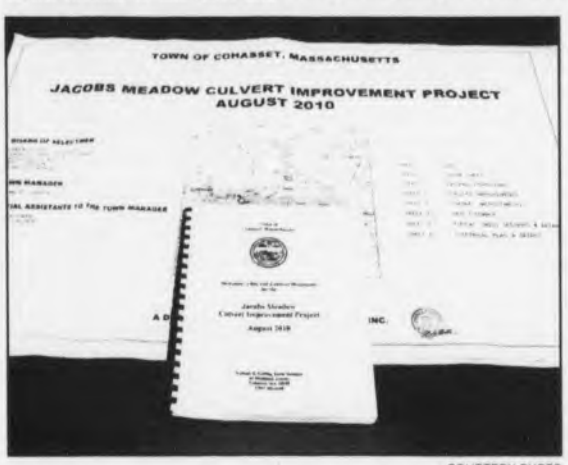
Jacobs Meadow project

We have spoken numerous times about the Jacobs Meadow outfall project, which has had a very prolonged gestation period. A number of events over the past 10- plus years have finally led us to this project. One of the more serious recent events is the current partial collapse of the culvert adjacent to the American Legion building. The culvert wall continues to fall into the streambed, reducing the water-carrying capacity of the stream.



Also, remember that Jacobs Meadow collects stormwater from as far north as Lower King Street, as far west as the medical complex on Route 3A, the Sohier Street hill and the hillside area near Pleasant Street and as far to the south as nearly to Beechwood Street. It collects a lot of water when we have rains like we have had this week.

An improved channel at the American Legion building will allow water to flow in each direction with much less resistance and with better control. This is the result of rebuilding the channel as a wider, smooth concrete-walled channel and also by removing the present three restrictive tide gates at the harbor. The "old" tide gates will be replaced with a single, fully controlled vertical sluice gate. The sluice gate, acting like a water faucet, will allow controlled flow in either direction, from zero to 100 percent of the channel flow capacity. So one of the benefits will be our ability to get more stormwater out of Jacobs Meadow when the tides are favorable. And we will be able to get substantially more saltwater back into Jacobs Meadow, which will encourage a healthier salt marsh. Of course, the controllability is extremely important to prevent flooding in the marsh when the salt water is being allowed to enter the marsh.

As of this writing, the plans and specifications have been completed by our engineers and they have been put out to bid. More than 20 contractors have picked up plan sets in preparation for bidding. Each bidder's information package contains seven pages of drawings and about 100 pages of specifications that describe the project requirements in detail and the bidder's obligations to the town.

On Thursday of this week, the contractors' bid responses will be opened at noon and the bid analysis will begin to determine who the contractor will be. (We are writing this on Wednesday, even though you will be reading these after the bids have been opened.) Since Bill Griffin, the town manager, is the chief procurement officer of the town, he will open the bids in a formal procedure and announce each bidder's name, whether they met the bidding requirements and their project cost. Then the bidder vetting process begins to make sure that the winning bidder is qualified as required under Massachusetts procurement rules.

After the successful bidder has been chosen, the contractor can order their materials and construction will be ready to start.

Youth rules at ASO

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

ROY HARRIS

Classical music.

If those two words conjure thoughts of stodgy, remote, "long-hair" playing, I think you'll be surprised with the approachable style of the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra. Youth rules at the ASO, the South Shore's own all-professional ensemble, and the excitement that their youthful energy brings is truly infectious.

That energy will be on display this Saturday, Aug. 28, at the ASO's traditional pre-season event: a 4 p.m. "Sunset at the Abbey" program featuring some of the orchestra's stars in chamber-music settings, playing their own favorites. This weekend, listen for the strains of ragtime master Scott Joplin, along with movie music by New England's own John Williams, and warm melodies from Chopin and from Bizet's "Carmen."

The scene on Saturday afternoon is Hingham's Glastonbury Abbey lawn — spread with picnic blankets and dotted with folding chairs. Then in a surprising twist, the air will fill with familiar '50s and '60s "classic rock" sounds, from the popular local group Border Road, with ASO players chiming in for good measure.

The classical music sampling at the Abbey offers a small-scale introduction to the ASO, which got its start in Hingham as a "civic orchestra," but since has gained a reputation as one of the area's top professional groups — in large part because of its fine young players.

The ASO has its share of veteran musicians, of course. But to an unusual degree, vets are surrounded by women and men from Boston's great music schools: talented students getting a head start on the major symphonic careers that lie before them. Maestro Jin Kim, himself in his 40s, relishes the sound he gets from these virtuosos-in-the-making. And that youthful feeling is one of the things that audiences say makes the ASO special.

Why do I call the ASO's music approachable? If you notice a flute solo soaring delicately in the middle of a symphonic piece, say — and you can sit close, if you want, since seating at ASO events is open — you're likely to notice the soloist glow with satisfaction as she moves into the next section. (And, at a casual post-concert reception, that soloist is likely to be personally congratulated by fans. It's that kind of environment.)

Don't get me wrong: I love going to Symphony Hall for Boston Symphony Orchestra performances, too. But rarely do I get the same intimate feel there. And then, there's that drive to the Quincy Center "T" station, or the $20 in-town parking charge, with the mad escape scene at concert's end. Contrast that with the laid-back enjoyment of an ASO performance. Plus, tickets are never more than $35. And for "Sunset at the Abbey" they're only $10.

The first taste of the full ASO concert treatment will be Oct. 16: Masterworks Opening Night at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center. Maestro Kim is preparing an American theme, with works including Aaron Copland's enchanting "Appalachian Spring Suite" and Antonin Dvorak's familiar Symphony No. 9, "From the New World." Lots of great solos there.

One last note: An ASO concert makes for a terrific intergenerational experience. High school students love this music, too. In fact, what better outing for a musical family could there be than seeing young musicians play timeless works?

Roy Harris, a Hingham journalist and author, recently became co-president of the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra board of directors. This marks the first of a monthly series of columns by the ASO. Its website is atlanticsymphony.org. For information or tickets, call 781-331-3600.

HEALTH NOTES

Use your head when wearing a helmet

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Recently, some unsettling statistics have begun to come to light about head trauma and brain injury. A disturbing trend of long-term brain damage is occurring to those involved in sports who wear head protection. Apparently, some present forms of head protection are proving inadequate to protect from various head injuries and long-term brain damage. The recent news about such events in sports prompts us to look into a more pervasive problem with those who regularly wear head protection, or should, when riding bicycles on our local streets or are engaging in sports requiring headgear.

The extremely large number of small (fewer than 200 participants) studies relating to brain injuries, as well as the use of data gathered from Web postings like those in Wikipedia relating to brain trauma, have given a vastly different interpretation to the character and scope of the effect of sports injuries on the thinking and behavior of the population of parents and others in towns like Cohasset. For example, many practitioners are citing early sports trauma as later causing ALS or Lou Gehrig's Disease, where only a few years ago, its cause was listed as unknown. Other examples abound.

It's therefore important to re-evaluate the use of defenses against injury such as padding and helmets as well as investigating actual effectiveness for their primary purpose — not as decoration carrying color advertisements for a team, but as protection against injury.

Few people would choose to ride in a car with no seat belts. How many rebellious youth ride on a bike without a helmet and perhaps drive without a seat belt? Helmets simply make sense in all riding conditions, particularly since at least 21 states carry laws requiring them.

Helmets have grown style-conscious, often provide ventilation and generally weigh little, beggaring an excuse for not wearing one. Cycling helmets come in three basic styles: sport, road and mountain. Economical models work well for commuter, road and mountain bikers as well as skateboarders and inline skaters.

Some helmets include visors and more extensive rear-head coverage. Special retention systems provide a firm and secure fit on rough terrain. A good fit is vital. To determine your size, wrap a flexible tape measure or a string or ribbon around the largest portion of your head — about one inch above your eyebrows. Measure the length of string with a ruler or yardstick. Look for a helmet that matches your measurement.

Adjust the fit buckle and tighten the chinstrap. Adjust straps around both ears to achieve a comfortable fit. Finally, with the chinstrap buckled, open your mouth. Don't tighten the strap excessively and create discomfort. Most helmets made of expanded polystyrene foam contain vents to enhance wind flow.

Straps should be easy to get in and out of — beefy for rough terrain and mountain trails, lighter and cooler for road racing. Try a couple of different systems before you decide on one.

Some helmets come with a strap design that accommodates lots of hair, and many have a sun visor.

If your helmet includes an owner's manual, read it before the first ride.

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

Once upon an Aztec time in Mexico, chocolate was not sweet candy but a bitter drink, often mixed with spices like cinnamon and cloves, sometimes with pepper or even the ground bones of ancestors. Considered both intoxicating and an aphrodisiac, chocolate was the favorite brew of Emperor Moctezuma who drank it all day long and always sipped from a golden goblet before entering his harem.

According to legend, their chief god, Quetzalcoatl, traveled to earth on a beam of light, carrying with him a cacao tree stolen from the Garden of Life. He showed the Aztecs how to roast and grind dried cocoa beans over a fire, then crush them into an aromatic paste to dissolve in water. Chocolatl, as they called it, was intended only for rulers and soldiers because it enhanced vigor and strength. The consolation for commoners was the god's promise that after death there would always be chocolate.

Unfortunately for Quetzalcoatl, however, the other gods punished him for introducing the sacred food to mere mortals. He was banished, but promised to return in the distant future. In 1519, when Spanish Conquistador Hernan Cortes arrived, fulfilling the god's prophecy, he was served chocolate in a goblet of gold. In one of his letters to King Charles V, he later described the sacred beverage as "the divine liquid that builds up resistance and fights fatigue. A cup of this precious drink permits a man to walk for a whole day without food."

The Spanish court went mad for chocolate. Cloistered monks sweetened the drink with sugar cane and vanilla (although some preferred only pepper and cloves) and wisely kept its production a secret for almost a century. Chocolate was often mentioned in stories and songs. One love ballad yearns for "that blissful morning when chocolate will be brought to both of us in bed."

Like most secrets concerning cherished goods, discovery was inevitable. News of chocolate spread to the French court when the Spanish princess Anne, who simply could not endure a day without her chocolate, married Louis XIII of France in 1615. The French court adopted the new drink with great passion – and indeed, it was widely believed that chocolate encouraged prowess in the boudoir. Even the prodigious Italian lover Casanova mentioned in his memoirs that chocolate was as useful to seduction as champagne.

During the 17th century, the popularity of chocolate soared. French doctors pronounced it a "noble confection, the true food of the gods." Cardinal Brancaccio of Rome reassured the devout that during Lent, "cups of chocolate do not break the fast." In England, renowned physician Henry Stubbe, advised that "one ounce of chocolate was loaded with more nourishment than a pound of meat." One popular ditty in praise of chocolate promised: "'Twll make Old women Young and Fresh; Create New Motions of the Flesh, And cause them long for you know what, If they but taste of chocolate."

More chocolate next month…

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

ROB LAWRENCE

Editor's note: Sandy Beach Happenings are provided by the Sandy Beach Association.

We have had one fantastic summer. The weather could not be any better! Sandy Beach has been a very busy place this summer. The bathhouse is newly painted with a beautiful seascape mural. The beach has seen many family picnics, a few weddings, many Wiffle Ball games, a wayward fox and endless days of sunshine, reading and family time sitting by our beautiful shoreline.

The Trustees and employees of the Sandy Beach Association work tirelessly throughout the spring and summer to clean and maintain the beach for everyone to enjoy throughout the summer. Every spring our one-time annual beach cleanup brings our beach back to its sandy splendor through raking, burying and removing the accumulated seaweed from the winter (approved by the Conservation Commission). This removed seaweed is recycled at local farms and landscapers and processed into organic compost. In addition, our young Beach Maintenance Workers rake the beach daily for trash and seaweed.

Our lifeguards this summer have been very active in advanced training sessions and constant monitoring of our busy waters. Our alert guards have assisted a few struggling swimmers this summer continuing our excellent safety record.

The Sandy Beach Association does not receive funds from taxes or all-facility stickers. The funds used to clean, maintain and staff the beach are sourced through private fundraising in our annual spring mailing.

We simply ask if you have enjoyed the beach this summer – taken a swim, enjoyed a picnic, used the bathhouse, read a book would you consider a donation to the Sandy Beach Association

Traditionally, the citizens of Cohasset are generous and supportive of this cause. We see donations of all levels and are grateful for every dollar! Thank you all who have donated already.

We simply ask if you have enjoyed the beach this summer – taken a swim, enjoyed a picnic, used the bathhouse, read a book would you consider a donation to the Sandy Beach Association? We will run an ad in the Mariner the week after Labor Day thanking all of our contributors for this summer. Please consider adding your name to our donor list. Contributions can be sent to SBA, P.O. Box 285, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Thank you to all! Let's enjoy some August sunshine.

Even Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi, even with her signoff on $450 million that could have been a foot in the door for racino aspirants to muscle their bill through this year, did not stop the shuttering of Wonderland.

Remember when Sal DiMasi was going down and everyone thought the State House was bugged all over, which it may have been?

Well, if the capitol is now, or has ever been, lousy with listening devices, the folks on the other end were mightily disappointed last week, as there were lot of echoes and folks either reminiscing about their recent vacations, waxing for their imminent vacations or actually on vacations.

Those vacations are permanent for 85 former Wonderland workers, pink-slipped last Thursday as the dog track ended 75 years of operations, less than a day after Wonderland president Richard Dalton professed "guarded optimism" about the track's future. Imagine what Dick's unguarded pessimism is like.

Little known fact about Massachusetts gambling and the echelons of national politics: Charlie Sarkis, the Wonderland owner and Boston restaurateur who once roused a dying waiter from his hospital bed with gruff instructions to pick up a shift, was college sweethearts with Nancy Pelosi, as in Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi. She was at Trinity College in Washington while Sarkis was at Georgetown. Her dad was mayor of Baltimore; his was, allegedly, a terrific bookie. It was the Sixties.

But even Madame Speaker, even with her signoff on $450 million that could have been a foot in the door for racino aspirants to muscle their bill through this year, did not stop the shuttering of Wonderland. House Democrats, Republican gubernatorial candidate Charles Baker, and Independent treasurer and third-place Corner Office hopeful Tim Cahill pinned the job losses on Patrick, who went promptly to his ace in the hole and said, hey, I've got a three-casino bill in the House. Just sitting there. All cute and job-creating.

This is why the choreography of the final days of formal sessions were important and why the days immediately after July 31 bore watching for the tactics utilized by the principals, when it became apparent that their Best Alternative To No Agreement was figuring out how to stick the other side with the political tab. That whole "cost of inaction" thing.

And even with all that, the optics, as it were, turned out lousy, old ladies outside Wonderland telling TV viewers they wanted to tell the governor, "Thank you for helping me lose my job." And House floor leader and former Wonderland employee Kathi-Anne Reinstein, who was just an absolute quote machine last week, went off the top rope, describing herself as "disgusted," saying, "Thank you for that, Governor Patrick. You can't say you didn't see it coming."

Here's another little known fact, and a big reason behind why legislative Democrats are smiling in the face of the national anti-incumbent tide, although another one is the GOP's bench sadness: if you were a Massachusetts state senator over the last 16 years, you were three times more likely to be indicted than you were to lose a re-election bid.

Let that one sit for a second.

The Commonwealth, despite deep misgivings fueled by an inchoate suspicion that it's getting screwed and royally, likes and protects its incumbents, which is part of why the last governor to lose a re-election bid was Ed King (1982) and the last members of Congress bounced were Peter Torkildsen and Peter Blute (1996), Republicans swept under in the Clinton/Kerry wave.

So Baker and Cahill and Green-Rainbow candidate Jill Stein are battling history as well as the governor and the gentleman currently vacationing on the Vineyard.

The vista from Edgartown does not include a range of wind farms, but it could soon, and Patrick's support for that project was the insertion point for daggers from all three. Baker and Cahill said ratepayers shouldn't have to pay the higher electricity costs associated with the project, while Stein hit the governor for pocketing campaign contributions from utilities, energy companies and Cape Wind officials.

Differing interpretations extended also to the jobs report from July, which showed the state netted more than 13,000 jobs, its heftiest monthly gain in 20 years, good news for Patrick, but it couldn't shave the unemployment rate below 9 percent, bad for Patrick. His political inoculation effort continued, ripping Baker's critiques of his fiscal and economic policies as, essentially, cheers for failure, what Patrick last Friday called "a strategy that, you know the worse off all of us are the better off it is for him politically."

"The governor can say what he wants, but the bottom line is most small businesses I talk to don't feel any recovery, and many of them are just hanging on," Baker shot back on "Tom and Todd," featuring New Hampshire native Joe Battenfeld. "And they're well aware of the fact that Massachusetts has been raising taxes for the past four years. They're well aware of the fact that the state faces huge fiscal problems this year and next year. And they're also very tuned into the fact that the governor's basically said he won't rule out raising taxes to solve the budget deficit next year."

Making sense of the panoply of data on the state's economic condition is not easy. Every time there appears to be an unalloyed helping of terrific news — 13,000 jobs! Hiring activity in the private sector! Capitalism at work! The pickaxes and torches are turning around! — along comes a dose of downbeat intelligence, such as last Thursday's report that new jobless claims nationally had hit 500,000. While the state in key metrics is outperforming the country as a whole, since nationwide trends can be a tell for coming local developments, you don't want to go getting all "mission accomplished" on the economy.

TCM, back in pinstripes — Roger Clemens, 192-111 in a Red Sox uniform and memorably tagged "Texas Con Man" by the late Boston Globe columnist Will McDonough, has been indicted for perjury after allegedly lying to Congress that he didn't take steroids when he played for the Blue Jays and Yankees. Unknown is whether he'll face charges for mailing it in his last four years in Boston, punking out on the team and blowing up like a Macy's float.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call reports local senators' roll call attendance records for the 2010 session through August 20.

The Senate has held 227 roll call votes. Beacon Hill Roll Call tabulates the number of roll calls on which each senator was present and voting and then calculates that number as a percentage of the total roll call votes held. That percentage is the number commonly referred to as the roll call attendance record.

Only 13 of the Senate's 40 members have 100 percent roll call attendance records.

The worst roll call attendance record belongs to Sen. Benjamin Downing (D-Pittsfield) who missed 43 roll calls (81.1 percent roll call attendance record).

Rounding out the top five worst are Sens. Steven Panagiotakos (D-Lowell) who missed 31 roll calls (86.3 percent attendance); Frederick Berry (D-Peabody) who missed 29 roll calls (87.2 percent attendance) and Robert O'Leary (D-Barnstable) and Susan Fargo (D-Lincoln) who both missed 22 roll calls (90.3 percent attendance.)

LOCAL SENATORS' 2010 ROLL CALL ATTENDANCE RECORDS

The Senate has held 226 roll calls in 2010. The percentage listed next to the senator's name is the percentage of roll call votes for which the senator was present and voting. The number in parentheses represents the number of roll calls that the senator missed.

ABANDONED BOATS (H 4953) - Gov. Deval Patrick signed into law this bill streamlining the process for removing abandoned boats from public waterways and the process for acquiring title to those vessels. The new law allows cities and towns or private property owners to claim ownership of a boat after certifying it has been abandoned for at least 90 days.

Supporters say that under current law, removal of these boats often goes through the court system and takes years and thousands of dollars to complete. They note that these abandoned vessels occupy much sought-after berths, create hazards for other boats and sometimes are used for drug trafficking and other illegal activities.

CERTIFY COMMUNITY HEALTH WORKERS (H 4692) - The Senate approved a bill that would create a board to certify community health workers. The House has approved a different version of the measure. The Senate version now goes to the House for consideration.

Supporters said the measure would ensure that these workers are properly trained. According to the website of the Massachusetts Association of Community Health Workers, certification would "reduce health care costs, improve health outcomes, address health disparities and improve the effectiveness of chronic disease management efforts."

REQUIRE PROMPT PAYMENT (H 4721) - Gov. Patrick signed into law legislation that requires private construction project general contractors and owners of projects costing more than $3 million to pay their contractors, subcontractors and material suppliers within 90 days after their work begins.

Supporters said current law is too broad and often results in long waiting periods for contractors and subcontractors to be paid. They noted that these companies have to buy their supplies upfront and argued that the delays create an unworkable cash flow problem that has already put many of them out of business.

NATIONAL GUARD (H 1145) - The governor signed into law a measure designating the City of Salem as the birthplace of the National Guard. Supporters note that the Guard has its origins dating back to 1636 on Salem Common. They said the designation honors the countless patriots who have served in the Guard in Massachusetts and across the nation.

FUNERAL PROCESSIONS (S 1884) - Gov. Patrick signed into law a bill establishing regulations that cars in and out of a funeral procession must follow. The new law requires all vehicles in the procession to have their headlights and tail lights on and prohibits them from driving more than 55 miles per hour on highways or faster than five miles per hour below the posted speed limit on all other roads.

The law would require pedestrians and operators of non-funeral related vehicles to yield the right-of-way to any vehicle that is part of a funeral procession. Other provisions prohibit non-funeral vehicles from joining a funeral procession in order to get the same rights as the vehicles in the procession.

Arbeitsdienst

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Series of memoirs

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a series of memoirs by Cohasset resident Rosmarie Engel-Conn. The 83-year-old German native has penned her most vivid memories and experiences as a teenager during World War II.

This year is the 65th anniversary of the end of World War II.

Germany 1944 — I had to serve my country for one year in the Arbeitsdienst — translated: work-service-duty. I was just 17 years old.

The war was in its last phase, unsuccessful and frightening, overshadowing everything.

It was a camp in Wurzen/Saxony, my first location, where I was confronted with the strong rules, by living in a group under harsh, so far unknown working conditions and where my personal lifestyle changed totally. I was forced to adapt the strange situation as an "equal under equals," to overcome the new life.

For six long, hard weeks I lived in this camp in Wurzen, when suddenly, together with some other girls, I was transferred to another location. Without explanation, we were transported by train, not knowing, where we would end up — and not knowing also, what unexpected surprise awaited us, after the bitter weeks we had to go through.

On a fresh morning we left the train at a small remote railway station. We walked nearly 30 minutes on narrow paths through fields and green meadows, when suddenly, in front of us and aside of a small village, a beautiful old castle appeared. Built of a pale brown thick stonewalls, with a strong round tower.

It was not a big and demanding castle, which arose amidst tall old trees in a park-like surrounding, in which we even spotted a charming little pond.

Was this a dream-appearance-or should this be our destination? Our new home?

I, always interested in history and antiques, delighted by ancient buildings, could barely trust my eyes! I became excited! After the hard first weeks in the Arbeitsdienst — now this extraordinary change of location!

What a wonderful, unexpected surprise! And really, we approached the castle, which reminded me of so many tales, I read before. It was Schloss Pomssen, near Leipzig in Saxony, built in around 1540 which — with pride — we called home for the coming months.

In two huge ballrooms we found our rural, wooden bunk-beds standing on elegant parquet floors, tall gold-framed minors hanging over big fireplaces in each of the two rooms, beautiful old ornamented wall covering – it was overwhelming! Looking through the high tall windows, we had an outstanding view into a little park.

My heart was beating fast — I couldn't believe all this — after the threatening, primitive life I had behind me!

We were allowed to explore the round tower — similar to little dogs, sniffing around in a new territory, excited, we climbed up the rounded stone stairs. Thick walls aside of us showed narrow embrasures instead of windows, under which small stone seats were hewn in the walls.

Ancient armors were hanging on the walls of the two rounded rooms of the tower and pale colored stone tiles covered the floors. They had long ago lost their original color under the use over centuries. Obviously the tower was the oldest part of the castle — and I was deeply touched when I read, carved in the stone over a door: Anno 1540.

But, the big question — where were the bathrooms for us girls? So far I only had seen a small room with a freestanding iron tub — old fashioned, probably reserved for our leaders.

Now we were led down a wide ancient stone staircase to the basement of the castle. First we entered the huge kitchen, under vaulted ceilings — with small, iron-barred windows. Centered in the middle, a big stove demanded attention, and many wooden shelves covered the thick untreated rough stonewalls.

But again, I asked myself where were our bathrooms? And now, we were really taken back to medieval times!

In two following cellars, vaulted ceilings also, and with cobble-stone-floors – we entered our "bathrooms," or better: "cleaning facilities."

There were flat, long wooden benches supplied with grey enamel bowls! No showers, no tubs. Big wooden barrels filled with water aside. We looked at each other with wide-open mouths!

But I didn't care — I even loved it. So romantic and back in time — an adventure — unexpected!

This good feeling was even topped the next day, when I approached my new workplace. It was a big, very old stone building amidst high stonewalls, and I felt little, when I entered it, passing through a huge wooden portal. As I learned later, my farmer's ancestors had lived and worked since centuries at this place in the center of the village. The property, formerly an inn, provided passing travelers, in coaches and on horses, with food and shelter. I discovered still simple paintings on the walls in one of the stone barns, which obviously had served as a kind of dancehall, because there was a small wooden balcony above, where musicians assembled, to entertain the people of the village during festive gathers. So charming, so touching! I was delighted. And not only by the ancient surrounding, but by the farmer family also.

After introducing myself, we checked each other cautiously, they handled me so friendly and open – and I did my very best to satisfy and to please them. All was strongly built in the main house and full of tradition. The beautiful big square wooden table, an antique treasure, with all the marks of the use over centuries in the huge kitchen. Every day I served the dark brown rye soup on it, for the old farmer, in a beautiful painted ceramic bowl. The younger farmers of the village, were all serving as soldiers at the battlefields in France, Russia, Italy and Africa so help was very necessary and appreciated. But the daily work was hard, strange and exhausting. This was another world, I was thrown in suddenly — and I had to master it, there was no way out, or any excuse.

Nearly all was done by hand in the fields, during the harvest — spending all the days outdoors, in rain, without protection or under the hot sun, in dust and sweat, a lot of sweat!

I was shorter than the tall, heavy golden-colored rye bundles I had to collect, bind together and put straight on the fields for drying in the air. But my size came handy on the other side, when I had to bend down for hours following the long seemingly not ending rows in the ground to pick up brown potatoes, covered with soil, shaking them, to remove their green. And suddenly, there was the thin bell sound of the little village church. How happy and cheerful I was then — a rest was in sight! I wiped my hands on the cornflower-blue linen dress, which was now my daily uniform. But where was the bicycle? I spied around and really, always in time at 12 o'clock, the farmer's youngest daughter came along, dangerous staggering on her bicycle, on the narrow soil-path between the fields. She came to provide us with a well-earned lunch — and a well-earned rest.

In the big basket, she had balanced on her bicycle; all was covered with fresh kitchen towels. No paper, and no plastic was used in the country. All was served on enamel or wooden boards, the shape of the bread baked in this region, near Leipzig, was a round and huge — so were the bread-slices, we ate, big also. All was hefty and satisfying — despite the war, the farmers still had the food they needed. I spied for the potato-salad – the good German potato salad, so refreshing in the heat!

We all were sitting on the ground, shaded by a tree. There was not much talking, everybody was hungry and thirsty — and most of all, needed a rest.

After finishing lunch, some of us country workers, laid flat on the straw-covered soil mostly in the shape of a "snow angel," stretching all four limbs out. Watching them, made me smile. I had seen exactly the same behavior and gestures on the paintings by Pieter Breughel, a famous Flemish painter, on them, he depicts with his brush the simple life in the country at his time, around 1470.

So, it seemed to me, nothing had changed much since then. But when, after an hour, all the enamel plates, cups and kitchen towels were collected in the basket, our hard work had to be continued for some hours.

There were barely machines used, no gasoline available — wartime. So, the work itself reflected in a way the ancient living in the old walls and buildings.

After spending the whole day at the farm, I returned dirty, tired, hungry to the castle in the evening, where the dinner waited.

This was my daily routine, rain ore shine, hot or cold!

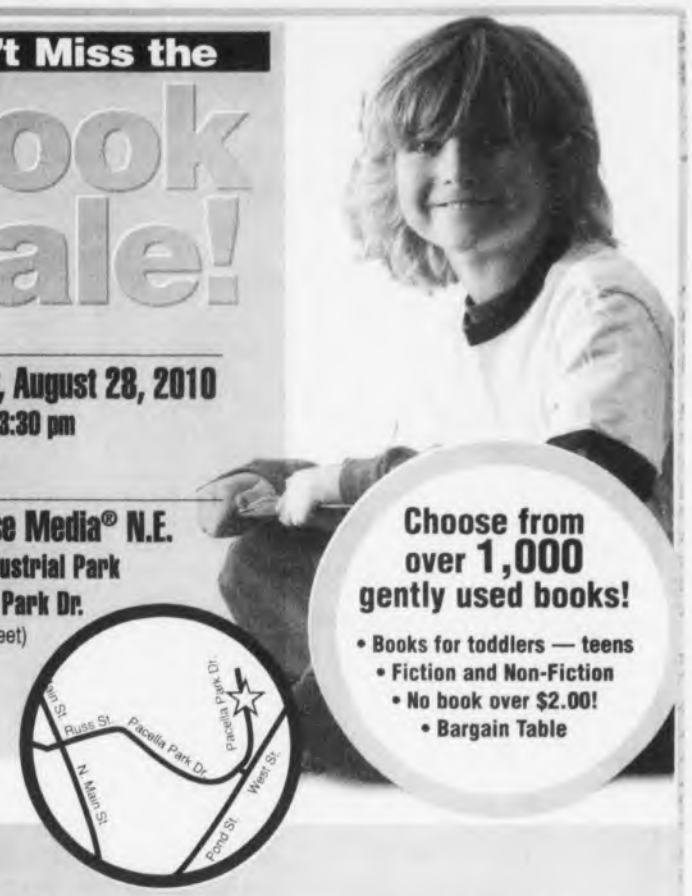
After a while I noticed that our leaders made friendly or unfriendly decisions, where to send the individual Arbeitsmaids. For instance, seemingly spoiled or lazy teens ended up at the poorest farms in the village, where they had to do the dirtiest jobs. So, an educational or punishing purpose was always involved in the decisions under which we lived and had to work.

Following the harvest in the fields was the harvest of the various fruit. My father's orchard had a green lawn and was surrounded by thick stonewalls, I always felt like being in a "secret garden". There were many old apple and plum trees, even the taste of the apples was unknown to me and like from bygone times, I loved everything! For half a day I sat outdoors in the court — aside of big heaps of prunes, removing their pulps. The prunes were supposed to be cooked in a huge, round copper bowl — usually used for washing cloths — over a fire. For another half day I was standing aside of it, with a high red face — hot — sweating in my thick woolen socks and the hiking boots, and was continuously stirring the "Pflaumenmus," prune-butter with a huge wooden washing spoon — nearly my size. The Pflaumenmus sweetened and thickened itself — going through the long procedure. Nothing was added. It was made this way since centuries and became the much needed food supply or the coming winter, stored in big old, rounded stone containers.

But now and then — sparsely, there was also an entertainment in the Arbeitsdienst. One morning, before breakfast, it was announced, that a group of young officers — on their way to be transferred to the Russian war front were supposed to spend the evening with us girls. A party! How exciting! And we were asked, who would be willing to contribute to the entertainment. Full of enthusiasm I raised my arm and was allowed to take a day off from work, to think about something, how to entertain the guests. I got the idea to write a story, which would introduce the female and male young people to each other. So I sat down, the two family name lists in front of me, in one of the round tower rooms and looked out on the green park, with the old trees feeling inspired and good.

My idea was, when everyone was assembled, I would read my story — and hearing his name everyone had to get up as a kind of introduction of himself. The story turned out to be funny and there was much laughter — all was well accepted. Despite a kind of shy behavior on both sides, addresses were exchanged, everyone danced and seemed to enjoy the unusual party. Sadly enough, nobody new then, how many of these fresh, good looking cadets would survive the war, which was ending half a year later.

The time passed by. We got now all bad, sad news of unsuccessful fights, the retreats and terrible bombardment of Berlin. It was a hard time for everybody. I had to say farewell to my farmer's family, because I was close to my transfer to Dresden. There, working in an ammunition factory, I would finish the last part of my duty in the Arbeitsdienst.



Looking back in time — to the day I write this, just 65 years ago — the nearly yearlong service in which the strong will of the "Fuhrer" Adolf Hitler had pressed me, evokes a kind of bittersweet memories.

I am still shocked, remembering the unbelievable harsh first six weeks, where my lifestyle changed under pressure and hard regulations. But the following months were so full of pleasing circumstances and surprises – they even smoothed the memories of the hard, unknown work which had to be done then — day by day.

I couldn't complete my full year of duty. One night of horror, angst and fear of death in Dresden, in February 1945, put not only a sudden end to my service in the Arbeitsdienst but wiped out the institution Arbeitsdienst itself — forever.

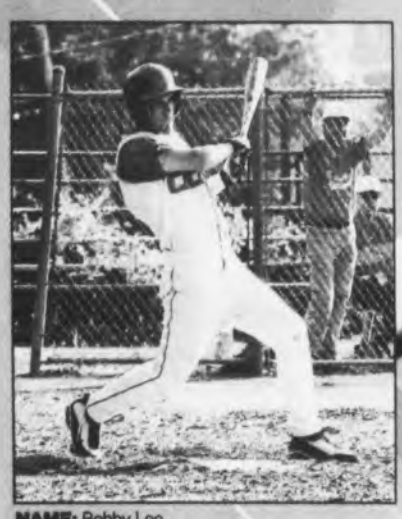
NAME: Matt Savard
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Duxbury
STATS: Savard led the Green Dragons in several offensive categories. The power-hitting second baseman batted .438 with four home runs, 21 RBI, 11 doubles, 35 hits, and 27 runs scored.

NAME: Pat McWilliams
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Duxbury
STATS: Right up there with teammate Matt Savard, Duxbury senior Pat McWilliams had a monster year at the plate. He hit .410 with 32 hits, a team-high six home runs, 33 RBI, and 24 runs scored.

NAME: David Gibson
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Hanover
STATS: While he didn't have a no-hitter this season, like he did last year, Gibson did throw a one-hitter and was one of the most reliable pitchers in the area. In his biggest game of the season, Gibson came through big-time with a complete game, four-hit shutout over Case in the Div. 3 South Sectional semi-final, a 1-0 victory. He'll be headed to Southern New Hampshire in the fall.

NAME: Ian Campbell
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Abington
STATS: A catcher is the leader on the field and Campbell was the leader of this bunch of overachievers who came close to advancing to a second state championship. He is not only smart on the ball field, he is an honor roll student in the classroom at Abington

NAME: Jeff Blout
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Duxbury
STATS: The question wasn't, what could Jeff Blout do, it was what can't he do? The senior pitcher was on fire this season, going 8-2 with 111 strikeouts with a 0.58 earned run average in 72 1/3 innings pitched, leading the Dragons all the way to the Division 2 state finals. The Wesleyan-bound Blout wasn't too shabby at the plate either, batting .378 with two doubles, one home run, and 15 RBI.



NAME: Kevin Zyrkowski
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Zyrkowski was Hingham's go-to guy on the mound as both a starter and a reliever. He also got the job done at the plate with a few key hits, including a game-winner in a come-from behind win over Hanover.

NAME: A.J. DeBenedictis
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Norwell
STATS: Coming off one of their best campaigns in A.J. DeBenedictis' career, the Clippers relied on a team effort to reach the postseason tournament. But the workhorse behind it all was DeBenedictis. The South Shore League all-star came off an injury and pitched exceptionally well for Norwell, and at the plate, he was just as solid.

NAME: Brendan Doonan
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Cohasset
STATS: Doonan was unbeaten on the mound, a feat made all the more impressive because he was just coming back from an arm injury he sustained in the hockey season. He also played an outstanding third base and hit .330 with 28 RBI. He was named the South Shore League co-MVP while helping lead the Skippers to the Div. 4 state championship. A highlight may have been a 3-2 playoff victory over Mashpee when he struck out 15 batters while pitching eight innings. Doonan was also the winning pitcher in the South Sectional championship game and closed out the Div. 4 State Championsip game with two innings of solid relief.

NAME: Bobby Lee
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Braintree
STATS: He did it all for the Wamps in a quiet manner. He was a five-tool standout who hit three of the four home runs by Braintree hitters this season. Lee was second on the team in hitting nearly hitting .400 and he was a super center fielder, covering plenty of ground for the Wamps. Will attend Mass Maritime Academy in the fall.

NAME: Zach Littman
GRADE: Junior
SCHOOL: Abington

NAME: Jon Spitz
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Hanover
STATS: Known as one of the top shortstops in the area, Spitz was almost always on base and had a knack for coming up with the big hits. He'll be headed to Wentworth College in the fall. While it didn't factor into the selection here, Spitz hit .400 during the American Legion season and won the 2010 John Lutinski Scholarship by the Mass. American Legion.

NAME: Danny O'Connell
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Braintree
STATS: He was Mr. Baseball at Braintree High, leading not only the Wamps in batting, but he was also the leading hitter in the Bay State Conference with a .400 average. He was co-MVP of the BSC as well. He will be playing baseball next year at Div. 3 college power Eastern Connecticut.

NAME: Jake McGuiggan
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: A multiple-season Patriot League All-Star, McGuiggan was the first name brought up by opposing players when asked who was Hingham's top player. The smooth fielding shortstop was also dangerous at the plate for both average and power. He was also Hingham's Senior Class president.

NAME: Paul Cheney
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Hanover
STATS: Cheney was 7-1 on the hill this season, and his one loss was a 1-0 loss to state champion Norton in the Div. 3 South Sectional final. He tossed a compete game in a 10-2 quarterfinal win over Eastern Athletic Conference champion Bishop Stang, fanning seven in the outing.

NAME: Anders Goetz
GRADE: Sophomore
SCHOOL: Cohasset
STATS: Goetz was solid at shortstop and dangerous at the plate, hitting .500 over the season. He had a six-RBI day that included a two-run home run in the team's win over Hull that clinched a playoff spot.

Stanley Cup visits South Shore

Chicago coach Torchetti brings iconic trophy to Marshfield

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

If you were just driving through Marshfield on Tuesday, you may have noticed a few cars on the side of the road on the way to Duxbury, or a sign that said to park at the Rec Center.

What you probably didn't notice was what was the special guest visiting a tent right there – Lord Stanley's Cup.

The ultimate prize for hockey fans, and the only one that people can actually touch or even take a drink from.

Chicago Blackhawks assistant coach John Torchetti was a member of this year's Stanley Cup winner and chose to bring it to the South Shore when it was his turn to spend time with it.

"My two sisters live here," Torchetti said, taking a short break from posing for photos with the cup with friends and family on Tuesday at the home of his nephew Jimmy Genovese. "It gave me a great opportunity to share it with everybody. I'm from Jamaica Plain. I brought it there last night and there were 2,000 people. Tonight I'm bringing it back to Jamaica Plain."

Torchetti said the Stanley Cup has a special nature.

"The whole concept is to enjoy it," he said. "My family got to take pictures and invite their friends. It's been great. Look around. Nobody is in a bad mood and it's been raining all day."

He enjoyed the experience, especially taking a sip out of the Cup.

Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings: 2010 Preseason

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

It's that time again. This week, training sessions began for the fall 2010 high school soccer season, and the Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings returns with my preseason picks.

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, goals scored, and goals conceded. This preseason list is based on a combination of last year's finish, how the key losses will affect each team, and the potential impact the returning players may have on the field. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth.

As an added bonus, two professional soccer players talked exclusively to me about to me what it takes for a high school team to reach the highest level.

Tiffany Weimer, attacking midfielder for AIK (Stockholm) and formally of the Boston Breakers, and Duxbury's Stanley Startzell, a two-time All-American forward at the University of Pennsylvania and former member of the New York Cosmos and Philadelphia Atoms of the North American Soccer League, both talked about the keys to success.

"To have a good high school season, it's important to stay focused for the entire year. Of course you need breaks now and then, but there were always players who came into high school season having done nothing, and it always showed," said Weimer, who scored a school record 109 goals for North Haven High School in Connecticut before going on to star at Penn State. "The biggest improvements a player can make individually are in the offseason."

"I think it's camaraderie and chemistry and hopefully that comes with playing indoors and over the summer," Startzel said. "And the fitness is a big question and what's demanded of them."

Boys

1. Hingham – The defending Patriot League Keenan champs, the Harbormen reached the Division 2 South Sectional quarterfinals a year ago, but that might not be so easy this fall. The team lost its two top players – All-Americans Brett Canepa (UMass Amherst) and Terence Morrissey (Bryant) – as well as all-star keeper Andrew Blomberg, and that leaves three huge holes to fill. But, Hingham returns Patriot League all-stars Brian Blanchard, Jake Awtry, Ryan King, and Daniel Stoddard.

2. Marshfield – The Rams are a tough team to dissect. They lost Atlantic Coast League all-stars Wade Jastremski and Jeff Kilday, two vital components to last year's

State Mid-Am victory would seal POY title

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

Now that all the college golfers are back in the classroom and unable to compete in state championships, the best of the rest, mostly working men who are only able to play on weekends, can vie for their own title.

It is called the Massachusetts Mid-Amateur Championship and it will be played in September at the venerable Dedham Country and Polo Club, a haughty joint that can boast it has the only course in Massachusetts designed by Seth Raynor, one of America's earliest architects and one of best course designers of his era.

The club was created in 1910, but it was around longer than that. Two older clubs – Norfolk Country Club and Dedham Polo Club – merged into one course.

It's pretty exclusive. Legend has it that when Tom Coughlin was coach at Boston College, he applied for membership, only to be rejected.

No matter, who cares?

For a few days they let the unwashed public on to their grounds to compete for a championship and that's all that matters.

There are plenty of storylines and subplots, but the most interesting is that Brian Higgins of Franklin will be vying for his third straight Mid-Am title and he has to be considered a heavy favorite.

He won the New England Amateur at the Yale (Conn.) Golf Club, won the Worcester County Amateur at Worcester Country Club, finished second in the NE Amateur Invitational, was fourth in the State Four-Ball at Ipswich, and Hornblower Memorial at Plymouth, and top 10 finishers in the Ouimet Memorial at Woodland CC, State Amateur at Myopia Hunt Club, and Norfolk County Classic at Presidents.

Higgins is the leading point-getter for the MGA's Richard D. Haskell Player of the Year.

He has 741 points and his nearest threats are Frank Vana of Marlborough, who has 530, John Hadges of Thorny Lea with 440, Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich with 360 and Ryan Riley of Norton (345).

Those four are eligible to play in the Mid-Am Championship.

Higgins was the 2008 Player of the Year, but finished third in 2009 when Matt Parziale of Thorny Lea ran away with the award. Vana, who won seven straight titles before Higgins broke his streak in 2008, was the second-leading point-getter last year.

There will be plenty of local talent teeing it up at Dedham C&P, trying to wrestle the title away from Higgins.

Among the 20 qualifiers at Marshfield Country Club were co-medalist Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich and Dan Sullivan of the host course. Both shot a 2-under 68. Ken Charnley of Highland CC was a stroke back.

Other local qualifiers included Ken Charnley of Highland CC, Sean Fitzpatrick of George Wright, Jeff Mucciarone of Bags, Dan Peck of Spring Valley, Mike Christian and Tim Martin of Wampatuck, Kevin Queally of Charles River, Michael Willock of Plymouth, Guy Lansing of Halifax, Jack Weeks of Wollaston, Dave Pierce of Halifax is the first alternate.

Courtney Holler of Weymouth watches her drive at the first hole of Sarah Whitney's South Shore Girls Invitational at South Shore Country Club last Thursday. For more about Whitney's tournament and other golf notes on the Mulcahys' victory at the State Father-Daughter Championship and local juniors playing for the state team in the New England championships, go to www.wickedlocalgolf.com for more information.

Ironically, another Marshfield CC golfer, Jeff Stewart, traveled to Cape Cod and qualified at Cranberry Valley GC in Harwich. You have to understand that Stewart's father, Allen Stewart, was the long-time head pro at Cummaquid and he's from the area.

Stewart earned medalist honors at Cranberry Valley with a 2-under 70. Bill Tribou of Halifax and Jim Forsgard of South Shore Country Club also qualified at the Cape Course.

In another local qualifier for the State Mid-Am at Braintree, Shawn Scott of Long Meadow was medalist with a 5-under 68, four shots better than Chris Needham. Ponkapoag's Brian O'Leary, Presidents' Eric Daniel, Walpole's Brian Healy, Thorny Lea's Dave Tasho and Robert Mancini, Poquoy Brook's Cameron Shaw and Easton's John Nolan also punched their ticket to the championship.

Several local players did not have to qualify for the championship and are exempt right into the tournament. They include Steven Tasho of Thorny Lea, who finished fifth last year along with State Amateur, Mike Calef of Brockton, and Herbert Aikens of Pinehills and Ben Spitz of Norwell.

It should be an interesting tournament.

KNOW THE PRO

Brian Mattos

What's in your bag?
I have all Callaways except for my driver (a Ping ISA) and my putter (Ping).

Describe your best round (where, when, highlights):
It was a long time ago at Poquoy Brook. That's when I was playing a lot. I shot a 67.

If you could be a dream foursome, who would be in it?
I think I'd like to play in a foursome with Ernie Els, Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson. I bet there would be a lot of money bet in that match.

Describe your introduction to golf (who, where, how old you where, and how the game attracted you):
I grew up on Poquoy Brook. My father, Ralph Mattos, was the club's first professional. Once you play there, how can you not like the game.

What is your favorite golf course (and why?) besides your current club:
Poquoy Brook will always be my favorite course because of the memories and because it is such a great layout. But I'm also a member at Segregansett Country Club in Taunton and that's a wonderful old club. And it's in great condition.

What's the best golf tip you ever received?
It was down South. An old pro said,

D.W. Field in Brockton

'When it's breezy, swing the club easy.'

What makes your home golf course so special?
What makes D.W. Field special to me is what they can do here. They don't have the biggest budget, but they get the most out of every dollar. Plus, it's a great membership here. Plus, you get a great bang for your buck. We have a golf and cart special for only $30.

Weathervane: a fun course

So many of my friends think their golf game is better than it is. They want to play the hardest, most difficult courses and they always want to play from the back tees.

Course of the Week

When they are done they are beaten up, get upset at their inability to make pars and get just plain frazzled.

What fun is that?

They talk about retiring to a community that has a world-class golf course.

What they don't understand is that by the time they are ready to retire, their golf game is going to be a mess. They'll be lucky to hit the ball 200 yards and chipping and putting will be a battle of nerves.

When I retire, give me a course where I can make a par or two and have fun.

That's why we play the game.

Two friends came back from playing there two weeks ago.

One said it was too short. Of course, that was a former club champions.

The other said they loved it.

That was a 60-something friend who is having a retirement golf party at Rockland Golf Course this Friday.

A golfer tees off at the Weathervane Golf Course in South Weynouth.

The golf course was originally designed by architects Cornish, Silva and Mungeam of Mungeam Cornish Golf Design of Uxbridge and later enhanced by Howard Maurer of Maurer Design Group of Hopedale.

Built by J.F. Price, the semi-private course surrounds the community and officially opened April 15.

It has been a long process, taking nearly two decades to complete and it was a labor of love.

Earlier this spring, Weathervane officially opened for business as a semi-private course.

Although not widely advertised, it already has approximately 60 full-time members, and is home to five weeknight leagues. Memberships range from $1,800 to $3,000. For more information, visit www.weathervanevillages.com.

FROM RANKINGS, PAGE 17

team. They also lost nearly a dozen other seniors, including starting keeper Brandt Greene. But the Rams do return Atlantic Coast League all-star Andrew Sheridan, who's good for a solid 80 minutes each game. Sheridan is one of three captains for Head Coach Scott Sorensen this fall. The other two – Jan Sjonquist and Matt Wencis – were instrumental in Marshfield's late-season run to make the 2009 tourney. And keep an eye out for sophomore Evan Jastremski, who's good on the ball and has the ability to take control of open space. This team has the talent to challenge for a league title, it's just a matter of how quickly that talent comes together on the field.

3. Duxbury – A loss to eventual Division 2 Eastern Mass. semifinalists Sandwich in the South Sectional quarterfinals. The Dragons lost only one regular season game, and it came to Hingham, in a game that decided the Patriot League title. This team lost a lot of quality starters, including Dan Sangster, who is now at the University of Hartford, as well as Tom Drummy (Babson) and Pat Charland (Stonehill), and starting keeper Max Cote and backup Tom Kazanowski, 19 seniors in all. This is a program that has notoriously churned out new talent each year and could do so again in 2010, but this is the youngest team Duxbury has had in years. It's not going to be easy.

4. Hanover – The Indians made a decent run in the Division 3 South Sectional tournament before losing in the semifinals to No. 3 Westport on PKs. Without 2009 senior co-captain and midfielder Jon Spitz, the key will be neutralizing the middle. Defensively is also where the Indians need help. Keeper Jimmy Oliver and last year's senior co-captain and defender Andrew Bishop are gone, leaving guys like Dylan Griffin, who had a stellar freshman season, to step up quickly to fill the void.

5. Rockland – No one expected the Bulldogs to reach the postseason after some regular season struggles. But not only did the Dogs qualify for the tournament, they won two games, including a first-round upset of Harwich. Keeper Kevin Strobler had a phenomenal freshman season in 2009, and he's the backbone of that Bulldogs backline. But can the Dogs replace the scoring power of forward Bruno daSilva?

6. Norwell – The Clippers lost their scoring touch with the graduation of three South Shore League all-stars - Curtis Webb, Phil Johnson, and Pat Collins. But forward Brad Prouty was also part of that attack last year, and he returns this fall. Keeper Tom Koch is also back on the pitch, one year after recording nearly 10 shutouts a year ago. The team went 10-4-4 last year, a season in which it moved up to Division 2.

Final 2009 rankings

1. Duxbury, 2. Hanover, 3. Hingham, 4. Rockland, 5. Marshfield, 6. Pembroke

Girls

1. Duxbury – Playing in the Patriot League Keenan Division is no easy task, but the Lady Dragons managed to finish second to Whitman-Hanson in 2009. The loss of forward Caitlin Burke (Dartmouth College) may not be as bad as it seems. With four returning all-stars – Melissa Gavin and Emily Gallagher up top, Meg Woomer in the back, and Emily Brook back in net – the Duxbury girls will challenge Whitman-Hanson for the Patriot League title yet again. Duxbury also returns four other key starters in defender Devan Bahr, midfielders Madi Lawson and Charlotte Cipolletti, and striker Katie Finocchiaro.

2. Plymouth South – This is the year that Jeanne Adelmann has been waiting to see. Two years ago, she had a young and extremely talented group. Now, those sophomores and freshmen and seniors and juniors, and their talent is ridiculous. Kayla Thomas, Hali Drude, Kayla Earp, Alessandra and Anastasia Kopp, and Andrea Sundberg The Lady Panthers finish tied for third place in the Atlantic Coast League and became the first team in the girls soccer program to qualify for the postseason in consecutive seasons. They have a legitimate shot at winning the school's first-ever league title this year.

3. Norwell – After a year in which they went 17-1-2, with their only loss coming in the Division 3 semifinals, the defending South Shore League champion Lady Clippers return two of their top scorers from last year (senior Krista Prouty and sophomore Bridget Conway) as well as their starting keeper, senior Brooke Alman. The back four will miss all-league defender Jill Sheeran, but if Laura Ferzoco and Molly Lodgiani performed as well as they did a year ago in front of Alman, Norwell should be all set. Losing two of the area's top midfielders and league all-stars Kate MacDonald and Kara O'Connell leaves a giant gap in the middle. That could be Norwell's one weakness heading into the season.

4. Marshfield – Slowed by injuries midseason, the Rams made a strong push down the stretch to reach the 2009 postseason. Now, with the return of a healthy Cammie Brown up front, and with sophomore scoring threats Brooke Sweeney and Jill Clapp back with a year of varsity experience under their belts, the Lady Rams have a ton of potential on the attack. But two big questions remain. 1. Can they adjust to a new head coach (Dominic Centorino) and 2. How do they replace all-league keeper Jess Lane and the 14 other seniors? Well, late-season call-ups from the junior varsity squad coupled with the return of 10 field players and last year's backup keeper might just do the trick.

5. Weymouth – The Lady Wildcats only lost three seniors from last year's team that reached the postseason despite a lack of scoring. Juniors Shannon Conneely, Brooke Hattinger, and Devan Ratta have excellent vision and a knack for finding the back of the net. Sophomore keeper Michaela Stuart is young, but she has a year of varsity experience, which should give her plenty of confidence this fall.

6. Plymouth North – With the loss of Eastern Mass. All-star Shane Follette (Bryant University), the Lady Eagles need to find a scoring threat. They also need someone to step up in net now that Liz Lincoln is off at college. Head Coach Eric Foley had a pair of solid backup keepers available last season, and they were both underclassmen. This is a year that two of North's returning defenders, Jordan Flowers and Jen Wilson, will have to command the backline, and three-year starting midfielder, senior Ashleigh Berg, will be looked upon to lead the team. Even with all the changes, the Lady Eagles should still make the tournament. It just won't be as easy as year's past.

Final 2009 rankings

1.Duxbury, 2. Norwell, 3. Plymouth North, 4. Marshfield, 5. Braintree, 6. Plymouth South

Weymouth Club swimmers, end season on high note

The youth tennis players representing the Weymouth Club capped off seasons on high notes, while competing in championship events.

The Weymouth Wave swimmers concluded their long course season in New England meets, while the tennis players competed in clay court tournaments.

The Waves

The team had a tremendous end to the season at New England Open where they finished 10th overall. This was the Waves' best finish ever at the New England's topping their best previous finish, which had been 15th.

The top performer was Colin Mulicahy (Hingham), who won the 100 freestyle in :53.94 making him the Waves' first New England Open champion.

In addition five swimmers qualified for the NCSA Junior Nationals. The group includes Colleen O'Neil (Abington) in the 100 breast (1:16.13), Samantha Sliwinski (Weymouth) in the 50 free (27.55), and Mulicahy.

In addition, and the girls medley relay of Janelle McDonald (Middleboro), Colleen O'Neil, Katherine Kenney (Dedham) and Sam Sliwinski became the first Waves' relay team to ever qualify for the Junior Nationals.

"It was a very exciting meet," said first-year Waves' head coach Marshall Goldman. "We had the most qualifiers ever and it was especially exciting to have our first-ever New England Open champion.

"I also want to take this opportunity to thank my assistant coach AJ Vozella for the great job he has done with the swimmers. He coached the swimmers prior to my coming here in the first of June, and did an outstanding job."

In addition, the Waves had numerous swimmers finish in the top 24. That is significant as the top 24 score points at the New England's.

In addition, there were four each girls and boys relays that finished in the top 16.

Earlier in the post-season competition the Waves had six swimmers compete in the New England 14-and-under championships. They were Paige Spellman, Calley Madison, Sam Rice (Cohasset), Dean Spicer (Cohasset), Julia Klier (Cohasset), and Matt Gaffney (Braintree).

By virtue of their finishing in the top 16, they scored points for the teams. The group included nine-year-old Dean Spicer who was 12th 400 freestyle (5:51.71), 12-year-old Julia Klier who was fifth in the 100 and 200 backstroke and 12th in the 50 backstroke; and Matt Gaffney, who was 12th in the 50 and 100 breaststroke and 11th in the 100 breaststroke.

FROM STANLEY CUP, PAGE 17

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime experience," he said after working up the courage to take his sip. "I had to capitalize on it. I may never see it again. It was the best thing I've ever tasted. If I didn't do it I would have been mad at myself for the rest of my life."

Genovese said bringing the Cup to Marshfield was Torchetti's idea.

"My uncle wanted to make sure everyone got to enjoy it," he said. "It's been quite an event. We had family from 10-1, then friends and family from 1-4. This is something that doesn't happen often. Some guys play 20 years and never get to see it."

"I was in Philly when we (Blackhawks) won game 6," he said. "It's nice to see it back here. This trophy isn't like any other in sports. It's a loan and it's been in the NHL for so many years. It's the best trophy in sports."

"I got a drink,"said Mike, a friend from Boston. "It was the time of my life. You can't beat this. It's Lord Stanley's Cup right here."

The Stanley Cup was first presented to the champions of the Amateur Hockey Association of Canada in 1893. The NHL took control in 1926.

The Cup has already made a victory tour throughout the state of Illinois, including stops at the (Governor's) Executive Mansion, and 2010 Illinois State Fair.

As for Torchetti, the season was his last with Chicago.

Next season he'll be an associate coach with the Atlanta Thrashers.

"It's tough to leave Chicago," he said. "I loved it there, but I'm going back to work with Craig Ramsay (Atlanta coach) and Rick Dudley (GM). It's a great opportunity."

COLLEGE MATTERS

Is graduate school the answer for a bleak job market?

By Susan Kennedy
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Career counselors everywhere are fielding this question: Should I go to graduate school to wait out the economy and re-enter the job market with stronger credentials?

With an unemployment rate of 9.7 percent nationally, and 9.2 percent in Massachusetts, many people, particularly recent college graduates, are considering this as a viable option.

The Class of 2010 is facing the highest unemployment rate since the early 1980s, as well as stiff competition from a significant pool of young professionals who have been laid off. For newly minted graduates, the fear of long-term unemployment makes the familiar comfort of academia a strong temptation.

Graduate school is a serious and expensive endeavor. It should not be chosen hastily, and should be based on thoughtful consideration.

It is a common misperception that having an advanced degree can inherently increase salaries as well as open more doors in the future. Depending on the degree, this may or may not be true.

Employers today are looking for a portfolio of marketable skills in addition to a solid education. They want to know that new employees will add value to their organizations from day one. A degree, whether undergraduate or graduate, is not a single indicator of success in the workplace. In fact, an advanced degree can be detrimental if the academics haven't been balanced by some meaningful work experience.

In general, there are three reasons to pursue further education when looking for career development.

* The first reason is to enter a particular profession. To become a doctor or a lawyer, for example, will require multiple years of dedicated education, as well as practical training, to enter the profession. Likewise, a psychologist will have to complete an extensive doctorate program before having significant patient contact.
* A second reason is to further advance a career. Although many careers can be successful with only an undergraduate degree, a graduate degree can open up new career options and consequent salary opportunities.

For example, a bachelor's degree can help someone obtain an elementary or high school teaching position. However, to increase their salaries, many teachers pursue a graduate degree in education. In fact, some school systems require a graduate degree in order to be considered for tenure. In the private sector, a master's in business administration can enable the network engineer or finance manager to join upper management in their respective industries.

Be aware that some fields, such as nursing and general business roles, recommend and expect some work experience before going back to school.

* Finally, making a career change may necessitate a graduate degree. The science teacher who wants to be a nutritionist will most likely need to obtain a master's degree. Likewise, the actuary who chooses to teach college level math would need a doctorate.

The first step in determining if graduate school is the best option is to establish clearly defined career goals which take into account one's skills, interests and work values. Once aware of your skills and interests, the next step is to research various roles through online research or informational interviews. This research can detail the key tasks and responsibilities of various jobs, the work environment, and the skills and experience required.

Be aware that some fields, such as nursing and general business roles, recommend and expect some work experience before going back to school.

If, after conducting extensive research, graduate school is required to achieve the career goals, then it is prudent to pursue a graduate degree. For example, a person with strong research and analytical skills who is less confident with his or her interpersonal skills probably isn't best suited for a customer-facing role in sales or client services. However, he or she could be successful in a consulting role. Positions at larger consulting firms typically require two to three years of work experience and a graduate degree will be required to advance within the industry. In this situation, one may want to consider developing a strong track record of work experience before applying to graduate programs.

In addition to career goals, there are other important things to consider before applying to a graduate program.

The first is cost. Graduate school is expensive and many people take out loans to finance the degree. Whether or not you will be able to live with that debt is a personal choice. A visit to a financial planner or the financial aid office at the schools you are considering is beneficial. Keep in mind that many large companies will finance all or part of a master's degree for employees, so for those who are already working, it might make sense to wait.

Next, it is critical to make sure you have the academic and personal qualities to succeed. Generally, it is expected that students maintain at least a 3.0 grade point average during graduate school. Juggling tasks, projects and papers demand excellent time management and organizational skills. Graduate school requires a higher level of commitment than undergraduate school. Students must enjoy reading, writing and analyzing information. Speaking with professors and other graduate students can be an effective reality check.

Graduate school can be a very useful tool when entering a profession or continuing to develop a career but nothing replaces a solid career plan to make the best use of this opportunity.

Fun before the raindrops

"Friday and Saturday started off very well. The attendance figures were up from last year."
Carlton Chandler

At first, the weather was great. Among the visitors descending upon the Marshfield Fairgrounds for the start of the 143rd Marshfield Fair was Chris Apacherli, a Halifax resident who pulled his car into the fast-filling dirt parking lot directly across the street from the bustling fairgrounds on opening day Aug. 20.

Beautiful weather conditions and the fact that sons Adam, 9, and Shane, 7, are now old enough to enjoy much of what the fair has to offer, was according to Chris, incentive enough to make the 25-minute trek to Marshfield.

"We haven't been here for two years," he said minutes after the gates opened to lines of waiting fair-goers. "We planned this for a week."

With the fair running through Aug. 29, Tracy, Chris' wife, said the family wasn't about to try to pack in all the sights during the one visit.

"We decided to do rides today and we'll come back Wednesday for motocross," she said. "We have the kids today and they love the rides."

So the weather was great for the start of the fair, and then on Sunday, Aug. 22, came the rain. And if forecasts ring true, the motocross competitors, and the crowds they'll be jumping high above, may have to contend with windy and rainy conditions, the results of a system that has been parked over the area since Sunday.

On Aug. 23, organizers had no choice but to scrap the entire day's activities, including the demolition derby, which is now scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 28, at 2 p.m., followed by the regularly scheduled final at 7 p.m. Former "American Idol" contestant Ayla Brown's performance, which was scheduled for 6 p.m. Monday, has been postponed to Saturday at 5 p.m.

On Tuesday, the fair opened as scheduled at noon, but closed at 5:30 p.m., and Senior Day was moved to Friday, Aug. 27. On Wednesday, the fair opened at noon, but the motocross that the Apacherlis hoped to see and the horse-pulling were cancelled, and Children's Day was rescheduled for Thursday.

"It's really a last resort that we would end up closing the fair," said Carlton Chandler of the Marshfield Agricultural Society and the fair's longtime secretary/treasurer.

Although rains put a damper on the start of the week, fairgoers like the Apacherlis still took advantage of the first two days, which were dry, comfortable and, according to Chandler, profitable.

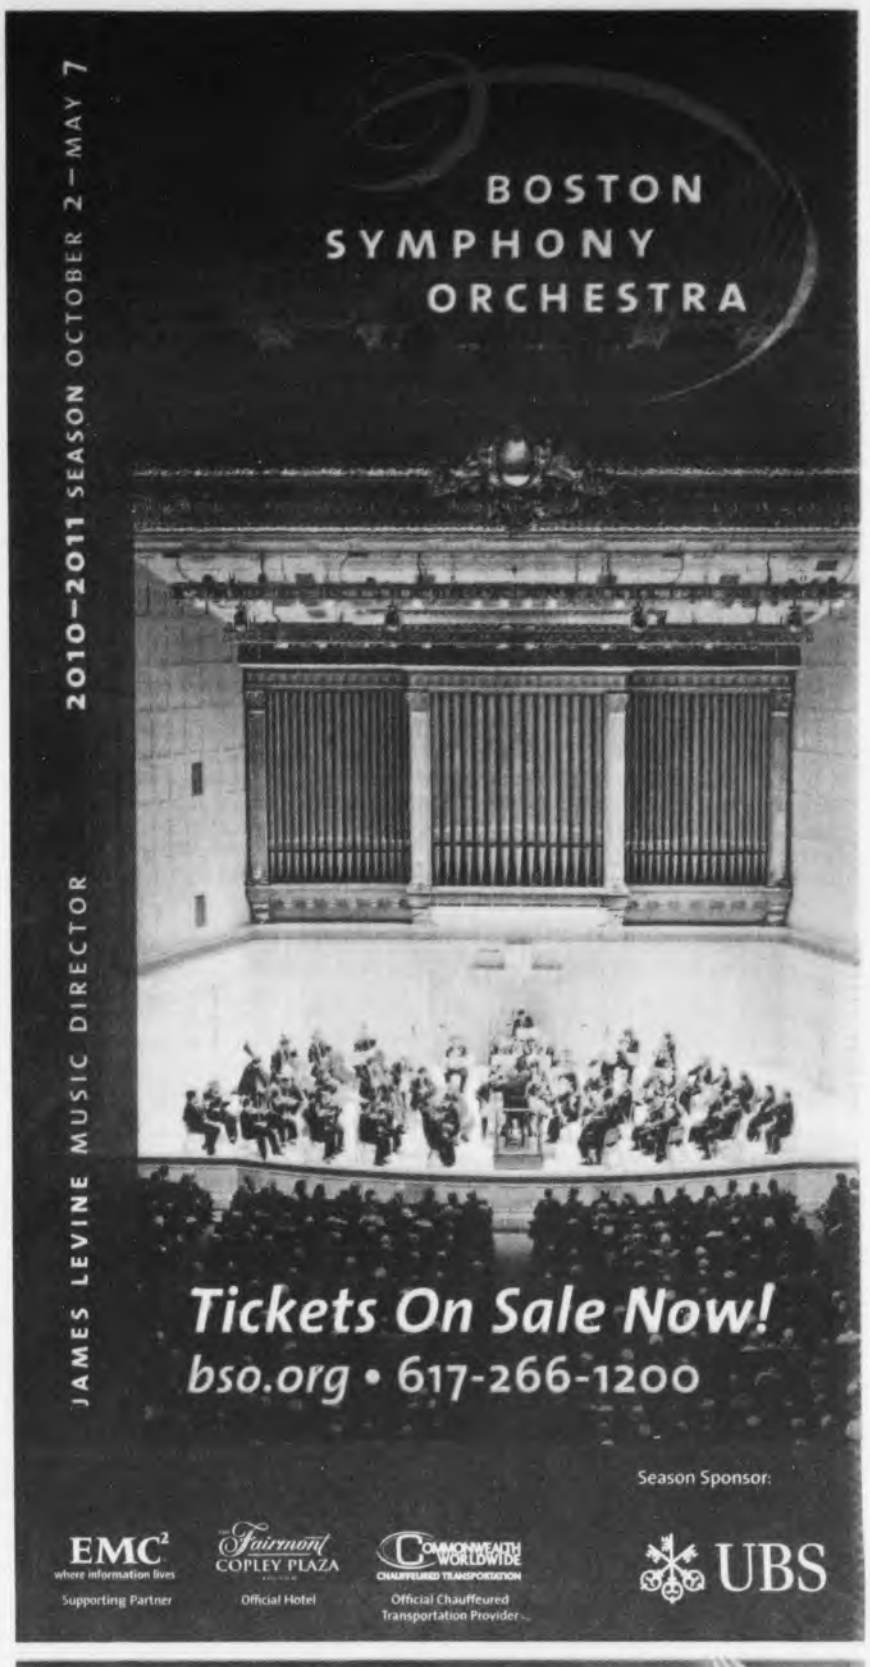
"Friday and Saturday started off very well," Chandler said, noting that the fair, and all of its scheduled events —including the Aug. 20 demolition derby and the Aug. 21 start of the expanded North River Blues Festival — ran as smooth as could be. "The attendance figures were up from last year."

While last year's opening day, a Saturday, was sweltering and drove much of the crowds to the beach, Chandler said the next Saturday was even worse, as torrential downpours lead to a complete washout.

"The weekends are our bread and butter," he said, adding that the first of this year's rain Aug. 22, although scattered and mostly light, definitely put a damper on things, as attendance that was down about half. "Everywhere else it was pouring. If you were going to come up from Plymouth, you'd look out window at the downpour and say 'I don't think I'm going to the fair.'"

Organizers are still looking on the bright side of things, as this week's forecasts show the rains should be moving out Aug. 26 and better weather is expected for the remainder of the fair.



"We'll keep our fingers crossed," Chandler said.

Miscanthus provides attractive textural accents for both sunny and shady sites

At long last, Mother Nature has come to the rescue, with soaking showers to revitalize our drought-stricken South Shore landscapes. Several days of cool temperatures and abundant moisture should work wonders, and as I look out my window on this soggy Monday morning, I swear my plants are jumping for joy, lifting their heads to welcome the raindrops that bathe their dusty, parched leaves and stems. Hopefully, more rain will be forthcoming as the fall planting season approaches to ensure that our perennials, trees and shrubs are sufficiently hydrated to survive the colder months that lie ahead.

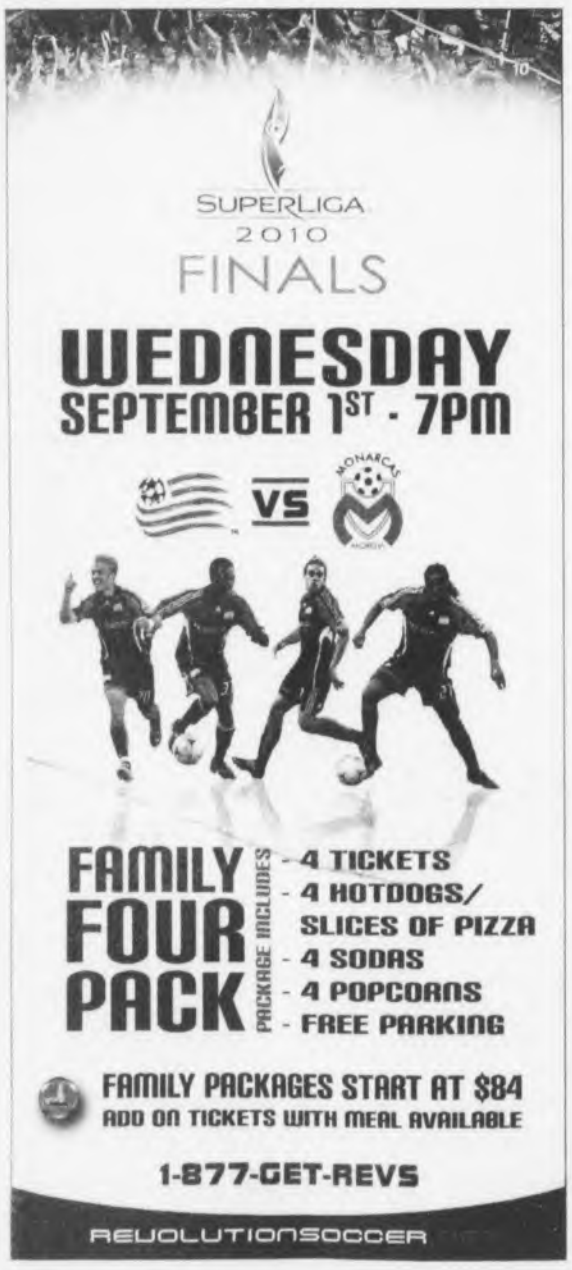
Throughout the active growing season, the mixed perennial border presents an ever-changing portrait, with peaks and valleys in the bloom sequence. Attractive foliages serve to bridge the gaps when colorful blooms are less plentiful. Leaves that are tinted blue, gray, gold and burgundy offer color contrasts, while others provide lacy, dissected leaves for textural diversity. The large majority of our plants, however, tend to exhibit fairly similar shapes and patterns, having rounded leaves and dense, solid, mounded forms. The addition of finely textured, linear foliage is a welcome contrast, and few plants rival the ornamental grasses for this attractive attribute.

In addition to the fabulous, architectural stands of the maiden grasses (Miscanthus) and the delightful arching clumps of fountain grasses (Pennisetum), there are numerous varieties of ornamental grasses to provide attractive textural accents for both sunny and shady sites. Several varieties of ornamental grasses provide continuous color with evergreen foliage. A few qualify as groundcovers, which can be viewed as both a positive or negative attribute, depending on your perspective. While the flower and seed heads of a great majority of ornamental grasses could hardly be described as spectacular, many are extremely appealing. Feathery, fluffy plumes, delicate, airy sprays and spikes, or pleasing inflorescences that resemble fuzzy bottle brushes, add beauty during the latter half of the growing season and often into the winter months.

Perhaps my favorite ornamental grass is northern sea oats (Chasmanthium), due to its attractive panicles of flattened seed heads resembling oats that rekindle sentimental memories of summer vacations on the Outer Banks of North Carolina. The image of golden sea oats swaying on the dunes in the salty breezes, their arched clusters shimmering in the setting sun against a backdrop of the blue-green ocean is forever etched in my memory. When the sea oats bloom each year in my garden, I recall those carefree days visiting this pleasant refuge rich in history and legends, rolling surf and endless sandy beaches. Tolerant of a wide range of soils in sun or partial shade, this three- to five-foot tall clumping grass has slightly broader leaf blades than many other ornamental grasses and the seed heads are long-lasting when cut and dried. These plants readily seed about and might be considered by some to be a nuisance but if seed heads are removed in the fall, seedlings will be minimized.

Another popular choice for the mixed sunny border is feather reed grass (Calamagrostis). Clumps of slender, wiry foliage up to five feet in height produce tall, erect pinkish plumes in June, considerably earlier than most other ornamental grasses. As the summer progresses, the seed heads narrow, turning golden brown and persist into the winter months; plants tolerate average to poor soils and wet or dry conditions.

Blue-tinted foliage is a very desirable addition to the various shades of green that dominate our gardens and several ornamental grasses are available to provide this attractive color contrast. The blue fescues (Festuca glauca) form tidy eight-inch mounds of very thin, blue-gray foliage that are effective as edging plants in borders or foundation plantings. Blue oat grass (Helictotrichon) also demonstrates steel blue-gray leaves but is more upright in form, its spiky leaves reaching a height of 12 to 24 inches. Both these grasses maintain their color well during the winter months and prefer sunny, dry, well-drained sites. Blue lyme grass (Elymus arenarius "Glaucus") is equally stunning in color and thrives in dry soils, but growers beware as this striking grass has an aggressive nature and is often best confined in containers.



For shady gardens, several extremely attractive grasses offer marvelous color and textural contrast to broad-leafed hostas. The family of sedges (Carex) forms dense clumps, many resembling mop heads, ranging in height from six inches to three feet. Moisture-retentive soils in partial shade are ideal where many remain totally evergreen throughout the year, although some will benefit from a spring haircut to remove winter-damaged foliage. Variegated forms include the green and white-striped cultivars C. morrowii "Snowline," "Ice Dance" and "Silver Scepter," the latter two cultivars slowly spreading to form handsome evergreen ground covers. Equally appealing is the distinctive green and gold C. "Evergold." A personal favorite is C. "Bowles Golden," which produces a stunning lime-green to golden yellow two-foot clump that glows in the partially shady border.

Perhaps the loveliest of all the ornamental grasses is are the Japanese forest grasses (Hakonechloa). These absolutely charming, graceful, arching grasses slowly spread to form mounds that cascade like waterfalls and are an invaluable addition to the shady border. The most commonly grown variety is "Aureola," characterized by golden leaves highlighted with rich dark green stripes. Equally stunning is the solid yellow "All Gold." Grow in humus-rich soil in light shade alongside ferns, hosta and astilbes or nestled among rocks.

For ease of culture and long season interest, few perennials rival the grasses and sedges. It may require some searching to find a broad selection and a little experimentation to feel comfortable with their placement in the garden, but your long-term rewards will make the process worthwhile.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
AUG. 30, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This could be the time to try soothing whatever bad feelings might be lingering 'twixt and among colleagues, friends or family members. But be sure you do so without favoring any side.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An idea is only an idea until you put that clever Bovine mind to work to develop it from concept to substance. This could lead to something rewarding, both emotionally and monetarily.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The early part of the week could have some disconcerting moments, but approaching them with a calm, unruffled attitude goes a long way toward helping to get things nicely settled down.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Getting used to change continues to mark much of the week. But accepting what you have to do makes adapting that much easier. A welcome visitor could turn up sooner than expected.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Learning how to live with a decision is a challenge, but one you Leos and Leonas could really enjoy. You'll also be pleased to see your social life take that upsurge you've been hoping for.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Use your perceptive Virgo instinct to help you see the positive aspects of what, at first, appears to be a disappointment. You could find that it proves to be quite the contrary.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your ability to maintain a balance between sense and sentiment once again helps you sort through apparently conflicting choices and ultimately arrive at the right decision.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Before you seek the advice of colleagues about a potential career move, you might be better off getting counsel from someone who won't be affected by the choices you make.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It can be a challenging week for some relationships if the normal give-and-take flow changes with one side doing most of the giving and the other the taking.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A new opportunity could bring with it much anticipation along with some anxiety. Take time to sort out your options as well as your emotional considerations.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Are you sure you have all the facts you need to let that matter move to another level? Don't be rushed into a decision unless and until you feel it's the right thing to do.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Pace yourself as you prepare to take on that more demanding project. Be careful not to let your energy reserves drain away. Take time to relax with people close to you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have the ability to see both sides of a situation. You would do well as a counselor or a judge.

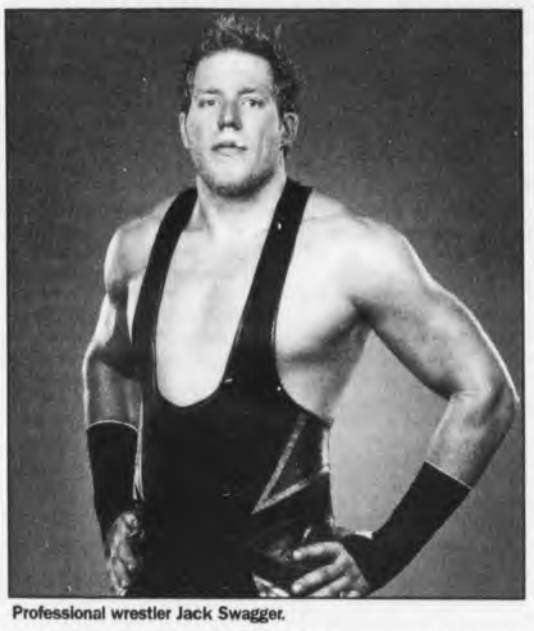
LORD OF THE RING



WWE World Tour returns with Swagger

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

When the World Wrestling Entertainment (WWE) World Tour rolls into Cohasset and Hyannis this weekend, it will be featuring big-name cards like Kofi Kingston vs. Drew McIntyre vs. Dolph Ziggler in triple-threat matches for the Intercontinental Championship, and, in Hyannis only, a Smackdown Submission Match pitting Matt Hardy against Jack Swagger. As fans of Syfy Channel's now-defunct Extreme Championship Wrestling (ECW) know, Swagger and Hardy have faced off before. In fact, Swagger earned his first WWE title, the ECW Championship, with his January 13, 2009, defeat of Hardy.

The six-foot, six-inch Swagger has been wrestling since he was a child growing up in Perry, Okla., just a few blocks away from his boyhood idol, fellow pro wrestler and legendary apple-crusher Danny Hodge. Now 28, Swagger was on the football and wrestling teams at the University of Oklahoma, where he earned a bachelor's degree in finance. Swagger opted out of a business career when, just one day before he was to join a financial services firm in Dallas, he instead accepted a WWE contract.

Professional wrestler Jack Swagger.

Town Commons: What should people who have only seen WWE on television expect when they come to see you live in either Cohasset or Hyannis?

Jack Swagger: One thing they'll notice right away is that we are truly a live event show. It's pretty much Broadway with body slams. Our show is completely centered on the audience. The best matches are the ones the audiences are really into, because then they can really feel like they're in the middle of the action.

TC: You've wrestled since first grade. Have you also always been a pro-wrestling fan?

JS: As a little boy, wrestling was everything to me. Danny Hodge lived two blocks away and not only was I a really big fan of his, but I also got to know him. I even wrestled in high school with his grandson. There is something to be said for the energy of pro wrestling. I love it just as much today as I ever have.

TC: Even with a degree in finance, you chose a career in pro wrestling. Would you ever take a 9-to-5 job?

JS: Even though I have always been a big fan of pro wrestling, it was not until my last year of college that I even thought about pursuing it as a career. Right out of school, I was a young businessman and I wanted the best opportunity, with the best salary, and a chance to see the world, all while continuing to wrestle. I'll work in an office someday, but it will be when I own the business.

TC: There are sometimes as many girls as boys in a WWE audience. Is it all about sisters tagging along with their brothers or is it something more?

JS: For younger girls, it is inspiring to see our great-looking, smart, independent divas. They're really beautiful women, of course, and they're also really successful which makes them role models for little girls. When my sister brought her sorority sisters to one of our shows, however, I think they came for the men in spandex and baby oil.

TOWN COMMONS

AUGUST 26 - SEPTEMBER 3, 2010

THE CIRQUE IS BACK IN TOWN

The Montreal-based company returns with 'Ovo'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Insects are everywhere this time of year, be they annoying armies of ants at our outdoor picnics, pesky mosquitoes buzzing around looking for just the right place to bite us, or lovely little lady bugs quietly going about their business. We usually step on them, swat them, or flick them away, but this summer we have a chance to develop a whole new appreciation for bugs in "Ovo," Cirque du Soleil's latest touring production, now at Fan Pier on Boston's Waterfront.

Cirque du Soleil's "Ovo" will be at Boston's Fan Pier through Aug. 29.

The Montreal-based company has pitched a big top tent next door to Anthony's Pier 4, under which a cast of 60 is bringing everything from dragonflies, crickets, spiders, ants, fleas, and butterflies—plus one scene-stealingly appealing over-sized lady bug—to slithering, crawling, cycling, flying and bouncing life.

Since its founding in Canada 26 years ago, Cirque du Soleil has become a world-wide phenomenon with its many touring companies and sit-down shows. Anyone who has been to Las Vegas in the last decade can tell you that Cirque shows now command the majority of the Strip's showrooms. Cirque's first off-Broadway foray, "Banana Shpeel," may have flopped earlier this year, but that isn't likely to have any long-term adverse effect on the company which boasts a global audience of 100 million fans.

Local admirers of all things Cirque won't be disappointed in this year's offering—written, staged and choreographed by Deborah Colker, the company's first female director—which once again offers up an equal measure of beauty, spectacle, and awe-inspiring acrobatics.

The gossamer-light plot of "Ovo" deals with a fly (Francois-Guillaume LeBlanc) who happens upon a world of other insects while toting a very large egg on his back. Before long, he finds himself drawn to a fun and flirty ladybug (Michelle Matlock, in one of costume designer Liz Vandal's many vividly colored, cleverly executed ensembles).

Even its most ardent admirers probably wouldn't say they go to Cirque du Soleil shows for their storylines. And this one is no exception. What it lacks in character development, however, it makes up in sheer spectacle – with dizzying plate spinning done on the feet of one very coordinated ant colony and a trapeze act that will leave you holding your breath.

And last, but most certainly not least, is the finale during which trampolines catapult crickets up and down a huge rock-climbing wall. As with all great Cirque moments, this one builds and builds until the audience is out of its seats in amazement.

Cirque du Soleil's "Ovo" will be at Boston's Fan Pier through Aug. 29. For tickets and information, call 800-450-1480 or go online at cirquedusoleil/ovo.

GOING FOR A DIP

Sixteen yellow-capped swimmers bob in the water next to the 114-foot tall Minot Light. The swim to and from the lighthouse totaled about 4.5-miles.

Local swimmers pay visit to lighthouse

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the town of Cohasset, Minot Light is a beacon. For mariners, its 1-4-3 flashing light has warded off boats from the town's rocky coast, and welcomed local sailors back home.

For a small group in Cohasset on Saturday morning Minot Light became a challenge and a destination. Sixteen local swimmers set off from Bassing Beach to make their way to the towering granite tower and back to Cohasset Harbor again — a 4.5-mile journey.

The idea to swim to Minot Light has been percolating with this group of friends for about two years.

When Tom Baker moved from San Diego to Cohasset two years ago Minot Light was a sight to see from the coast. The beacon, calling out its 1-4-3 flash, has warned boats of Cohasset's treacherous ledge for 150-years. But, for Baker, Minot was a beacon of another sort.

An avid open water swimmer back on the Pacific coast he wanted to know if it was possible to swim there.

"I have no depth perception, but it didn't look that far," Baker said.

He shared his idea with Steve Upson one night at Sandy Beach. Before long, their mutual swimming friend Bill Burnett, race director for the Cohasset Triathlon, was on board. Burnett, Upson and Baker often swim together from Black Rock Beach to Sandy Beach.

As the plan started to gel together people jumped on board to participate. At 8a.m. on Saturday, a 16-person group included an Ironman triathlete, a recreational open water swimmer, several former collegiate swimmers and a 14-year-old. Burnett recruited several swimmers from his Cambridge Masters Team to come along.

Be prepared

Cohasset could feel effects of Hurricane Earl

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the first time since 1991's Hurricane Bob Cohasset could be hit with a hurricane.

At press time on Thursday morning, the track of Hurricane Earl was still being watched closely and may not make landfall in Massachusetts.

But, town officials and local families were making preparations late this week just in case.

"We're planning for the worst and hoping for the best," Fire Chief Robert Silvia said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin has called the department heads together on Thursday morning to develop any specific local plans to get ready for Hurricane Earl. Silvia said he would sit in on a statewide Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) conference call Thursday afternoon to discuss potential emergency management plans.

On Wednesday, Silvia said the National Weather Service is giving updates on the Earl's track at noon and 6p.m. each day.

"The biggest things to worry about in any hurricane is wind, rain and storm surge," Silvia said.

The rain associated with the hurricane on Wednesday was two to seven inches of rain in a six to 12 hour period.

"That type of rain is going to create flooding," Silvia said. As the storm gets closer Silvia will make the decision on whether to add more staff on Friday night into Saturday, the projected arrival of Hurricane Earl.

"Right now, 48 to 72 hours out they have no way of pining it down," Silvia said. "As things change we'll adapt to whatever we have to do."

Back to the books on Tuesday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Come Tuesday the buses will roll, the students will arrive and I think we're in very good shape."
— Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh

For the children of Cohasset the time has come to return to books, buses and backpacks. On Tuesday morning, Cohasset Schools are back in session.

"This is the time of year where I say ready or not it's back to school," said Superintendent Denise Walsh. "Come Tuesday the buses will roll, the students will arrive and I think we're in very good shape."

The three Cohasset school buildings have been a bustle of activities in the last few weeks. The custodial staff has shined up the buildings, the buses have been inspected and the teachers have been readying their lesson plans and classrooms.

The school staff is excited about the opportunities a new year and new equipment will bring for students. The Middle-High School boasts two new language labs thanks to the Cohasset Education Foundation. The Osgood School, thanks to the PSO, now has its own STEM lab for hands-on science learning. That STEM lab complements the STEM lab installed last year at the Deer Hill School.

Vacancies in the staff have almost all been filled, Walsh said, and new teachers were welcomed to the "Cohasset family" in an orientation this week.

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Police Department, Criminal Investigation Division (CID) is seeking information concerning two housebreaks, which resulted in the larceny of jewelry and cash from residences on Reservoir Road and King Street in Cohasset, said Chief Mark DeLuca.

Preliminary investigation revealed that the residence on Reservoir Road was broken into between 8 a.m. and 9p.m. on Monday, (Aug. 30). The residence on King Street was broken into between 12:30 p.m. and 10 p.m., Monday.

If you have any information regarding these incidents, or if you observed any suspicious activity or persons in the area, please contact the CID Office at: (781) 383-1055 x1047. Email: detectives@cohassetpolice.com.

Cash taken

An 18-year-old Cohasset girl reported to police on Sunday (Aug. 29) that $70 was missing from her purse and thought it had occurred while she was working at the Music Circus the previous night. The incident is under investigation.

Illegal dumping

The DPW showed an officer one bag of household trash that had been dumped into the town-owned receptacle at the Town Landing off Border Street in the harbor last Tuesday. Periodicals inside the kitchen-sized trash bag revealed the residence where the trash came from. The DPW was concerned the trash bin was being used for household trash. Police spoke to the homeowner who was unaware of the dumping but would inform her other family members. The incident was reported at 1:39 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 24).

Shoeless

A group of three girls were apparently walking from one of their houses to another at 2:20 a.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 25) on Sohier Street when a concerned caller notified police about three girls walking in the rain with no shoes on. The officer located them and gave them a ride to their destination.

Flooding

Several 9-1-1 callers alerted police last Wednesday (Aug. 25) to some dangerous flooding across Route 3A near the entrance to the Rose Hill subdivision. The flooding appears to have been caused by an overwhelmed catch basin and detention basin system, police said. It was particularly hazardous for motorists traveling southbound who might have been going 50 mph and may not have realized how deep the water was. MassDOT installed temporary signage to alert motorists to the danger.

Weymouth MVA

Cohasset police assisted Weymouth police in locating the motorist and car involved in an accident in Weymouth last week. Weymouth had the plate number that came back to a Cohasset address. Police located the car, a 2001 Nissan Altima, that had some damage and identified the 30-year-old motorist. She will be dealing with the Weymouth police for leaving the scene, police said.

MV STOP/Summons

A 38-year-old Scituate woman is being summonsed for operating after license suspension and failure to stop for a stop sign following a traffic stop last Thursday (Aug. 26) at 6:07 a.m. on Beechwood Street. Police said the woman, who was driving a 2006 Saab, went through the stop sign at Beechwood and Doane streets without stopping. A registry check revealed her license had been suspended for failure to pay a traffic ticket. Her car was towed.

Counterfeit bill

Detectives are following up on the apparent passing of a counterfeit $10 bill at the Dunkin Donuts at Leo's Gulf Station last week. A 22-year-old employee at that Dunkin Donuts called police at 7:32 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 26) about what appeared to be a fake $10 bill and was not sure who passed the bill. Police said the bill does appear to be counterfeit.

Stolen checkbook

Police are investigating the apparent theft of five checks from the owner of a Ripley Road business. The checks were later forged and cashed for a total of $1300 at various Stop & Shop supermarkets, police said. Two were cashed at the Stop & Shop at the Southern Artery in Quincy and two in Hingham. Where the fifth was cashed is still undetermined. The woman did not realize the checks were missing until her bank statement arrived. She had recently had work done at her store by a contractor. Detectives are following up.

Prescription

A 42-year-old Cohasset woman is being summonsed to court on charges of obtaining a prescription by fraud and possession of a Class B substance. Police said the woman's 47-year-old estranged husband sought to fill his prescription for Adderall at a local pharmacy. He reported the incident to police when the pharmacy advised him that his prescription had been picked up. Police said when contacted she turned in the remainder of the 30-pill prescription to the police department.

Tire jack

A tire jack that had apparently fallen off of another vehicle caused a flat tire in a 1992 Dodge Spirit that was being operated by a 22-year-old Rockland man last Friday (Aug. 27) on N. Main Street. Police think the tire jack fell off a trailer. The motorist notified police and also contacted AAA.

Warrant

A 48-year-old Scituate man was arrested on a warrant following a traffic stop at South Main Street and Depot Court on Friday (Aug. 27) at about 7:03 p.m. An officer on patrol conducted a random check on the plate of the 2005 Dodge Ram truck that revealed the registered owner had a warrant for his arrest for town bylaw violations out of Scituate.

High beams

The car behind was having high beam trouble but the 2004 Audi in front thought it was road rage and pulled into the police station last Friday (Aug. 27) at 8:10 p.m. Police were able to resolve the issue to the satisfaction of both motorists when it was determined the second vehicle was indeed having issues with its high beams.

Dog vs. Dog

A caller reported she was walking her small 10-lb. dog on Bancroft Road when another woman who was walking five pit-bull-like dogs lost control of one of the dogs that then attacked her dog. The call came in at 5:48 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 28).

Water ban lifted; voluntary advisory in effect

On Wednesday night, the Water Commission voted to remove the mandatory water ban and return to a voluntary water advisory. That means water conservation is recommended, particularly when it comes to outdoor watering.

"I said before we would need a monsoon (to lift the ban) and while we did not actually get one, it sure seemed like it," said Chris Seebeck, water commission chair.

The mandatory water ban was put into place in late August based on the lack of precipitation this summer and was a requirement of the water department's permit. The very next week rain started to fall.

Rainfall was recorded for the month of August at 6.33 inches, 50 percent above the history normal. More striking is the extensive rainfall occurred over a five-day period.

The heavy rainfalls added more than 18 inches of water to the reservoir.

BACK TO SCHOOL

Three staff positions remain open, but Walsh said she is hopeful to have them filled by school opening.

Walsh is aiming to have this year, her last year with the Cohasset School district, be a positive one.

"Every first day of school is a chance for a new beginning," Walsh said.

Joseph Osgood School

Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan can't wait to get the students in the brand-new STEM lab, a gift from the PSO. The high-tech classroom is outfitted to bring the science, technology, engineering and mathematics (hence, STEM) portions to life in a highly visual and hand-on way.

"It's very rare to have a primary school STEM lab, so we're really, really excited for that," Sheehan said. Last year, the Cohasset Education Foundation funded a similar lab at Deer Hill School.

Sheehan said the lab includes tons of technology: a SMART board, a SMART table, a document camera and a microscope. Because science devoted classrooms are so rare at the primary level Sheehan said they couldn't find child-size lab tables.

"We had to buy the big ones and cut the legs off!" Sheehan said. "Our hope is we can really generate interest and passion for science with the younger ones. We're very grateful to the PSO."

Osgood School will welcome 434 young minds to the pre-K to second grade classrooms on Tuesday. Several new instructional aides and a new instructional technology teacher are coming on board.

First- and second-grade students will begin school on Tuesday, while kindergarten students will have an opportunity to get acquainted with their teachers and classrooms on Tuesday and Wednesday during orientation and screening. They will delve into their regular school routine on Thursday, Sept. 9.

While there are always some tears shed on the first day of school by a handful of children and parents of little ones, Sheehan said the whole school staff is there for support. All the teachers and staff line up outside to greet the students on the first day.

"We have a pretty good system in place," Sheehan said. "We're looking forward to a great year."

Deer Hill School

One of the goals of the Deer Hill School faculty is to get kids ready for the world of tomorrow. The third, fourth and fifth graders have learned the basics at Osgood and are ready to tackle more complex issues.

Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara said more than ever curriculum content must be taught within the context of 21st century themes, such as global awareness and environmental literacy.

"Our students are growing up in an age where information, media, and technology advancements are outpacing traditional teaching methodologies, and I'm proud of our faculty as they deliberately promote 21st century learning and innovation skills in their lesson planning," said deChiara.

Most of the faculty spent part of the summer taking courses and workshops to stay keep current on best instructional practices, deChiara said.

The school, which houses the third, fourth and fifth grade, is expecting 385 students on Tuesday.

As a new initiative to help the faculty promote authentic problem-solving across all disciplines, the school is inviting professionals from the community who represent the various school disciplines to engage in a dialogue.

"Teachers will have the opportunity to ask questions and learn about methods of inquiry for different fields," said deChiara. Deer Hill is still looking for participants for this program, call the Deer Hill office to find out more.

The community and students will welcome several new faces to Deer Hill on the first day. Mary Mastromarino has taken on the role of school nurse. Danielle Kent is a new special education teacher for the fourth grade. Maika Massari is a new third-grade teacher.

Middle-High School

Cohasset's largest school – the Middle-High School – will welcome about 700 to its just waxed halls on Tuesday.

Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini is looking forward to introducing several new faculty members to the school population.

"I'm excited about all the new teachers we have on board. I think they'll bring a varied perspective to the school and the classroom. I'm excited about the new opportunities they'll bring for the students," Antolini said.

Several of the highlights include: the Latin program's return after a year-long hiatus, several new courses across the disciplines and, after uncertainty last spring, the middle school music program will have a dedicated teacher.

This fall, for the first time, the middle school and the high school will have their own language labs — thanks to donations from the Cohasset Education Foundation.

"More students in our language department will spend more time in the labs and that's a good thing for everyone," Antolini said.

Antolini expects the students this year, as they have in past years, to achieve success academically and in co-curriculum activities.

"We have a rich tradition of students doing well," Antolini said.

Each year Antolini looks forward to "being surprised" by the students.

"I love seeing all the students participating and doing different things I never thought they would or could do. The level of talent these students display at times astounds me," Antolini said.

The first day of school will be a busy one for the entire school population. After a homeroom period where administrative tasks are handled, the students will go to each and every one of their classes for the semester. In addition, the administration will hold assemblies with each grade level to welcome them back and re-orient them to school life.

On a practical level, morning at the middle-high school can be jam-packed. Antolini asks parents dropping off to use one of two locations. If coming up the main driveway, the school asks parents to use the middle school entrance for drop-off. If arriving via the parking lot/Alumni Field entrance, drop off near the Superintendent's Office.

Principals share memories of a First Day of School

We asked each of the principals to share a first day of school memory, as teachers or students. Here's what they said:

"I'm starting my tenth year at Osgood and every year the first day of school has been joyous. I remember them as very positive. We always have the whole staff outside supporting everyone. Back when I was a kid I remember being excited about my back to school clothes and my new lunchbox."

— Janet Sheehan, Osgood principal

"Here's a vivid memory from the first day of school for me – just starting kindergarten, I had had chicken pox. The marks were still all over my face, but the doctor said I wasn't contagious, so my parents sent me! I was shy enough to begin with, but that made for a pretty horrendous introduction to school. To this day I give them a hard time for that decision."

— Jennifer deChiara, Deer Hill principal

"It was the first day of my college orientation and before the program started I decided to run this three-mile loop and get back in time for breakfast. I got lost, so 12 miles and an hour and a half later I ended up back at school. I had missed breakfast and the start of orientation. It was not a very promising start to my college career."

— Joel Antolini, Middle-High School principal

Lewis says firing linked to son's SPED fight

Former school employee loses battle for job

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I will not apologize to anyone for standing up for myself."
— Peggy Lewis, former school secretary

For more than a year, Peggy Lewis has fought the school's decision because she believes her firing was unwarranted.

The school department and Lewis, who was represented by the Cohasset Teachers' Association, spent eight work days spread over seven months hearing the specifics of events leading up to Lewis's dismissal and individual school employees' perspective on those events.

In early August, an independent arbitrator affirmed the school's decision to let Lewis go thereby closing the book on what became a saga for both parties.

In the decision's wake, Lewis still believes she was unfairly treated and maintains she did not deserve to lose her job.

Lewis had worked at the Cohasset Middle-High School since December 2005. Until September 2008, she was the sole secretary in the front office of the high school. During the 2008-2009 school year, Lewis served as secretary in the guidance office. In April 2009 her employment was terminated.

This is not the first time a conflict between the Cohasset Public Schools and Lewis has made the news. In 2007, the Lewis family sought to remove their youngest son, then a seventh-grader at the middle school, from his special education program. The school district disagreed with that action and took steps to keep the Lewis boy on his special education plan. The culmination of the issue was a Superior Court trial in Dec. 2007.

The court ruled Cohasset Schools could keep Lewis's son on his special education program against his parents' wishes. After his eighth-grade year Lewis's son left Cohasset Schools to attend Xaverian High School, a private school.

With the arbitration behind her, and no hope of getting her job at Cohasset Schools back, Lewis said she now has nothing to keep her from speaking out.

"(My firing) has to do with one thing and one thing only and that's the special education trial for my son," Lewis said in a recent interview.

With the arbitration proceedings concluded, Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini is ready to move on.

"I think the arbitrator's decision was fair and she considered both sides. We can now move on from this," Antolini said this week.

The Cohasset Teacher's Union declined to comment on the case.

'Irretrievable breakdown'

Because Lewis was part of a union, the Cohasset Teachers' Association, she had the right to seek a binding arbitration hearing to determine if she was fired for just cause. It was the arbitrator's job to sift through testimony and documentation to determine if there was just cause for Lewis to be terminated, and, if not, what should be the remedy.

The arbitrator's decision cited an "irretrievable breakdown" in the working relationship between Lewis and Antolini as one of the primary basis for her decision.

In the decision — provided to the Mariner by Lewis — the arbitrator, Tammy Brynie, notes the "starkly different narratives" presented by the two parties' counsels.

But, Brynie's decision found both sides showed a deteriorating relationship between principal and secretary since the special education trial in 2007.

The arbitrator found both Antolini and Lewis showed mistrust and suspicion with each other, and each interaction was colored with those feelings.

Over the course of the eight days of the arbitration hearing, several incidents were discussed in detail including a denial of unpaid vacation days in April; training for Lewis's job as guidance secretary; complaints of harassment and retaliation; and the loss of a $4,000 stipend job.

Over the year-and-a-half period when Lewis worked for the schools after the special education trial she filed several internal and external complaints.

Lewis filed a complaint with the Office of Civil Rights alleging she was being retaliated against following the trial for exercising her freedom of speech. The Office of Civil Rights found she went too far in her speech, particularly in a radio appearance on the "Nightside with Dan Rea" program.

Lewis filed two harassment complaints in the spring of 2009 claiming Antolini was harassing her in the workplace. According to the complaint documents, actions rising to the level of harassment were not found, but it was found that Lewis was treated differently following the trial.

What's next

Despite the several means Lewis has taken to correct what she saw as a wrong, she has yet to have been affirmed.

She can't explain it, but in spite of the lack of affirmation, she stands by her assertion she was retaliated against for fighting for what she felt was right for her son's education.

"I stated then that is was our right to do what was best for our son and the school overstepped their bounds and took our parental rights away from us, and I do not change my mind on that," Lewis said.

She said the different treatment of her as an employee began the day after she returned to work after the special education trial.

Lewis said, as a parent, she did not see an alternative when it came to fighting for what she thought was best for her son and his education.

"I lost (at the trial), but I slept easy at night because I fought it," Lewis said.

Lewis does not apologize for taking the actions she did in or since her son's special education situation.

"I will not apologize to anyone for standing up for myself," Lewis said.

For Lewis, it's unclear what's next for her.

"I did a damn good job there. I don't deserve to be out of work," Lewis said. "I'm going to take my chances, and apply for my jobs."

The Mariner submitted a request for the associated legal cost of the arbitration for the schools on Monday, but has not heard back. Under public records law the school has ten days to fulfill a request.

Paraprofessionals pay restored

Return to salary pay is $38K more than budgeted

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the Cohasset Schools' paraprofessionals it may have seemed like déjà vu on Wednesday night.

More than a half a dozen of the school employees, who primarily serve as support staff for special education students, came out to hear the School Committee's discussion on their pay.

They walked away with a restoration of their salary pay, with a 2-1/2 percent increase over last year. The School Committee walked away with a commitment to pay the increase, a $38,000 unbudgeted amount.

The issue has been on the School Committee's radar since last fall. Days before the school year began last year, the paraprofessionals were informed their benefits and the way they had been paid for decades was changing. They were to become hourly employees, instead of salaried.

By December, after several meetings with the committee, the decision was overturned and the paraprofessionals returned to the way they were being paid.

This summer, a memo was sent from Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh to all the paraprofessionals and aides informing them of the change from salary to hourly pay, change to benefits, and what their hourly rate would be.

The new hourly rates, according to the memo, reflected a $1 per hour increase for instructional paraprofessionals and a 2-1/2 percent increase for clerical and activities aides.

As a result of the changes, some paraprofessionals would have seen a $1000 reduction from last year.

"It seemed last year (the change in pay structure) was a rather arbitrary move. I couldn't figure out why it was made," said School Committee member Jeanne Astino. "The bottom line is our employees should be treated fairly and with the respect and dignity they deserve."

Astino, who brought a written statement to the meeting, said many of the changes were "discriminatory." For example, not allowing long-time employees who have built up sick banks to accrue days each year until they have used up their days.

"It is a small amount of money for good will to retain them they way they were," Astino said.

To return the paraprofessionals to their salary rate, with a 2-1/2 percent increase over last year and with appropriate step increase, would cost the schools $38,685 over what had been budgeted for this fiscal year.

Collette McElhinney, a paraprofessional at Deer Hill School, said the hourly pay schedule could result in more uncertainty in weekly wages.

"We'll lose pay due to a delayed start, a snow day, an early release day. We'll also lose the consistency of pay that we've all come to rely on — that has an impact on us. We aren't paid a lot," McElhinney said.

The changes to sick-day accrual were also discussed by the paraprofessionals. Lynn Monaco, a paraprofessional, said that seven sick days a year, and not being able to accrue was "grossly inadequate."

"I know we're not a union, but (other union workers in the school system) can accrue up to 165 days," Monaco said. "Seven days is just not enough if you have a serious health issue."

After several motions and amendments, the School Committee voted to return the paraprofessionals to a salary pay schedule, paid in 21 equal installments, with a 2-1/2 percent increase over last year's salary as well as any eligible step increases. The vote was 3-0, member Paul Schubert abstained and vice chair Alfred Slanetz was absent.

The paraprofessionals in the audience offered thanks for the school committee.

As a final word, Superintendent Walsh cautioned the School Committee that this money they just voted to spend was not in the budget.

"You might not have the money. I just need to caution you on that," Walsh said.

School Committee chair Helene Lieb suggested a subcommittee, including a couple of paraprofessionals, be formed later this year to discuss the paraprofessionals' pay and benefits.

"Going ahead we need to have a plan that makes sense," Lieb said. "We need to honor the people who been doing so much a part of making our school system shine."

Boston Magazine puts CHS in top 20 public high schools

Rankings were based on data gathered from consulting school officials and websites, as well as the Massachusetts Department of Education.

Boston magazine named Cohasset High School one of the top 20 public high schools in Massachusetts in their September 2010 issue.

Boston Magazine crunched the numbers in an exclusive ranking of the best public schools and biggest values in the area. Rankings were based on data gathered from consulting school officials and websites, as well as the Massachusetts Department of Education.

Determining factors of the school rankings includes MCAS scores, SAT scores, per pupil spending, student to teacher ratio, graduation rate, percent of students who continue into college, as well as amount of sports teams and clubs. George Recck, director of the Math Resource Center at Babson College, calculated mean scores for each data category and then ranked schools based on their distance from the average.

Cohasset residents in Jimmy Fund walk

Twenty-four residents from Cohasset will walk up to 26.2 miles along the historic route of the Boston Marathon in the 22nd annual Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk on Sept. 12. They will be among the more than 8,000 walkers expected to participate with the collective goal of raising more than $6.5 million for lifesaving cancer research and care for adult and pediatric cancer patients at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund.

Cohasset walkers include: Sheila Adley, Allyson Andrews, Maureen Chamillard, Carolyn Coffey, Kristina Coffey, Emily Coggins, Aniko Haber, Kathleen Hansen, Donna Hayden, Jeri Herman, Zachary Herman, Jenna Herman, Susan Leighton, Kate Linhart, Jennifer Ognibene, Jean Patterson, Kristan Pavona, Lisa Pratt, Lisa Rosen, Carol Ryan, Patrice Smith, Cheryl Stelljes, Jennifer Thomas and Ellen Wilson.

Presented by Hyundai and its Eastern Region dealers, the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk is the only event, other than the Boston Marathon itself that is sanctioned by the Boston Athletic Association to use the official historic marathon route from Hopkinton to Boston.

"We are grateful to the thousands of determined walkers who are committed to raising funds for cancer care and research," says Ann Beach, director of the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk. "The money raised by the walkers directly benefits local patients as well as people around the world as top doctors and researchers utilize the successes achieved at Dana-Farber." The Walk has raised more than $66 million since its founding in 1989.

Walkers may choose to walk one of four routes: the entire 26.2-mile route, the Babson to Boston 13.1-mile route, the Boston College 5-mile route, or the 3-mile route with patients and their families starting at the Dana-Farber campus. For those unable to participate on Walk day itself, there is a virtual walk option, allowing participants to fundraise online.

"We are grateful to the thousands of determined walkers who are committed to raising funds for cancer care and research."

— Ann Beach, director of the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk

Walkers are treated to a victory party at the Copley Square finish line complete with food and music. Walkers begin in Hopkinton between 5:30 to 7:30 a.m., at Babson College between 8:30 to11 a.m., at Boston College between 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., and in Boston at 2 p.m.

To register or make financial contributions for the 22nd annual Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk, visit www.JimmyFundWalk.org or call (866) JF-1-WALK.

The Jimmy Fund, an official charity of the Boston Red Sox, supports the fight against cancer at Boston's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, helping to raise the chances of survival for children and adults with cancer around the world. Since 1948, the generosity of millions of people has helped the Jimmy Fund (www.jimmyfund.org) save countless lives by furthering cancer research and care.

SCHOOL DAYS

Hello Cohasset and Happy Labor Day Weekend. It does not seem possible that the summer went that fast. I want to send out best of wishes to all students and faculty of schools that started or will be starting soon a fantastic school year. I also want to send a reminder (to myself as well) to remember that the school buses, walkers and bike riders are back in action and we all need to SLOW DOWN! Respect those who are doing their jobs in reminding us of this.

I also had another message to ask all parents and children to remember the large number of food allergies that so many have. When packing lunches and snacks, please work hard to keep the nuts, peanut butter and other foods that could trigger a reaction out of the lunchbox and save it for home.

Make sure to stay safe this weekend while celebrating the last hurrah before school, have fun with family and friends and most of all, make those awesome memories that will last a lifetime. Send in any of the stories, celebrations and photos to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm to aroundtown-cohasset@yahoo.com

ANNIVERSARY

I want to take this time to send a special congratulations wish to my husband, Bob as we celebrate our 22nd wedding anniversary today, Sept. 3rd. It has been a journey filled with joy, sometimes with sorrow and sadness and yes, even frustration with each other! (ya think?) Each day together is a new day and today, I want to say thanks for the last 22 years and here's to many more to come!

WELCOME ELLA ROSE!

Ella and her parents will be spending Labor Day in Cohasset, where she will be greeted by lots of family including great-grandparents Anne and Frank Evans and Jeri O'Connell.

NEW ARRIVAL

Thank Heavens for three wonderful Girls....Big sisters Gracyn and Peyton Lord welcome with love: baby sister Riley Elizabeth Lord, who tipped the scales at 7 pounds, 14 ounces and measured 19-3/4 inches long, when she was born July 19th at South Shore Hospital. Proud parents are David and Jennifer Lord; Riley Elizabeth is and granddaughter to David and Irene Lord of Cohasset and Darlene Spignesi of Connecticut. Congratulations Riley Elizabeth on your arrival and to your family who are blessed and thrilled to welcome you.

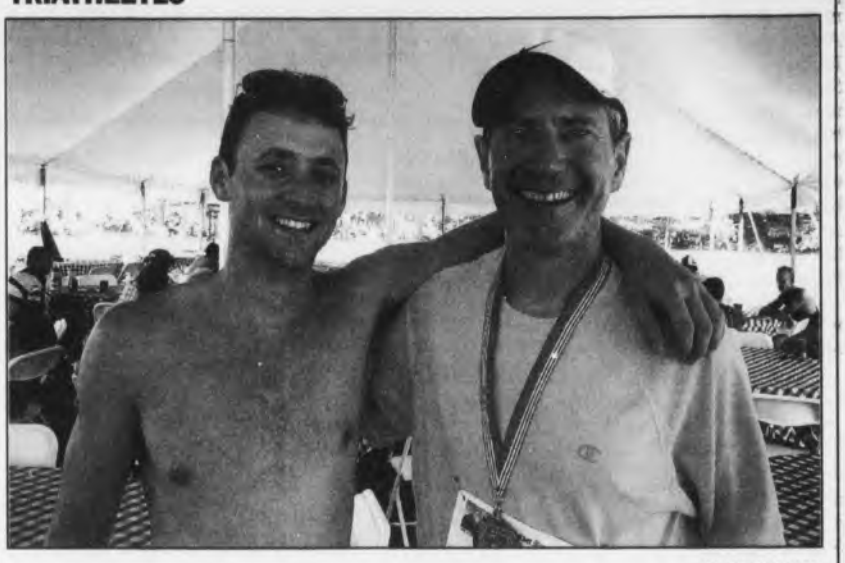
If you do not have email or do not know how to scan photos or send them via email, you can drop your glossy photos off at the Cohasset Mariner "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.



The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

That is all the news for this week. I want to remind everyone that news is always welcome and can include celebrations, upcoming events, photos, stories and anything that you would like to share with our Cohasset community. Please send it all in each week no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Sunday, Sept. 26 from 1-5 p.m. everyone is invited to go nowhere fast, as part of the First Annual Spin-a-thon for Integrative Therapies at South Shore Hospital. There are walks, runs, hikes and bike rides to help build a world without cancer — this is a little different — with this "a-thon" you hop on a spin bike and stay in one place as you spin your way to helping create a better quality of life for those living with cancer.

The Spin-a-thon will take place in the parking lot of the South Shore Athletic Club (under a tent) off Route 3A in Cohasset (next to the Greenbush station). First Spin Session begins at 1 p.m. Riders can choose from one to all four of the one-hour spin sessions led by four local spin instructors. Both individual and team relays are encouraged to participate. Register NOW at www.active.com

There will be prizes for best costume; best team name, and most money raised. Thanks to many generous sponsors there will be food, music, chair massage and a raffle.

Generous bike sponsors include the South Shore Athletic Club; YMCA Hanover; Sports Specific Fitness and USA Fitness.

Dana-Farber/Brigham and Women's Cancer Center in Clinical affiliation with South Shore Hospital offers patients Integrative Therapies to assist with their care and comfort. The South Shore Hospital program includes therapeutic massage, Reiki, yoga and exercise to help healing, relieve stress and better manage side effects associated with cancer treatment.

For more information on how to sponsor or participate in this great event contact Cindy at Mariposa Massage, 617.688.6304.

Lunch with the author at Buttonwood Books

The author and her sisters come from a family in which many of the women have died of ovarian cancer at a young age.

Buttonwood Books & Toys is will host Lunch with the Author at 11:30 a.m., on Friday, Sept. 17, at Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A... Author Amy Boesky will discuss her book, "What We Have: One Family's Inspiring Story About Love, Loss and Survival," a memoir about her family's experience with hereditary breast and ovarian cancer.

The author and her sisters come from a family in which many of the women have died of ovarian cancer at a young age. All three sisters opted for the doctor-prescribed solution of preventative surgery before the age of 35. Yet, despite this medical sword of Damocles, Boesky's book is more than a retelling of her family's hardship. It is a narrative of love, warm family relationships and all the joys and unexpected challenges of daily life. Boesky is an associate professor of English at Boston College. She has degrees from Harvard and Oxford, and has written several books for children and young adults. Twenty percent of the book sales from the event will be donated to Journey of Hope: The Campaign for Healing, Caring, and Comforting, a fundraising program in support of South Shore Hospital's cancer care program.

Advance reservations and tickets, which are $8 per person, are necessary. To make a reservation, call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

We Auto Know
by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman
ONE! TWO! THREE! RED LIGHT!
The next time you're sitting at a red light, consider this: Many traffic lights switch in response to how many cars are entering the intersection. Sometimes, an electrically charged wire spread in a loop beneath the pavement forms a magnetic field, which becomes disrupted as vehicles pass over the loop. Each disruption is recorded and sent to a control box at the intersection, where a computer analyzes the data. Persistent disruptions mean that many vehicles are passing through the intersection and the light should remain green. Cessation of disruptions signals the light to turn red. Lights do not stay green indefinitely because there is a maximum amount of seconds allowed before the computer switches the green light to red.
Clearly, understanding your driving experience is more complicated than just understanding how to drive. If you have questions about today's topic – or any questions about your car at all – then please call ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT today. Our ASE Master-certified technicians will be happy to offer some advice on every aspect of driving, from the inside out. We will provide the preventative maintenance for your vehicle. Give us a call today to prevent a big headache tomorrow. Call 781-925-3200 for an appointment today. Our address is 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.
HINT: Other ways traffic lights "count" vehicles at intersections involve the use of radio waves, microwaves, cameras and pressure sensitive plates.

This is not a swim to be tried by anyone on a whim, or without proper training and safety precautions.

"This is not for the average Joe to go do. Most of us are on the masters swimmers and ex-college swimmers," Burnett said.

While the group was informal they did take efforts to ensure the safety of everyone. Two center console boats and a sea kayak accompanied the swimmers to offer a place to rest and to alert other boaters of the swimmers. Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons was notified of the swim as well to let her know there would be 14 bobbing yellow swim caps in the harbor on Saturday. All the swimmers wore bright yellow swim caps for easy visibility.

By all accounts the conditions were ideal: a calm ocean, a blue sky and warm weather. The water temperature hovered at 60 degrees and all but one swimmer wore a full body wet suit.

"The conditions were incredible, the water was almost like glass," Burnett said.

The swimmers had planned to start their adventure from Sandy Beach, but high bacteria counts closed the beach for swimming last weekend. Instead, the swimmers waded in off the Bassing Beach sand bar into the harbor to begin their epic swim.

"It's a lot taller from the water," Baker said a bit of awe in voice.

"It was an amazing perspective to see up close bobbing from water," Upson said.

The youngest member of the swim group was Cohasset resident Connor Green, 14. A fast and experienced swimmer, Connor is part of the Attleboro Bluefish swim team. He has competed in the Cohasset Triathlon the last three years and did the Swim Across America event at Nantasket (a one-mile open water swim) earlier this summer. But, the swim to Minot Light was his longest open water swim yet.

While a little nervous setting out on the swim – the shallow water in the harbor, the little bit of chop out in the open ocean – Green said the adventure was worth it.

"It's something I have always wanted to do," Connor said. "I got to touch Minot Light."

Open water swimming is vastly different from swimming in a pool, but the participants said they'd like to be able to get out on the open ocean more.

"In the open water there's no walls, no painted stripes, no worrying about the senior swim class coming in. You put your head down and go. For me, it's a much more enjoyable way to swim," said Dave Dornaus, a Hingham resident, Ironman triathlete and professional swim coach in Boston.

"I think we knew this was pretty unique, pretty special. The conditions really helped and knowing everyone there could do it. There was a comfort level with everyone's ability," Dornaus said.

After a short break of bananas and water on the safety boats the swimmers jumped back in to complete their journey.

"We swam at a good pace, but not too fast. It was important to us to stay together in a pod. It was more about the adventure (than speed)," Baker said.

The return trip was a little easier with the incoming tide and waves going in the swimmers' favor.

"On the way back you looked back on the town — it was nice to see it from that vantage point," said Baker said.

The group completed the round trip swim in a little less than two hours.

"I see Minot Light every single day and I always wanted to be up close to it," Burnett said. "It was a great day, for sure. I think we'll try to make it an annual event."

"In the open water there's no walls, no painted stripes, no worrying about the senior swim class coming in. You put your head down and go. For me, it's a much more enjoyable way to swim."

SCHOOLS

The COMPASS Program sets sail for another great year!

This school based enrichment program provides quality care and engaging activities for Cohasset students, grades kindergarten through five. Each month focuses on specific themes of study; incorporating arts, music, kinesthetic activities, exploration, science and engineering.

The program's goals are to support the academic and social efforts of the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools and enrich student's needs and interests for learning.

During the months of September and October, COMPASS participants will study the oceans on their newly created sail boat "America II" While exploring the oceans, students learn about sea shanties, the history of whaling, sea creatures, knots and sewing. As part of this theme, students will also learn about sea turtles and what they can do to help these endangered animals.

To find out more about the COMPASS program, visit www.cohassetk12.org. Mr. Erick Amero at 781-383-8223 or email at eamero@cohassetk12.org

SEPAC prepares to start new school year

Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Council (Cohasset SEPAC) has been busy at work this summer with a new board, a website www.CohassetSEPAC.org and brochure.

They are working hard at signing monthly presenters to the First Tuesday of the Month meetings. Cohasset SEPAC's first meeting will be Sept. 14, from 9:30 to 11:15 a.m., a week later than usual in order to ease the first week of school commotion, at the Paul Pratt Library directly after Osgood School drop off time. Coffee and bagels will be served.

Dr. Denise Messina, the Cohasset School District's Director of Student Services will explain what Special Education is, how a student is identified as needing services, transitioning from Early Intervention to an Individual Education Plan (IEP) or 504 plan, and the range of services beyond the regular classroom. This is a great informational workshop for parents and guardians of younger children and children just brought to CARE teams or with new diagnosis.

The new name Cohasset SEPAC hopefully will clarify what a Special Education Parent Advisory Council advises on. Check out the website to learn about how they can help you help your child learn. Information is added weekly to the website.

If you would like to be notified of professional speakers coming to Cohasset or speaking on the South Shore pertaining to learning and special education email Diane Herth at CohassetSEPAC@gmail.com and they will add you to their weekly or bimonthly notification list.

One of the most dramatic changes to the course was the addition of a scenic, 600- foot-long, custom-built bridge on the eighth hole that is complete with built-in tee boxes.

Cohasset Golf Club completes extensive renovation

Central to the vision of the newly refurbished course was raising three fairways to allow for better drainage, resulting in a more enjoyable golf experience for members and guests.

The Cohasset Golf Club, one of the oldest and private clubs in New England, has completed a multi-million dollar renovation.

The Cohasset Golf Club, originally established in 1894 as a six-hole course and modest cottage — today boasts a restored 18-hole championship Donald Ross course, driving range, four lighted tennis courts, instruction by some of golf and tennis pros, and a modern clubhouse complete with gourmet dining and banquet rooms.

The golf course renovations, spanning three years from inception to completion — were unveiled to the Club's members earlier this spring. Central to the vision of the newly refurbished course was raising three fairways to allow for better drainage, resulting in a more enjoyable golf experience for members and guests. Furthermore, one of the most dramatic changes to the course was the addition of a scenic, 600- foot-long, custom-built bridge on the eighth hole that is complete with built in tee boxes adding to the unique character of the course.

"To maintain the historical significance of the course, we maintained the putting greens, tees and bunkers just as they were first designed by legendary golf architect Donald Ross," said Pat Drexel, president of Cohasset Golf Club. "However, we transformed the fairways to be firmer and elevated in such a way that they drain and channel water much more efficiently than in the past."

"The Cohasset Golf Club is steeped in history and tradition, and is now more than ever a gem among the area's golf courses," said Drexel. "The course lives up to Ross's ideal courses in that it, in Ross's own words, 'presents a test of golf for the everyday golfer and the first class player.'"

Drexel also notes that the club offers a venue for private golf outings as well as tournaments.

The Cohasset Golf Club is a private course that also offers social memberships that include limited golf opportunities as well as access to its driving range, tennis courts, and restaurant.

For more information about membership opportunities at Cohasset Golf Club contact josie@cohassetgc.org. For information about holding your next outing at Cohasset Golf Club contact tina@cohassetgc.org.

EDITORIAL

'Back to the Future'

Last week, Nick At Night (Nick@Night) on the Nickelodeon channel featured the "Back to the Future" trilogy about a young man's adventures traveling to the future and back and then back again. The trips were possible because of an eccentric scientist who made a New Age time machine out of an ordinary car.

Chances are the network's goal was to pull in viewers.

Yet the Nick@Night's execs made a timely decision in choosing the Michael J. Fox flicks.

Most of the kids who watched the movies last week are at this moment climbing into their own time vehicles with the dial set for the future.

Yet the landing is not targeted to a fictional time ahead, but to their own real-life destination.

A new school year is starting, and students are on board and heading back to prepare for their future.

The launch is not easy. Setting off in September for the future does not hold the same draw as summer past, when the biggest challenge was having enough sun block and gas money to go to the beach.

No matter what kids say, the changes that take place due to the catalyst of education are as remarkable as a forward-thinking genius building a time machine.

Children begin school as… children. Learning colors, shapes, and how to read is sandwiched neatly between recess and school vacations. Kids transformed into graduating seniors are still kids, but kids equipped to travel successfully to financially sustaining jobs, higher education, or a career in the arts, able to begin navigating adult life with maturity and compassion.

This is true if things go well.

For some kids, the time machine breaks down because of troubles that have nothing to do with school. Some students carry much heavier burdens than a packed book bag and need to learn how to shift away from these issues to reach their goals.

The start of a school year is an opportunity for students to take inventory of the beliefs they hold, because beliefs form the attitude that shapes actions, and actions lead to consequence. A positive attitude leads to desirable consequences.

Attitude is more important than facts, because attitude changes facts.

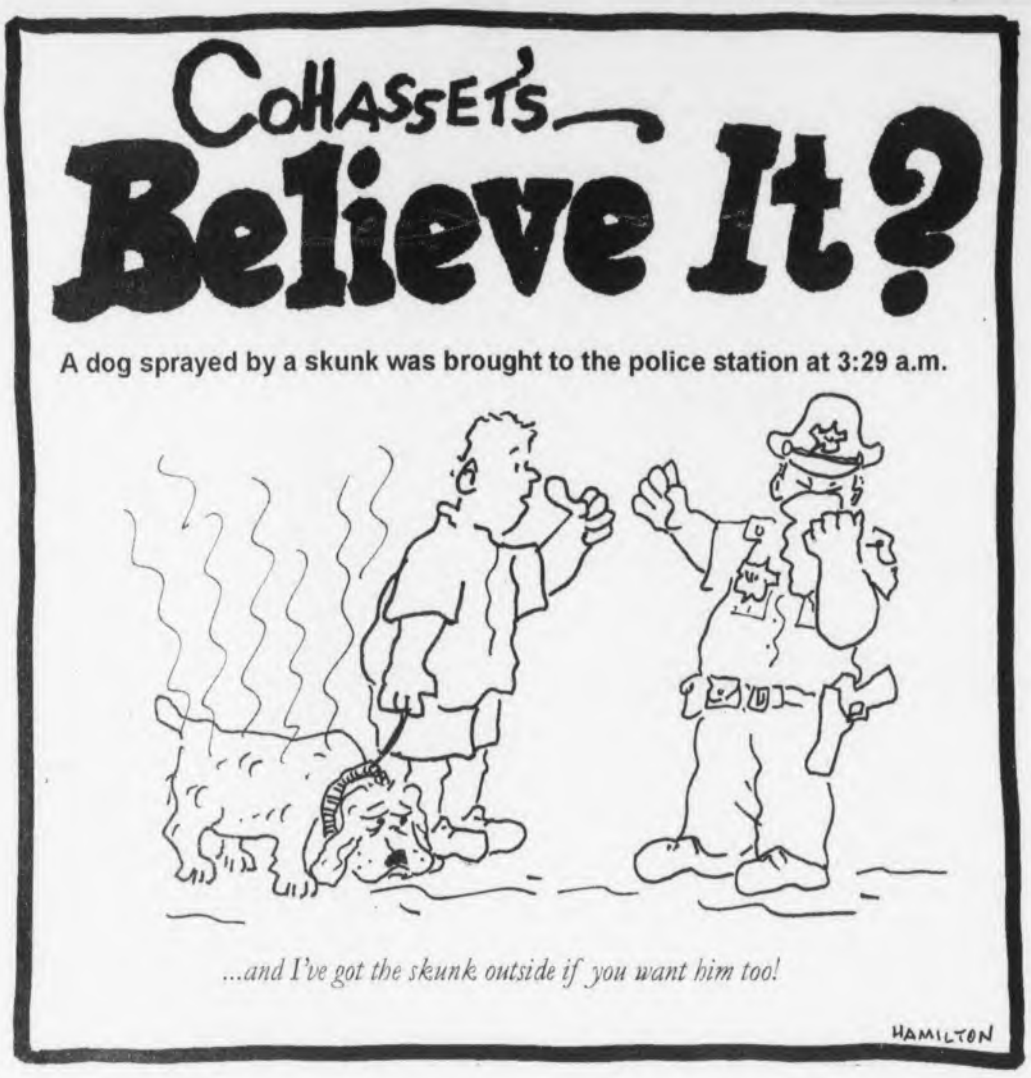
If a student realizes he or she is being locked into the past by negative beliefs, change is an option.

It is hard to do this alone.

A dedicated mentor such as a school counselor, teacher, coach, or spiritual leader can help. There are also family counseling centers that offer guidance.

The seniors who are the Class of 2011 probably wish they could take a ride in a car with the capacity to zoom into the years ahead for a glimpse of what will be.

The best vehicle to the future is visualizing the targeted destination and creating a specific step-by-step plan of how to get there.



No matter how long a negative pattern has existed, this pattern can be changed.

Chart your journey, clear your sight, and stick with it.

Obstacles are what we see when we take our eyes off the goal.

Welcome back to the future.

Poll results on the Facebook fiasco

The final results are in from our on-line poll about what our web visitors think should be the result of the Cohasset School Facebook fiasco. (Please note, last week the wrong pie chart ran with the poll).

As you can see from the pie chart – 47 percent of the votes were for an explanation of administrator salaries and 31 percent said nothing should be done and that the story on Dr. Siple was blown out of proportion. As of Thursday morning, there were 124 votes in our poll.

What do you think should be the result of the Cohasset School Facebook fiasco:

- School policy developed for faculty Facebook postings (15 votes).
- Explanation and examination of administrator salaries. (58 votes)
- Effort to change perception of Cohasset stereotype (6 votes)
- Nothing, the story has been blown out of proportion (38 votes)
- Other (7 votes).

Total votes: 124 (as of Thursday morning).

We have the ability to conduct polls as often as we want. Be sure to visit: www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset to vote in our weekly polls. We hope to more of you will participate in our polls. Voting only takes a minute.

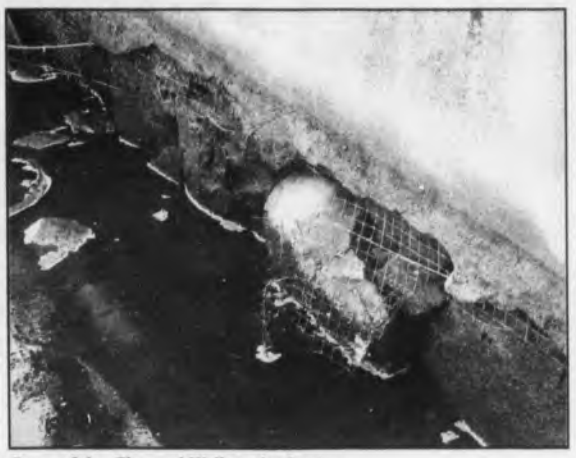
Keeping you up to date on Jacobs Meadow



MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project — Just to keep our readers up to date on the Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project, we'll give you a brief summary of what has happened recently. In summary, this project will replace the collapsing channel walls at the American Legion building as well as remove the present three tide gates at the Cohasset Harbor with a new automated vertical sluice gate. The upshot will be to assist in getting storm water out of Jacobs Meadow substantially faster, tides permitting. In addition we will be able to introduce controlled amounts of salt water back into the meadow to begin to control the very invasive phragmites that have taken hold and support the potential rebuilding a proper salt marsh environment.

The specifications have been completed and have been bid by seven contractors. Their bids were open at a public meeting by the Town Manager last Thursday, Aug. 26th at 12:00 noon. Our engineers are currently analyzing the bids and checking the contractor's references. Once a contractor is selected, we will hold a pre-award meeting with that contractor to review their work plans and coordinate their work with the local residents and Town officials. We hope to make a contract award with one of these contractors very shortly. Once the contract is awarded, the contractor will make their plans to procure materials and begin work. The actual construction could start as early as the end of September.

For those of you who might ask a question about the reason for spending money for this project at this point in time, we thought the photos might give graphic testament to the nature of the situation. Compare the three photos of the same area of the channel over the last three years. All of the storm drainage from North Main and Forest Avenue nearly to Beachwood Street is collected and must pass through this channel. Any restriction of the flow in this channel increases the chance of flooding in Jacobs Meadow and in any of the areas that depend upon James Brook and Stewart Brook for storm drainage. That's a large part of Cohasset. Also, just to add a bit to the urgency, we have also included a photo of a rock that is in the process of removing itself from the wall on the American Legion side of the wall. This wall is also in close proximity to the Legion building foundation.

Revitalization, Phase III — Back in July we mentioned that the Town had submitted a grant request to undertake a new phase of Village Revitalization. We are referring to this as Revitalization Phase III, since the prior work was accomplished under two grants. The first was for $1.5 million and the second for $300 thousand. The new grant request is for $1.5 million and includes four areas of activity:

- Addition of more parking to the Town Parking Lot
- Improve the edge of the parking Lot along the rear of South Main Street
- Improve pedestrian and vehicular safety at the Ripley Road /Depot Court intersection
- Improve the Ripley Road business area infrastructure and link it closer with the Main St. / Depot Court business areas.

All of the storm drainage from North Main and Forest Avenue nearly to Beachwood Street is collected and must pass through this channel.

We have formed a Revitalization Committee that consists of representatives from the prior committee as well as people with knowledge of these areas. We'll keep you posted as we get information about our grant request.

HEALTH NOTES

Is good-looking food nutritious?

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Has nutritional value of common foods changed in our stores? Appearance has certainly changed significantly for the better but what about nutritive value, calorie count, etc?

What's in Your Lunch Bag? Now that the sun is losing its mixed blessings of providing tan and vitamin D or burn and blisters and as we begin to think about sending the kids off to school, another mixed blessing: its time to adjust our eating habits to a more conservative regimen. We hear much about eggs and salmonella. The numbers of eggs affected is small considering the numbers of eggs being produced. It's difficult to listen to the news about the billions of eggs now being produced and the problems with a few eggs and not feel concern about the supply. But in the context of the numbers of eggs available, the number of illnesses is vanishingly small. It's important to develop an understanding of our eating habits and adapt them to the accelerating pace of fall activity.

School lunches provide appropriate nutrition for most kids, but they have the drawback of being perceived as dull. We must therefore be clever about the useful supplements we can add to satisfactory diets, which will make them interesting and unique. One product that can be added to the listing of interesting foods is frozen grapes; kids love them, but six can kill a dog.

Has nutritional value of common foods changed in our stores? Appearance has certainly changed significantly for the better but what about nutritive value, calorie count, etc?

According to a recent article by Dr. Maurice McKeown "There is good reason to believe that the quality of natural foods, like fruit and vegetables, has undergone a dramatic decline. In other words, the food we ate 30 years ago contained more nutrients than the same items do today."

Much of the food supply system is now in the hands of conglomerates which control growth, manufacture, processing, distribution, handling and quality control including regulatory oversight of virtually every food product used by individuals in the U.S.

Crop farming in the US has changed from hundreds of farms growing a diversity of crops into few large farms of thousands of acres which, instead of practicing diversity as used in natural farming with crop rotation to restore nutrients in the soil, have largely converted to growing corn and other profitable edibles using vast amounts of chemical fertilizers. Corn oil provides the high fructose corn syrup for the great diversity of sweeteners consumed by soft drink industry including some advertised to be low calorie. High fructose corn syrup is the primary staple of the fast food/soft drink industry. And much of our fresh produce is imported.

In many ways, such a ubiquitous control of popular staples, the groceries which go into most shopping carts in supermarkets, allows us to ensure the freshness and good quality of the foods on which we depend for everyday meals. Seldom does one find things like onions, lettuce or tomatoes, which are no longer fresh or in good condition, and even bread is normally fresh because of constant oversight by attentive personnel.

With such surprisingly diverse selection at our supermarkets, we know proper foods are available in sufficient quantity for everyone. But a large fraction of our population fails to eat properly. Type II Diabetes is epidemic in our society. Obesity is no longer a problem only for those with low income. In the past, diets of the rural poor consisted of vegetable products, originally grown domestically but now may be grown in foreign countries and imported. They now appear on supermarket shelves as expensive luxuries so, it's easier for more people to consume fast foods high in calories but lacking essential nutrients.

And, oh yes; regarding sunlight, the government's present dietary recommendations for Vitamin D are 200 International Units a day up to age 50, 400 IUs to age 70, and 600 IUs over 70. But many advocate for supplementation in the winter of about 2,000 IUs per day and a dose of daily sunshine in the summer.

For more information call Tara Tradd 383-4116.

Back on track with sleeping routines

COMMENTARY

DENISE MESSINA

About 25 percent of children overall experience some type of sleep problem, ranging from difficulty falling asleep, waking, night terrors to more serious sleep disorders.

Among the delights of summer is the ability to disregard routine, however by the end of summer, the routine of school in September is welcomed in many households. With the start of a new school year, many parents are concerned about getting kids back on track with sleeping routines.

Recently, there has been much media attention on research regarding the relationship of school performance and sleep. Dennis Rosen, associate director of the Sleep Disorders Program at Children's Hospital Boston indicates that there is more and more data indicating that insufficient sleep has affect on cognitive ability and emotional and physical well-being. Dozens of studies on the relationship of poor school performance and student sleepiness were presented at the annual American Academy of Sleep Medicine (AASM) meeting in June. No surprise that easy access to personal technology and media, such as cell phones, computers and television in the bedroom, Facebook, iPods and video games, is implicated.

According to AASM, more than a third of elementary school age kids and 40 percent of adolescents have significant sleep complaints. About 25 percent of children overall experience some type of sleep problem, ranging from difficulty falling asleep, waking, night terrors to more serious sleep disorders.

To assist in the transition to the sleep routine required for the school schedule, it is suggested to wake up your children half an hour earlier each morning until they are on the school time schedule. In the morning, exposure to sunlight, morning sounds and aromas is helpful — don't let them retreat back to darkness and solitude. A good start to the day goes a long way. Being alert and available for learning is critical to positive school performance.

The importance of parent and school partnership is well understood. Students Services staff and parents alike are grateful to Sue Mavilia, outgoing Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Council president for her many years of leadership to PAC. After many years of service to Cohasset families and students, Sue has passed the baton to give attention to other obligations and interests.

Student Services announces a new Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Council (Cohasset SEPAC) Board. New officers are chair/president, Diane Herth; vice-president/treasurer, Claudia Russell; secretary, Helane Childs; Out-of-District Liaison, Ann Demick.

The new SEPAC has a website www.CohassetSEPAC.org and a new brochure. SEPAC will host 'First Tuesday of the Month' meetings. The first meeting will be Sept. 14, 9:30 to 11:15a.m. at the Paul Pratt Library directly after Osgood School drop off time. Coffee and bagels will be served. Topic: "Is Special Education the Right Service? (How a student is identified as needing services, transitioning from Early Intervention to an Individual Education Plan or 504 plan, the range of services beyond the regular classroom, parent rights and procedural safeguards.) I encourage you to participate and contribute your ideas to our Cohasset SEPAC. All parents are welcome at SEPAC Meetings.

In addition to the presentation and activities which SEPAC has planned, Cohasset Student Services will be hosting a series of nine parent morning workshops on topics related to resources, services and support of students with disabilities. Stay tuned for more information.

24-hour Labor Day weekend event

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The Tolman family of Cohasset and their many relatives and friends from near and far are looking forward to the upcoming 34th Annual Tolman Muscular Dystrophy Telethon Party at its new location – Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham.

The 24-hour event runs from 7 p.m. Sunday until 7 p.m. on Labor Day and residents of the entire South Shore community and beyond are welcome.

"Congregation Sha'aray Shalom has been unbelievably supportive and has bent over backwards to help make this year's MDA telethon event a huge success," event organizer Jay Tolman said. "Because of the large parking area, we are having additional activities for the kids on Monday, Sept. 6." These include two moonwalk jumpers and The Roaming Railroad train ride.

Supporters from Hingham, Cohasset, Weymouth, Braintree, Rockland, and other South Shore communities and beyond will participate in this 24-hour fundraiser for the Muscular Dystrophy Association during the upcoming Labor Day weekend. (See sidebar.)

While the change of location is quite involved logistically, Tolman said the larger footprint of the temple provides greater flexibility. "It all comes together," he said good-naturedly.

Tolman's father, John, 89, will fly up from Florida as always to help make the event a success by collecting donations and helping out wherever needed.

Peter Miller of Concord, Mass., participated in the first Tolman telethon party and has only missed a couple of them over the past 34 years.

"I've known Jay for a long time — so long that it's hard for me to remember a time when we weren't running a telethon every fall," Miller said. "I started helping him, not through some newly awakened altruism, but because Jay was my best friend — still is — and he made what might otherwise have been a simple fund-raising event one that was festive, fulfilling, and meaningful. He had this affect not just on me, but on anyone who was lucky enough to be swept into his considerable wake."

Miller recalls that people would often ask Tolman why he started running a fund raiser for MDA and why he continued to do so even when he moved from Hingham.

"They wondered, Did he have afflicted friends or relatives? Did he know anyone who had died from a disease? Was he himself ill? But no one was ever able to get a satisfactory answer out of him," Miller recalled. "I don't think he meant to be evasive; it's not in his nature. The truth is that I don't think he knew himself why this great and important responsibility so mattered to him.

"It has taken me nearly 40 years, but I think I have finally figured it out. And the answer is simple, yet clear to anyone who has ever met him:

'Astonishing' results

It is Jay's great kindness, his love of people, a basic goodness within him, and a natural inclination to always help others no matter what the personal cost. Simple, perhaps. But the results have been astonishing," Miller said.

Tolman recently became reacquainted through Facebook with a friend from his college days who had attended earlier telethon party events but who he hasn't seen since. "My friend made a large donation and said he hoped this would make up for the 30 years since that he has not been able to attend the event!" he said.

It all started in 1977, when Tolman and several friends decided to stay up and watch the Jerry Lewis Telethon in its entirety. During the telethon, they donated $50. Over the years, the number of supporters grew and the event expanded from a party in the Tolman family's backyard in Hingham into an annual community event held at Hingham Community Center since 1988. Tolman and supporters have raised more than $440,000 so far to support MDA initiatives.

Hingham resident Carolyn Antoine remembers the early days well. "Jay and I grew up in the same neighborhood and when he started his backyard telethons, we would go over and hang out. Over the years, we have become part of the Tolman telethon family," she said. "With my husband, Mike, being a firefighter, he would often go into Channel 5 and make a donation to the telethon on behalf of the Hingham Fire Department."

Antoine recalls being invited to MDA dinner functions and meeting Channel 5 personnel. "Each year we would get the call from New Jersey, when the Tolmans still lived there, and they would get us geared up for another exciting year of helping Jerry and his kids," Antoine said. "As part of Team Tolman, we all have our assigned tasks that we tend to, and now that the Tolmans live closer [after moving to Cohasset two years ago] somehow it all just seems to come together so easily."

'Lifelong friends'

The Antoine children, Rebecca and Josh, have grown up in the telethon family. "Every year, all the kids can't wait to see each other and help with set-up and collecting donations. They also enjoy the face painting, clowns and balloons, hoola hoop contests, dancing, eating, and just hanging out together," Antoine said. "When our children were young, the Tolman kids would stay overnight at our house until they were old enough to stay up and 'watch the stars' come out as part of the telethon party. Suffice it to say that the Tolmans and Antoines are lifelong friends!"

Jay and Jodi Tolman's daughter, Chloe, in her enthusiasm for supporting the event, has come up with yet another project to raise money for MDA. This year she is busy making colorful telethon wallets from duct tape. "Chloe made one for her mother first, and they really are nice," Tolman said with a smile.

.Despite its name, the event is not a phone bank but a major show of local support for the national Jerry Lewis MDA telethon.

Although no one makes phone calls, donations will be collected throughout this Hingham gathering in various ways — by children and adults collecting in front of the Community Center as usual according to tradition; by way of an on-site drive-through donation center at the temple; and by partygoers tossing a contribution into a large fishbowl at the temple. It's all about having fun while supporting a good cause.

Volunteers help the Tolmans organize the event, make homemade cookies, taco salad, and other tasty offerings, and post flyers throughout the community. It is truly a labor of love.

Volunteers

Miller is pleased to have maintained a connection with Tolman and the telethon event over the years. "Jay has created an epidemic of compassion, an outbreak of giving, a contagion for selflessness that resonates out from his closest friends, through his family, and into the community at large," he said. "And as that enormous circle has grown larger and more inclusive with each telethon, it has resulted in year after precious year of profound and staggering success as more and more people give more and more of themselves in what has become a determined and agonizing pursuit to defeat an insidious disease."

While raising money can be frustrating and, in some years, "difficult and dreary," Miller said, "as long as people are willing to give of themselves, invest their time and energy, and fight hard and long to save lives and reduce the suffering of so many, Jay, his friends, relative, and neighbors — as well as the strangers who just happen by and get caught up in the joy of giving — will all be here, welcoming anyone who is willing to join the fight, until the last chapter of this dreaded disease has finally been written."

Tolman attributes the fundraiser's continuous success to widespread support from Hingham and other South Shore residents, as well as those who travel from longer distances, some from out of state as his father does. Local businesses are also very supportive.

MDA-funded scientists have made great strides toward treatment or cures for neuromuscular disorders over the years, Tolman said.

"I have the privilege to be a board member of the local MDA chapter and I'm able to see and hear, firsthand, the results of everyone's hard work over Labor Day and throughout the year," Tolman said. "The patient services and research, funded by events like ours, are critical to providing support for families as well as the incredible breakthroughs that have occurred over the years, right here in the Boston area. We are entering a new era of hope."

Schedule of events

With the arrival of the long Labor Day weekend, it's time for the much-looked-forward-to annual 24-hour Tolman Muscular Dystrophy Association Telethon Party.

The fund-raising event, now in its 34rd year, is scheduled for Sept. 5 and 6 at an exciting new venue.

Instead of the usual Hingham Community Center location, the party will be hosted by Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main Street, Hingham. The Community Center is undergoing renovations

However, donations to the MDA will still be collected in front of the Community Center as usual, as well as at a drive-up donation center at the temple.

"It's a community event, and all are welcome!" event organizer Jay Tolman said.

This fun-filled fund-raising party runs from 7 p.m. Sunday until 7 p.m. on Monday, Labor Day. The event coincides with the annual Jerry Lewis MDA telethon.

Despite the name, guests have a great time, make donations, and watch the Jerry Lewis Telethon on a large-screen TV, but they do not make calls.

Participating in this popular event has become a tradition for many families living in Hingham, other South Shore communities, and even out-of-state.

"It's amazing to think back over the years of our MDA telethon event," Tolman said. "The support of my family and the compassion of our 'telethon team' — our volunteers who step up year after year — have kept this event alive. This, plus all the hard work of the kids collecting donations and their excitement about helping others is a wonderful thing to see."

Tolman offered "a special thanks" to the local businesses and vendors that provide raffle prizes and supply services year after year and all those who stop by to make a donation year after year. "I can't tell you what it means to so many," he said. "It's a big reunion with many new faces who join our efforts every year."

The party, which raises funds for MDA, begins at 7 p.m. Sunday. A lively, group of costumed, award-winning Irish Step Dancers will kick off the festivities, followed by more fun, delicious hot hors d'oeuvres, a DJ, dancing, games, prizes, raffles, and the showing of classic Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis comedies. WCVB-TV Channel 5 will stop by at the beginning of the party at 7 p.m. Sunday night for a live broadcast.

The event continues throughout the night as tireless and enthusiastic volunteers and supporters "Stay Up and Watch the Stars Come Out" from midnight to 8 a.m.

Wake-up call (for those who manage to catch a few winks Sunday night) is Monday from 9 to 11 a.m. A continental breakfast is served.

Labor Day festivities will include performances by Glenn Williams and his band, pony rides, clowns, two moonwalk jumpers, Del's Lemonade, The Roaming Railroad providing rides around the parking lot for fun-loving children and adults alike, balloon animals, raffles, T-shirts, face painting, and a giant cookout until the telethon party finale at 6 p.m.

The MDA is a voluntary health organization dedicated to eradicating more than 40 forms of the disease. The Association also provides comprehensive health care and support services, advocacy, and education.

Those who cannot attend the event but who wish to make a donation may send their contributions, with checks made payable to MDA/Muscular Dystrophy Association, to: MDA Telethon, c/o Jay Tolman, 3 Forest Circle, Cohasset, MA 02025. Donations may also be made online at www.tolmantelethon.com.

Proceeds from this year's party will be donated to the MDA in memory of former Hingham resident Richard Berberian Jr., son of Richard and Joan Berberian; former Weymouth resident John Fasci, Jr., son of John and Mary Fasci; and Mattie Stepanek, son of Jeni Stepanek, all of whom succumbed to the disease. "The spirit and courage of these young men and their families is an inspiration to us all," Jay Tolman said.

For more information about the event, raffle, how to make a donation, photos, and the history of the telethon party, visit www.tolmantelethon.com or call the telethon hotline at 609-468-6359 beginning Sun., Sept. 6.

Groundbreaking in September

Avalon to have a 'garden style'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"There is a fairly wide array of floor plans, building styles that I think will create a nice atmosphere."
— Scott Dale, Avalon

After a half a dozen years of waiting and working the Cohasset Avalon Bay apartment complex is set to break ground by the end of September.

The building permits have been issued, the final construction budget and design set is being prepared and the project is poised to go out to bid to find a construction company.

"We want to get as much building, concrete in the ground before the cold weather comes in," said Scott Dale, Avalon's vice president of development. He has been the project manager on the Cohasset complex since it was before the Zoning Board of Appeals for a comprehensive permit.

Avalon expects the first building of the 220-apartment complex to be ready for occupancy about nine months later after groundbreaking, so early summer 2011.

Avalon is a 40-B project. Under the state's affordable housing law, Chapter 40-B, towns must have 10 percent of their housing stock deemed affordable according to state standards.

Towns under the 10 percent threshold are susceptible to larger housing projects because 40-B allows development under flexible rules, if 20 to 25 percent of the new housing is affordable. Because the state encourages rental units, all the units in the Avalon complex will count toward Cohasset's 10 percent.

Dale describes the complex as a low-density garden style. The largest building will have 10 apartments, but most are smaller two-story buildings.

"There is a fairly wide array of floor plans, building styles that I think will create a nice atmosphere," Dale said.

There will be several town home-style rentals, some with two-stories, some with three stories. Some of the apartments will have a walk-out basement.

The complex will also include a clubhouse where the leasing office, fitness center, and resident lounge. There will also be an outdoor swimming pool and a large deck with an outdoor fireplace.

"It creates a nice amenity area," Dale said.

The entire development will be walk-able and include a perimeter recreational path.

"I'm very excited about this development, it's going to be one of the nicest communities we have," Dale said.

And for all the years the Avalon project has been in waiting to break ground, Dale hopes it has only improved the project. The project has been re-shaped to ensure it is up to current design standards.

The entrance to the Avalon development will be across from Good Sport. The current clearing of some vegetation just south of the future Avalon entrance is not the Avalon project and owned by another entity.

Earlier this summer, the Avalon project became a local initiative project (LIP), or friendly 40-B, when the town signed an application to send to the state. The switch to a LIP enabled Avalon Bay to fund the project with its own capital – and added 20 additional units to the project.

The apartment complex with 200-units received a comprehensive permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals over six years ago. The re-classification as a LIP, which basically means the project has the support of town officials, enables Avalon to self-fund the project. Under the comprehensive permit scenario, funding sources from the state, which have dried up due to the economy, are needed.

With the additional 20 units, Cohasset will likely meet the 10 percent affordable housing threshold required by the state law. Because the state encourages rental units, all 220-units will "count" toward the town's affordable housing percentage. Cohasset has hovered at about 2.8 percent (76 units) affordable housing stock for decades.

The complex will be sited on 62 acres off Route 3A. The current Avalon property is the former location of several manufacturing companies, most recently the Webb-Norfolk Conveyor, an airport conveyor belt manufacturer that occupied the site from 1975 to 1995. It was also the site of D.S. Kennedy, one of the world's leading antenna manufacturers in the 1950s.

Absentee Ballots available for State Primary

People should vote in person on Election Day if they are in town and able to come to the polls.

Absentee ballots for the State Primary on Sept. 14, 2010, are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, Sept. 13, 2010, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. People should vote in person on Election Day if they are in town and able to come to the polls. People may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, which ballot is requested, Democrat, Republican or Libertarian, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant. If a voter is Un-enrolled (Independent) he needs to choose a ballot and will remain un-enrolled after the primary. If you are enrolled in a party you must vote that ballot. If you wish to change your party affiliation it must be done on or before Aug. 25, 2010. Voters who are enrolled in a political designation may not vote in primaries.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by Sept. 14, 2010, to be counted.

"Right now everyone has an acute awareness of what's going on with the hurricane, but it is a good time to make sure you're prepared for an emergency."
— Fire Chief Robert Silvia

September is also National Disaster Preparedness Month and a time to make sure households are ready in case of emergency.

"Right now everyone has an acute awareness of what's going on with the hurricane, but it is a good time to make sure you're prepared for an emergency," Silvia said.

The MEMA website has information on how to build an emergency kit if the power is out for several days. Each kit will be unique to each family, but should include a portable radio, flashlight, extra batteries, a supply of non-perishable foods, along with bottled water, a first aid kit, extra prescription medication, and extra food and supplies for infants and pets.

Being prepared is not only about having supplies on hand, but also having a way to communicate with family members, a place to meet, and a person 'outside the area' to contact in case local phones are down.

To find out more on how to be prepared for a hurricane or other disaster, visit www.mass.gov/mema.

Batten down the hatches in the harbor

On Wednesday Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons said boaters were not yet lining up to take their boats out of the water.

"I think everyone is taking a wait and see approach," Gibbons said. She encouraged those boat owners who have a trailer and can easily haul their boat to do so before the story.

If boats are remaining in the water, it is a batten down the hatches, literally. Gibbons said boat owners should take some time before the storm hits to ensure their boat can weather the potential heavy rains and high winds. Bilge pumps should be checked for proper operation, anything that could blow or move around should be secured; sailboats should put extra ties on the mainsail.

Gibbons suggested all boats put one or two extra lines on their mooring for safety and chafing gear should be placed on mooring pennants.

"Fortunately it looks like it is a fast moving storm, so it is not going to linger," Gibbons said. "Cohasset is lucky to have a well-protected harbor anyway."

After the storm, Gibbons said boaters should check their boats for damage and bail out their dinghy or skiff.

Sitting down with the candidates

On Friday, Aug. 27, an editorial board consisting of publishers, editors and reporters from GateHouse Media New England's South unit and Cape Cod unit met with the six candidates – four Republicans and two Democrats – running in the Sept. 14 primary for the 10th Congressional seat. The stories on these pages are a result of those editorial board interviews.

On the Web:

Check out your Wicked Local website for video of each of the 10th Congressional candidates running in the Sept. 14 primary. Each candidate was given an opportunity to make opening remarks to the editorial board, which was videotaped.

Next week:

We sent questionnaires to each 10th Congressional District candidate in the Sept. 14 primary and those questionnaires will be used to put together candidate profiles, which will appear in next week's issue of the newspaper.

Also, we will be running endorsements next week for both the Democratic primary and Republican primary as a result of our editorial board meetings with the candidates.

Rob O'Leary:

Congress is broken down

By Benjamin Brown
BBROWN@CNC.COM

State Sen. Robert O'Leary, D-Barnstable, pointed to a need for improved political discourse within the nation, explaining that issues have become too tangled up in partisan attacks across Democratic and Republican lines. So much so, that a growing sense of inaction on critical issues in Washington has fueled the campaign for the 10th Congressional District.

"Congress is pretty broken down," said O'Leary. "We can't engage in the bigger partisanship that has tied this country up."

O'Leary said he would be a welcome change to the climate in Washington, bringing what he called a straightforward and honest approach to national politics.

As a candidate for the 10th Congressional seat, O'Leary said he's spent a lot of time developing relationships throughout the South Shore, Cape and Islands. In his travels, he's found that many issues remain similar throughout the area.

In Quincy, he's been speaking with Mayor Thomas Koch about city-specific issues. In surrounding towns throughout the area, he's been meeting with selectmen and state representatives to identify and target potential solutions to various and similar problems. In Marshfield and Scituate, he said he's been discussing seawalls with State Rep. James Cantwell, D-Marshfield.

"I've spent a lot of time moving up and down Route 3," he said. "I've been very much out there, active in the community and trying to develop relationships."

Just doing that has brought other issues to light.

"The traffic on Route 3 is brutal," he said. "A lot of times I've wanted to pull my hair out, frankly."

He's also been examining the issue of fishing and believes the industry needs help in order to prosper.

"It's under tremendous pressure," he said. "We need to preserve and protect and make sure we don't lose this industry."

He said he believes one way to do that is through sector management.

"It's an appropriate place to go, and it will organize (commercial fishing) in a way that makes sense to them," he said.

Still, he said the science surrounding sector management needs work to ensure corporations on the other side of the country don't take advantage of the fishing industry in Massachusetts.

O'Leary also chastised the national policy on immigration — or lack thereof — calling what exists stunningly convoluted and broken.

"Some are suggesting it's not an issue," he said. "It's an issue, and some want to make it a partisan issue. We don't have control of our borders."

O'Leary said the problem of immigration is neither a Democratic- or Republican-created problem, and suggested the nation look to the dozens of proposals to sort through the issue, but to do it carefully.

"We run an enormous risk if we move in the direction I think we're headed, and that is to slam the doors on people who are coming here," he said.

He also called renewable energy a complicated subject that needs promotion on both a commercial and personal scale, and said nuclear energy, wind energy and even natural gas has its place in an economy focused on a greener future.

William Keating:

Get people back to work

By Cathy Conley
CCONLEY@CNC.COM

Now he has his sights set on being the Congressman from the 10th District.

The district is a huge 934-square-mile swath of land that extends from Quincy to Provincetown, and Keating is trying to visit every nook and cranny of it.

"I'm working very hard and have lost 20 pounds to prove it," he said.

Keating began his career in the state Legislature, serving eight years as a representative and 14 years as a senator.

He's proud of his feisty reputation.

"I have always gone against the grain. I went up against iron-fisted (Senate President) Billy Bulger," he said.

As a state senator, Keating recalled, he took on Beacon Hill politics as usual and gained a reputation for standing firm against the politically powerful.

Keating challenged the entrenched Bulger and forced him to adopt key reforms like term limits on leadership positions, he said.

When he was in the thick of the battle with Bulger, Keating asked his father, who was terminally ill, what he should do.

This has been the mantra of his 34-year political career, Keating said.

His proudest accomplishment so far was founding the Norfolk Advocates for Children, a nonprofit child advocacy center for those who have been sexually and physically abused.

"Kids were being shuttled from the police station to our office to social agencies. It took 11 years, but we built this center without state funding," Keating said.

"I admired (Sen.) Ted Kennedy's approach to the criminal justice system. You can't talk about justice and separate it from human services. He got that.

"We train our police officers to make an assessment on a 911 call. Is this a mental health issue? If so, we have a clinician come to the scene.

"It's all connected. It's fiscally sound. If you make people safer, you save money."

Keating said he does not believe in raising the retirement age.

"Studies have shown Social Security will remain solvent for 27 years. Sixty seven is the retirement age for most Americans now," Keating said.

On immigration, Keating said, "Tough decisions must be made. We must act federally. We must strengthen our borders. We must give people the opportunity to earn their way back. Some will have to leave. I'm not for the amnesty bill."

He supports Cape Wind, would not have voted to fund the war in Afghanistan, and is "a fierce protector" of the environment who wrote the state's tough safe water law, he said.

Keating is pro-choice, a strong supporter of equality for gays and lesbians, and supported same-sex marriage in Massachusetts.

"This election will determine the direction the country is going to go over the next decade," he said. "The economy is the most important thing. We must get people back to work. We must focus on small businesses. We must move away from our reliance on foreign oil."

'I'm just a regular guy'

By Micah Flores
MFLORES@CNC.COM

The day after President Barack Obama signed the healthcare reform bill was the day Robert Hayden, a 43-year-old Department of Public Utilities employee, decided to run for U.S. Congress.

"The politicians aren't listening and people like me are going to rise to the occasion," Hayden, a Hanover Republican with no political experience, said during an Aug. 27 editorial board meeting in Marshfield with editors and reporters from GateHouse Media New England. "People like myself are fed up."

Government expansion, not to mention "handouts and bailouts," needs to end, said Hayden, who coaches youth hockey and worries about the ballooning federal deficit and its consequences on his own children.

"It should be a free market," he said, calling for the immediate slashing of taxes, and, not surprisingly, the repeal of "Obamacare."

"What I'm hearing is that the government needs to back off and get out of the way."

Hayden touched on what sets him apart from the other candidates in the Republican primary.

"I'm honest," said Hayden, formerly a Plymouth County assistant district attorney. "As simple as it sounds it makes me unique. I'm not a professional politician; I'm not going to Washington to start a new career in Washington."

If elected, Hayden, who emphasized the fact that he doesn't have a paid staff, a lot of cash to spend or a lot of time to campaign, said he'd limit himself to a single term.

While he said he couldn't think of any political role models, Hayden points to his father, a Boston police officer of 28 years, as the person he admires most.

"The courage is unbelievable," he said, mentioning that his father was stabbed on four separate occasions while on the job. "He doesn't complain. He got up and worked hard."

Hayden said he grew up in Hingham, but that his family wasn't wealthy. He recalled the story of "the family car," a vehicle that he said had been the subject of much gunfire damage before his father acquired it for the family's use. The car's original owner, he said, didn't want it back after it was shot up during an armed robbery/shoot out.

In recalling an incident that occurred shortly after the Sept. 11 attacks, Hayden said his father was a passenger on a Minnesota bound airplane when two other passengers started to cause a disturbance.

"The stewardesses couldn't control them," he said, adding that the men were causing a stir and "talking in a foreign language."

At 65-years-old, and long retired, Hayden said his father, along with another passenger, tackled and subdued both of the men before binding their wrists.

"He puts himself in situations like that," he said, adding that that incident turned into the top headline of the day.

While he grew up thinking his father was larger than life, Hayden said he is anything but.

"I'm putting myself out there. There's nothing terrific about me," he said. "I'm just a regular guy."

Ray Kasperowicz

Ray Kasperowicz:

'I'd be a citizen legislator'

By Micah Flores
MFLORES@CNC.COM

Ray Kasperowicz is a numbers man.

A fiscal conservative and Cohasset accountant by trade, the Republican candidate in the 10th Congressional District looks at federal regulations on banking, and in the world of business, as necessary – to a point.

Too much of a good thing is bad, said Kasperowicz, a 67-year-old "main street citizen," who, despite lacking campaign funds, name recognition and a strong campaign base, decided to run for the U.S. House of Representatives last summer after becoming fed up with Washington D.C.'s "inside the Beltway mentality," which he said is ballooning the federal deficit.

"I look at it like a football field," he said, describing his view on what government's role should be, "somebody's got to draw the lines before game day. The referees have to make sure there's no foul play or interference, and that's it."

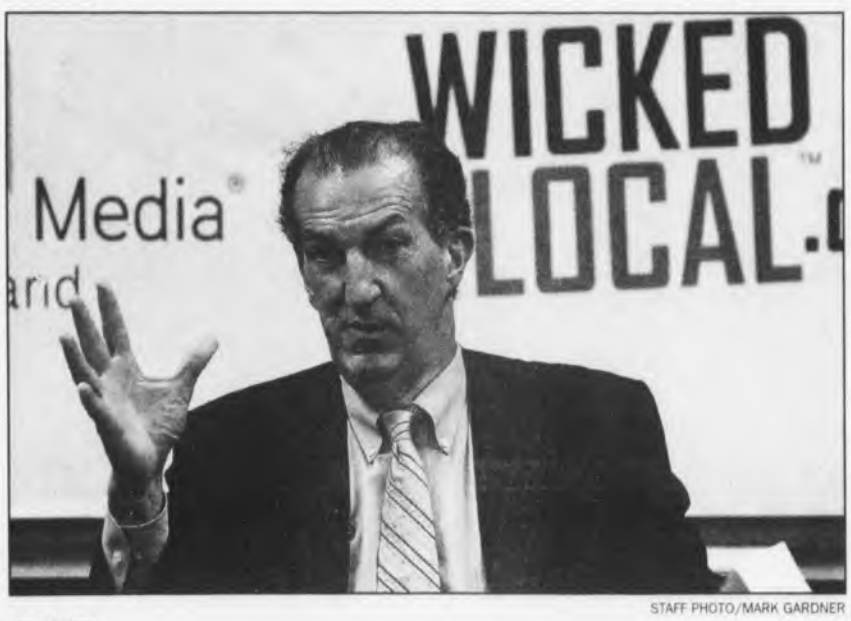
Kasperowicz, having visited the Marshfield headquarters Friday, Aug. 27 for GateHouse Media New England's editorial board meeting, said government's obsession with churning out costly public policy has grown rampant since the recession and that he has his sights set on making Massachusetts, and the country as a whole, a better place to live and work.

Should he win the Republican primary Sept. 14, Kasperowicz – who's campaigning on his expertise as a longtime tax professional – would face two independents and either State Sen. Robert O'Leary or Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating in the Nov. 2 general election.

"I'd run for two or three terms and then get out," he said, calling for the dismantling of the Departments of Education, Energy and Commerce. "I'd be a citizen legislator and let the next man do it before we get corrupted by having doors opened for us and letting the power go to our heads."

Kasperowicz said he was willing to go along with the first of the bank bailouts, "but never again."

If the economy and jobs are the top issues facing Cape Cod, then Cape Wind is "number four or five" on the list, said Kasperowicz, who on at least two social issues – abortion and gay rights – said he leans – albeit reluctantly – further to the left than the right.



"I'm not going to fight against abortion; I don't agree with it," he said, adding that all citizens should be treated equally. "I'm not for gay marriage. I'm for civil unions."

On illegal immigration, Kasperowicz said unskilled workers are invading the country and that the U.S. should focus on protecting its borders and bringing in skilled/legal laborers.

On "Obamacare," Kasperowicz, pointing to polls that show that Americans were opposed to it, said he would "kill it" if he gets the chance.

"Before you do anything else you have to clean up the mess made," he said, pointing out that working closely with Democrats would likely not define his role as U.S. Congressman.

"We have a debt problem. We have to solve that problem. We can't compromise on that," he said.

Joe Malone

Joe Malone:

Economy comes first

By Bill Fonda
BFONDA@CNC.COM

Joe Malone had been out of government for 11 years before being motivated by what he saw as the country going more to the left — the deal-laden healthcare bill that didn't include tort reform, deficits and lobbyists getting what they wanted in Washington.

So the Scituate Republican, a former state treasurer, decided to do something about it, entering the race for the 10th Congressional District seat.

"I want to go down there to fight for small business people, who are the golden goose for job creation," he said. "We've got to create (a tax and regulatory) environment where there's some certainty and predictability."

Malone wants the federal government to get away from what he calls overspending, overtaxing, over-borrowing and over-regulating.

"We're an individual freedom society," he said. "There's no French Dream. There's no German Dream… There's an American Dream."

If elected, Malone said he would focus attention on the economy, that the government needs to do what former President Ronald Reagan did, which was to get spending under control and cut taxes to expand the economy.

"We tried this experiment with this stimulus package. It hasn't worked," he said.

Possible spending cuts, Malone said, include eliminating earmarks, not replacing retired federal employees unless absolutely necessary and not sending stimulus money to states to solve their problems.

As the 10th District's representative, Malone said he would be a salesman for the district, making businesses realize that its location on the coast and near Boston makes it a great place to be.

"We ought to be taking down every barrier to small businesses," he said.

Among those barriers Malone said needs to be overcome is the lack of lending to small businesses.

"If you talk to small businesspeople, the lending window has been closed," he said.

Asked about increasing the Social Security retirement age, Malone said he would favor increasing it from 67 to 68 in 14 years, which would be a "quantum leap for our Social Security system" without hurting current retirees. He would also allow seniors beyond retirement age who want to work full-time to be exempt from FICA and payroll taxes in exchange for not collecting Social Security.

"It's one of those common-sense ideas that gets no traction in Washington because it makes too much sense," he said.

During his time as treasurer, Malone said he took over an office that was inefficient, cut its budget 62 percent, merged two public pension funds, reformed the state Lottery and improved the state's pension fund performance, all by reaching out to the private sector.

And then, in his final days in office, he said a couple "scoundrel employees" broke faith with the people of Massachusetts by stealing $9.4 million in state funds, something he said hurt him personally. However, he said people recognize there are mistakes, and that he called the attorney general's office to pledge his help.

"It broke my heart, because I spent my whole life trying to build a reputation I could be proud of," he said.

State Rep. Jeff Perry, R-Sandwich.

Jeff Perry:

Ready to serve the district

By Benjamin Brown
BBROWN@CNC.COM

State Rep. Jeff Perry, R-Sandwich, has been a legislator for the past eight years, which is just one of the reasons he said he'd be ready on day one to serve as a U.S. Representative from the 10th Congressional District.

"I treat this as a customer service business model, and I'm really proud that I've been able to deliver those services," said Perry, who — if elected — plans to serve no more than four or five terms.

Perry said his approach to campaigning in the district was a positive, issued-based style. He said it was critical that people had a choice on this ballot, and said Republicans who were unwilling to run in the past were part of a self-fulfilling prophecy that kept them out of the seat for years.

If elected, Perry said he wouldn't be pressured into voting a particular way just because it may be the popular position. He cited his 2006 vote against mandated healthcare in Massachusetts as a key example of that.

"I didn't think it was right," said Perry. "Just having mandates won't make healthcare less expensive; it will make it more expensive."

Along with healthcare, Perry said he considers immigration reform and generating support for troops to be some of the more important issues.

"[Immigration] is a problem, unfortunately, that Republicans and Democrats have let us down on," he said. "We have 15- to 20-million people in this country who are here illegally."

He said he'd like to see members of Immigration and Customs Enforcement acquire the resources they need to maintain our borders, and also believes in nationally denying benefits to people unless they can prove they are here legally.

In Afghanistan, he said troops need a clear mission, but that he would support them regardless.

"As long as our troops are in harm's way, we need to make sure they have the resources to defend themselves," he said. "My concern with Afghanistan is I can't sit here and tell you what the plan is. I don't think it's right to put troops in harm's way without a mission."

Regarding recent criticism on the campaign trail, Perry said he would not retaliate against any of his opponents. He even considered former Vice-Presidential Candidate Sarah Palin's comments that Alaskan Republicans wouldn't stand for Senator Scott Brown's recent track record disappointing.

"I subscribe to Reagan's 11th amendment that, 'Thou shall never speak ill of another Republican,' so I was disappointed to see Palin say something negative about Brown," he said.

Concerning controversy surrounding his past, Perry said he accepts the media's role in vetting out information about candidates, including his handling of incidents from the early 1990s when he was a Wareham police officer, as well as a college degree he received from a mail-in "diploma mill" that was found to be illegitimate.

"I know the media's role, and I have no problem with the media vetting candidates," he said. "If other candidates choose to make their campaigns about me, that's up to them… I'm not going to respond to an attack with another attack."

Cohasset Day fun is for children of all ages

Annual event just one week away

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The third annual Cohasset Day is in a little over a week, Sept. 12th, from 1–6 p.m. There will be something for everyone in the family to enjoy. The downtown will be closed to vehicular traffic so that all can browse the stores and shop the sidewalk tables that will be lining the streets. After strolling through the village the youngest among the crowd are encouraged to head over to the Common for some good ole' fashioned fun.

"The kids part of Cohasset Day is filled with old fashioned spirit like a tug of war and three legged races," says Thom Powers, who with along wife Christine, who works at Coldwell Banker (sponsor of the dunk tank), serve as co-coordinators of Cohasset Day's Kids Games on the Common. "It's a hometown fair. It's fun…pure and simple."

And just as last year, the Powers have planned a "back to basics" afternoon for the kids including everything from a dunk tank to smaller, sweeter activities for the youngest among us, like eating a Dunkin' Donut from a string. For some of the older kids it will be smooth sailing on the duck pond filled with rowboats.

"Touch a Truck" is always a favorite with the parents and the kids. Among the touchable vehicles will be a fire engine, squad car, fire truck and an ambulance all accompanied by Cohasset's finest who will help explain each vehicles purpose to the kids. A dump truck and backhoe will also be parked for all to see and touch.

All the moving parts that make this day happen are being finalized and the excitement is building thanks to the beautiful posters, banners and brochures designed and produced by Twist Creative Group. The husband and wife team of Joyce Whitman and Keith Conforti of Cohasset created the Cohasset Day "brand" that now represents this much anticipated town tradition.

The Fine Food Galore event — an event within the overall Cohasset Day — will take place from 4-6 p.m. on South Main Street in the Village. This gastronomic aspect of Cohasset Day, includes local fare by more than 16 local eateries, and is the only event within Cohasset Day for which there is a fee. The food sampling has a cost of $10 for individuals and $20 for a family. Proceeds of Fine Food Galore will benefit Cohasset Elder Affairs and Cohasset Food Pantry. This year there are no advance sales for Fine Food Galore, tickets may be purchased on Main Street on the Day of the event.

Other Cohasset Day activities can be considered "priceless" such as the parade procession down Main Street featuring the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Decorated Bike Parade, music from the Rusty Skippers and local sports teams and groups all coming together to march and show their town pride. There will also be a special Saturday edition of the Farmer's Market and Historic Society buildings will be free and open to the public. Everyone is invited to come learn more about Cohasset's rich history.

Another main attraction for many on Saturday the 12th will be the third annual Classic Car Concours. Public viewing and People's Choice Awards judging will take place after the cars cruise down Main Street. Details on that and some featured cars will appear in next week's Mariner, along with more details about the much anticipated Fashion Show which will feature clothes from all three of Cohasset's boutiques including Ports, Pink Tulip and Wendy's Closet.

Bells will be ringing on Cohasset Day courtesy of resident Mary Kennedy from 12:45 – 1 p.m.. The beautiful music of St. Stephen's world-class carillon is one of the things that make our town so unique. Other music will include the Jackson Weatherbee Band from 4-6 p.m.

Visitors to Cohasset Day may also notice South Shore Art Center's students, teachers and artist Vcevy Strekalovsky plein air painting throughout the village. Vcevy (pronounced Sev-ee) was the architect for Cohasset's Deer Hill School, Middle High School and High School.

Cohasset Day is a joint initiative of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and the Cohasset Economic Development Committee. Donations will be made to the Council on Elder Affairs, the Cohasset Food Pantry and the American Legion.

Black Jacks lacrosse dealing Aces

Cohasset stars help fuel elite club

By Ben Woodson,
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A simple statement summed up the feeling for the recent work that the Black Jacks Select Lacrosse team has accomplished.

"PJ would have been proud," said Rick Bagby, head coach of the Black Jacks Select Lacrosse Team of 21 Lacrosse. The Black Jacks are a nationally prominent lacrosse team that was named in memory of No. 21, PJ Trendowicz (Bagby pointed out - "21 = Black Jack -"). "I can't believe PJ has been gone for eight years, but his spirit lives on in this team."

Live on it does. A consistent national power, the Black Jacks returned to the top of the class again this summer. After losing a heartbreaker, 6-5, to powerhouse, Ward Melville High School (NY) at the Gait Cup Tournament at Gettysburg College (Melville went on to the finals), the team was determined to redeem itself at the Battle of the Hot Beds,(U Delaware) and earn a spot at "Dick's National Championship" in Tampa, Florida in January.

Hot Beds is a grueling four-day event where each team plays one exhibition game and nine division games. To make it to the "final four", a team needs to go undefeated to be assured a spot. The Black Jacks did just that. Opening with a solid win over a strong Michigan team, 8-4, the Black Jacks ran the table finishing 9-0 in division play, finishing with a devastating 15-2 win over a formidable team from Virginia.

Ranked No. 2 (out of 60 teams) at the end of regular play at Hot Beds, the Black Jacks moved on to the final four. Hoping to see Ward Melville once again, this would not come to be as they (WM) were ranked No. 4, and seeded in the opposite bracket. Instead, the Black Jacks drew The Long Island Sting – Black team. A defensive struggle ensued between these two powerhouses. The Sting prevailed 4-2, but knew they were in a fight to the finish.

"I know Coach Bagby and I know his players never quit. We knew we were in a war until the final whistle," said Coach Ken Miller, Head Coach and Director of the Sting program. The Sting went on to win the championship over Ward Melville, 9-4.

The Black Jacks are a hand-selected team from the South Shore. In keeping with the tradition and spirit of PJ Trendowicz, Coach Bagby seeks not only skilled players, but players with a positive attitude and players who understand that the "Team" always comes first. This year's group was exceptional from front to back.

Starting with the attack, this was a group who shared the ball as well as any previous Black Jacks team. The balanced scoring (team averaged just under 11 goals per game) and unselfish play was their trademark. The players included; Connor Bagby (Marshfield), Will Delorey (Norwell/Salisbury School), Matt Dromeshauser (Norwell), Matt Entwistle (Marshfield), Tim Matthews (Duxbury), and Cory Mavromatis (Cape Henry Collegiate, Virginia Beach, VA).

The midfield was exceptional on both sides of the ball. This group included Anthony Barbati (Duxbury), Bryan Barry (Duxbury), Jeremy Buckley (Norwell), Andrew Buron (Duxbury), Thomas Flibotte (Cohasset), Alex Kinnealey (Cohasset), Mike Maroon (Cape Henry Collegiate, Virginia Beach, VA), and Stephen Sousa (Marshfield).

Defensively, the Black Jacks shut down virtually everyone they played. Despite playing some of the best teams and individual players in the country, they did not allow any team (including the Sting) to score more than 4 goals in any game. This group included: in the goal, TJ Bicknell (Duxbury) and Will Contento (Marshfield). At close defense were: Christian Connolly (Duxbury), Clark Demos (Duxbury), Patrick Hannigan (Hanover), Sam Leahy (Cohasset), Tim Milch (Marshfield) and Will Schorle (Marshfield). Finally, at long-stick middie were Alex Poore (Duxbury) and Josh White (Marshfield).

South Shore Indians sparkle in Cooperstown Tourney

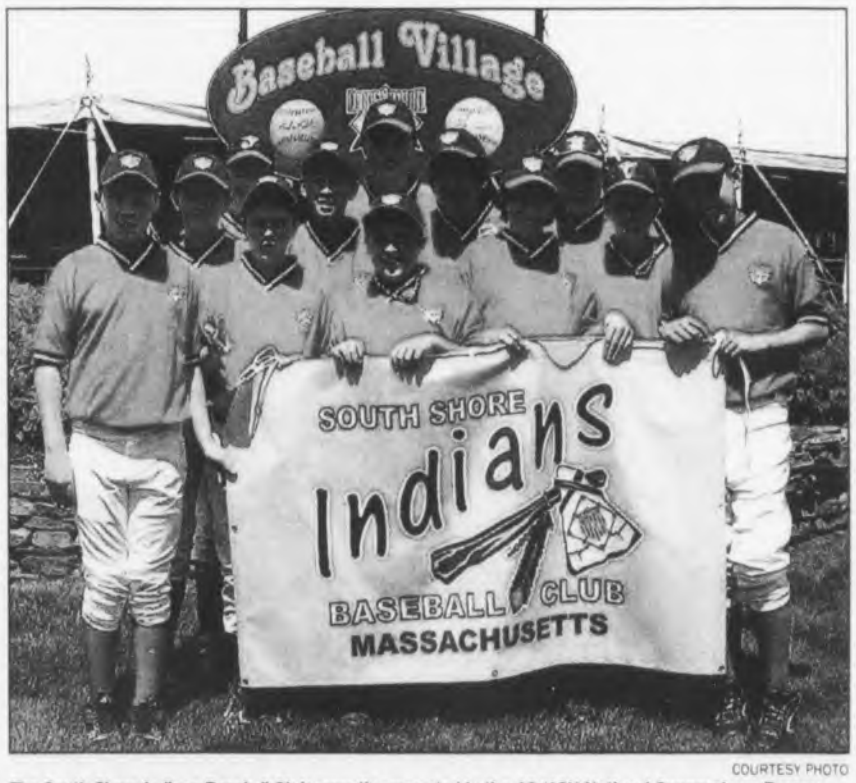
The South Shore Indians Baseball Club, including a group of Cohasset players, recently competed in the 12/13U National Cooperstown Dreams Park Tourney and finished 32nd out of 103 teams from the US and Canada. They had a tournament record of 4-3, including playoffs.

Teams they played included Canada, North Carolina, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Las Vegas.

The seven-day tournament commenced on Saturday with an Olympics-style ceremonial parade into Little Majors Stadium, where nearly 4,000 spectators cheered on the 103 teams as they entered the stadium. Following national anthems from the U.S. and Canada, the skills competitions kicked-off the weekend with plenty of energy. Representing the Indians were Brett Dooley, who placed in the top third in the Golden Arm contest, a 125-foot throw to home.

Brendan Connelly placed high in the Roadrunner, with a 14.2 second time around all four 70-foot bases. Dan Cole represented the team in the King of Swat Home Run Derby. And, Teddy Flaherty, Mike McLeod, Tyler Balzarini, Jack Ruprecht, Brandon Jung, Brandon Moy, Matt Downing, Sean Cornell, and Danny Dalton had the third best preliminary time in the Around the Horn competition, a nine-position throw around.

Solid pitching came from Dalton, Ruprecht, Balzarini, Downing, Cornell, Jung, Connolly, and Moy, combined with solid catching behind the plate by Dooley, McLeod and Ruprecht. A strong offensive force with the bats, including 11 home runs and 73 hits led to a winning record. Some impressive batting averages drove the offense, including Moy (.600), Jung (.550 with two home runs), Cole (.533 with three home runs), Ruprecht (.500 and four home runs), Balzarini (.500 with two home runs) and Cornell (.500).



During their seven-day stay in Cooperstown, the players enjoyed their down time trading collectable team pins from across the 103 teams and over 1,400 players. This is a rich tradition that allows the players an opportunity to interact with others from all across North America.

The South Shore Indians are an AAU team based out of Hanover, that includes players from all over South Shore of Massachusetts.

They started their 2010 season last fall and included a regimented program tailored at improving baseball fundamentals, speed and strength. Winter practices included core strength and conditioning, pitchers and catchers workouts, hitting workouts, fielding drills, and several private lessons led by professional instructors, including former and current major league players. They currently play on AAU modified fields, with 50-foot mounds and 70-foot bases. The Indians finished regular season play across New England with a 25-16 record.

The team, coached by Don Cornell and John Balzarini, are currently preparing for their third season and will graduate to the

Maybe it is time to quit this game

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

Check out Paul's golf blog at www.wickedlocalgolf.com.

This is the final print edition of The Clubhouse for the summer.

School sports season begins next week and that will become our focus.

However, the way I played this summer, I'm ready to quit golf.

Yeah, yeah, everybody says they are going to quit at some point.

And some do.

In fact, the National Golf Foundation says more than a million golfers give up the game every year.

The NGF doesn't say why. But since it is a game loaded with old people (include me, look at my photo above, I look like I belong in a coffin), I think many quit to play in the Big Course in the Sky.

And a good number quit because they are newbies. They go out a couple of times and are overwhelmed and humiliated.

These folks have the good sense to find something else to do.

I always thought I would be able to play golf until the day I died.

I had dreams of retiring to some sunny clime, playing a championship golf course every morning, fishing every afternoon and watching the Red Sox every night. It would be a perfect world.

But now that I'm in my 60s, I realize I have the body of an 80-year-old.

And if the Sox are playing that night, if I make it through four or five innings before dozing off, that's a long day for me.

It's not that I'm old. There are plenty of older folks teeing it up five and seven days a week. No problem. Some, in their 80s, can still walk the course, too. They amaze me and God love 'em.

But me, I'm haunted by the exploits of my youth and I'm paying for it now.

As a youngster, I was a catcher so my fingers were continually bent back, broken or dislocated and I'm reminded of that every day now when I try to open a jar. They just hurt. Can't even make a fist.

My knees are junk, blown out while playing high school basketball.

Surgeons put pins and wires in one knee when I was 16 and it has never been the same.

In a way, it was a good thing. When I tried to enlist in the Marines during the Tet Offensive, they wouldn't take me and I couldn't go to Vietnam.

Instead, I went to college and became a sports writer.

But now both knees have been replaced and it won't be long before I have them replaced again.

And walking on bad knees all my life gave me a bad back.

My back is so bad; it can go into spasm if I sneeze too hard.

Hey, I'm not complaining.

It's been a wonderful ride

And thanks to three 800mg Ibuprofen every day, I can play some golf.

But 20 years ago, I can remember playing 106 consecutive days, now, if I play three days in a row, I'm beat up.

Worse, my handicap is soaring.

At one point it was down to 7. I used to walk 18 in the morning with the guys and 18 more in the afternoon with my wife. No problem. But time catches up to everyone and my game is paying the price.

Now I'm a threat to be a 17 handicap and that stinks.

Sure, I could lose some weight. I could exercise more. Simply stretching every day could help.

I realize if you don't use it, you are going to lose it.

I know that and I'm going to try to turn it around.

What else would I do if I didn't golf?

Play with the grandchildren?

I love 'em, but after a few hours, that's enough. Send them home.

I raised a family once. I don't want to do it again.

Boring.

Take up shuffleboard?

Ho-hum.

Watch television?

If I ever start watching soap operas, I told my wife she has the right to put the pillow over my face and put me out of my misery.

Go boating?

Too much work, but I love the antagonism between sail boaters and power boaters. Love to be between them at a yacht club bar.

Nah, I guess I'm stuck with golf.

Even if it hurts to swing a club, even if I go an entire round without making a par, even if it feels like I went 15 rounds with Rocky Marciano when I walk off the 18th green, I can't give it up.

It's what I do. It's who I have become.

Sure, I'll quit a thousand times, but after thinking about it for a few minutes, I realize how stupid that is.

Of course, when I shank another chip shot, I'm ready to quit again.

Earlier this summer after a horrible series of rounds, I stopped drinking, I quit eating sweets and stopped eating bread.

I did that for more than two months and my game did not get any better.

So what I need to do is dedicate this winter to getting in better shape for the 2011 golf season.

And I have to keep hitting golf balls.

That's my mission.

I'll give you updates throughout the winter in my blog at The Clubhouse at www.wickedlocalgolf.com.

If you have any advice, or you just want to talk golf, join me for my weekly updates.

Links aren't missing a lot

Course of the Week

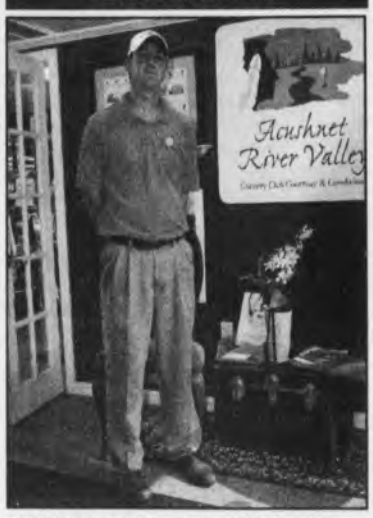
The MGA Links at Mamantapett in Norton, the par-3 18-hole golf course owned and operated by the Massachusetts Golf Association, was recognized nationally last week for its outstanding service to the community by being named the recipient of the 2010 Best of Norton Award.

Since its opening seven years ago, the mission of this course was to offer the most comprehensive and affordable junior membership in New England, a wide range of tournament and league opportunities and a family membership program that allows golfers of all ages and skill levels to enjoy the game of golf.

In addition, the facility serves as home of The First Tee of Massachusetts, the national program that provides young people of all backgrounds an opportunity to play golf.

The Washington D.C.-based U.S. Local Business Association presents the award and less than 1 percent are three-time award recipients, which means they are doing something right at the Links.

It's not the greatest of golf course, but for a beginner, it is a great introduction to golf, which is the most intimidating of games for first-timers.



The fee structure is affordable. It's $10 for 18 holes for youngsters under 18 and a junior membership for a summer is only $150. Furthermore, a family membership is only $750.

But don't expect to play every day at the Links. There always seems to be some sort of clinic or function or tournament for juniors, bringing busloads of youngsters from all over the state and introducing them to the game.

Adam Hevey

Acusnet River Valley Golf Course

What's in your bag?
I have a Cobra ZL 9.5 Driver, Taylor Made 13 and 18-degree fairway metals, Titleist 909 21-degree hybrid, Titleist 704CB irons (4-pw), Vokey 52-degree and 56-degree wedges and I play Titleist ProV1 golf balls

What's your best round?
I was still a junior member at Reservation Golf Course. I was late for my tee time and was a bit rushed on the first tee. I drove the par-4 first hole and made the putt for eagle. I went on to shoot a 62, which is my best round. My father was playing with me in the group so it was nice to share that moment with him.

Who would be in your dream foursome?
I'd want Bobby Jones, Jack Nicklaus, Tiger Woods and they would all be in their prime. They are golf icons of their respective generations. There would be some great conversation and also some decent golf.

What was your introduction to the game?
I was 12 years old. I went down to the park nearby with a friend and a few clubs from his father's golf bag. I was given a starter set from a family friend shortly after and attended a junior clinic a Reservation Golf Club. I also took lessons early on with local golf instructor, Tom Couchi.

Tobacco Road Golf Club in Sanford, N.C. is my favorite golf course. The course has so much character. Every time you play the course you find something new. It's ranked in the top 10 for hardest golf courses in the country. If you're ever in the Pinehurst area, book a tee time at Tobacco Road.

What's the best golf tip you ever received?
There's isn't one specific tip that comes to mind, but I can tell you the PGM staff at Methodist University molded me not only into a golfer, but a golf professional. The Director of PGM, Jerry Hogge and his staff have given me so many golf lessons and life lessons and I can't thank them enough.

What makes Acushnet River Valley so special?
Acushnet River Valley GC offers two unique playing opportunities. The front nine has a traditional layout with fairways lined with tall Carolina pines. The back nine offers a links style with thick rough and undulating greens. The course's motto is "Country Club Courtesy and Conditions." The golf course is kept in great shape year round and the golf shop staff is always ready to serve the customers.

Caging a Tiger

You can bet it was a long weekend for TPC Boston tournament officials in Norton.

The poor folks (well, I don't think they have to buy used Pinnacle X'd outs) had one thing on their mind:

Is he coming?

He, of course, is Tiger Woods.

Last Thursday, after taking the first-round lead, you figured he was a cinch. But poor putting on Friday and a disastrous start on Saturday put him on the back of the bus.

The only thing Woods could smile about was would he be the world's No. 1 ranked golfer for another week because Phil Mickelson missed the cut.

And you can bet the thousands of golf fans who make the pilgrimage to Norton this weekend will all want to get a glimpse of Tiger in the flesh, so to speak.

Say what you will about Mickelson or any of the other stars of the PGA Tour, they do not have "it."

Furthermore, do you think Corey Pavin has the guts not to select him to the Ryder Cup team?

I don't think so!

Tiger's game certainly isn't on right now and he shouldn't be selected on merit.

However, television executives want him there to boost ratings and corporate sponsors are going to demand his inclusion because without him in the field, the Ryder Cup will not be the Ryder Cup.

Everyone, not just golf fans, wants to see him succeed and fail at the same time.

Rockland rocks

If there is a good guy of the year award, it goes to Abi Darvish of Weymouth, who holds a tournament at Rockland Golf Club every year and last Friday afternoon it was for his friends and fellow workers. It's all about fun and the prizes aren't – and shouldn't be – important. It's the camaraderie that really counts.

He holds it at Rockland because a lot of his fellow workers aren't accomplished golfers, but he would do better to have the tournament somewhere else.

That's because you have to have game to play Rockland, which is looking better and better and has to be rated among the top par-3 courses in the nation. It's a bear and you will use every club in your bag.

Making birdies there isn't easy. And every tee shot is a challenge.

It will be a challenge next month for Lasell College's baseball team when it holds its fundraiser there.

Bob Mahoney is organizing the tournament to raise funds to help defray the cost of the baseball team's spring trip to Florida.

Why? His two sons, Mike and Mark, along with Josh Sullivan of Rockland, are significant starters in the Lasell lineup.

Legends Div. off to fast start

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The Legends Div. of the South Coastal Hockey League has got off to a great start in the Fall 2010 season.

The division has had two of its first three games decided by a shootout and the one game that was not a shootout went down to the final buzzer.

The Whalers with the great goaltending of Dan Nason held off the Sharks by a 2-1 score in the one game that was not decided by a shootout.

Tim Cruz of Marshfield scored with 10 seconds left in the game for the Sharks, but they had numerous scoring chances stopped by Nason prior to the goal. Nason had 29 saves in the games and many great stops, including a skate save on a one-time shot by Richard Petrosino of Marshfield in the second period.

Sharks' goalie Rick Kelly of Hanover also played a strong game in net.

Kelly came up with some big saves in the 20 he made to prevent the Whalers from ever getting a chance to pull away.

The biggest play of the game came in the third period with the Whalers up 1-0.

The Sharks Art Riccio appeared to slide a shot past Nason in the third period. The puck was on the goal line and appeared to be going into the net, but Whalers forward Kevin Mackin of Duxbury came out of no where to swat the puck away and prevent the Sharks from tying the game.

Scituate's Richard Spence had a goal in a recent Legends Div. game in the South Coastal Hockey League.

Mackin would later add a goal on a rebound of a Frank Famulari of Marshfield shot with 3:44 left to give the Whalers a 2-0 lead. Chuck Morrison also of Marshfield got an assist on the Mackin goal.

Scituate's Richard Spence stole an outlet pass by the Sharks in the first period and scored a power play goal in the first period to give the Whalers the first goal of the game.

The Classics Div. defending champion Maple Leafs started their 2010 Fall Season in impressive fashion by defeating the team that they defeated for the championship, the Canadiens by a 7-2 score.

Shawn Malloy broke a 2-2 tie with his first goal of the game for the Leafs, who scored the last five goals of the game. Malloy finished the game with three of his teams last five goals.

Dave Salvaggio, Norwell's Don Studley, Mike Ryan and Jim Smith of Pembroke were the other goal scorers for the Maple Leafs.

The Maple Leafs' Dave Denton of Marshfield had three assists and Smith and Mike Bartlett of Pembroke also had two assists in the game.

5 To Watch

Wesley Gallagher, Pembroke
Pembroke's sixth man a year ago, Gallagher backed up his 22nd place at EMass with a 24th place finish on Northfield Mountain at All States. This time around for his junior season, Coach Greg Zopatti expects him to be the key piece to fill in for Stonehill-bound Paul Cina en route to Pembroke's dynastic third straight divisional and second consecutive All State titles.

Joel Hubbard, Marshfield)
Leading Marshfield's hopes for a trip to Gardner, the host site of this year's All State Meet, is Hubbard, a junior who could threaten for a Division III individual title. His 7th place finish a year ago makes him the #3 returnee in the class, as Marshfield looks to make up for its agonizing 6th place finish, just one place away from an All State bid.

Jonathon McKinley, Duxbury
Flying past just about everyone not wearing a Pembroke uniform in the Patriot League a year ago, the senior will look to improve on his 18th place finish at DIII's in 2009. A solid bet for another trip to All States, McKinley could be a sleeper in the Div. 2 race at Gardner.

Kelsey Whitaker, NDA
Injuries derailed her sophomore cross country campaign, but she came back with a vengeance in indoor and outdoor track. She followed up a 6th place finish in the indoor 1000 meters (3:01.13) with a 3rd place 5:13.72 in the outdoor Div. 2 one mile, making her one of the area's most exciting girls to watch.

Katie Sheehan, Scituate
The No. 2 returnee in the Patriot League, Sheehan looks to threaten the likes of Pembroke's Heather Connick for her first league title. All State trips in the winter and spring seem to make her a perfect candidate to do just that.

Meet to Watch

Marshfield at Dennis-Yarmouth, Sept. 9
Before the streets are cleaned from Labor Day parades, the Atlantic Coast League will have one of its biggest meets, pitting the top two boys teams from a year ago against one another right off the bat. D-Y stole a heartbreaking six-point win from the Rams in the ACL meet last October, but gone are stalwarts Max Darrah and Evan Tuohy-Bedford. September might be the key to an ACL regular season banner for Marshfield, who doesn't finish off its league schedule until Oct. 12 with Sandwich.

Mike Miller is the long-time running coach at Weymouth High School and lives for the sport. His poll will appear during the cross-country season.

FROM LACROSSE, PAGE 17

There were 40 all stars on each respective team out of over 1,000 players in attendance at both the Hot Beds and the Gait Cup. The Black Jacks placed 4 All-Stars on the rising senior team and one all-star on the rising junior team. They were Bryan Barry, Thomas Flibotte, Sam Leahy and Stephen Sousa for the rising seniors and Patrick Hannigan on the rising junior team. At the Gait Cup earlier in July, the Black Jacks placed six All Stars: Will Delorey, Thomas Flibotte, Alex Kinnealey and Stephen Sousa for the Blue Team and Anthony Barbati and Andrew Buron for the Orange team.

The coach finished by saying, "As a team we were outstanding. Every player on this team, in my eyes, is an all-star. They are a great group of kids who love to have fun and actually enjoy playing together. This is a special group that I will really miss." This is part of what 21 Lacrosse tries diligently to achieve … to "have fun" playing lacrosse …. while playing with guys they normally would be playing against during the regular High school season. Bagby emphasized that it is a great bond they have with each other that few high school players ever achieve.

NOTE: Tryouts for the 2011 Black Jacks Teams are on Sunday, September 12 and September 19. All tryouts for 7th and 8th graders will be from 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. High School players will tryout from 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon. Location is Scituate HS JV field (back behind JV baseball field). For more details go to 21Lacrosse.com.

Engagement party sparkles for TV star

Bachelorette, fiancé feted at King's

By Mary Jane Hanron

Each lady entering the shop on Friday evening, Aug. 27th received a long-stemmed red rose from a debonair doorman greeting guests. In a playful homage to the ABC television series, "The Bachelorette," King Jewelers executed the whimsical theme flawlessly at a fashionable engagement party for clients honoring the guest of honor, DeAnna Pappas of the popular show.

Accompanied by fiancé Stephen Stagliano, Pappas, whose dazzling engagement ring had been purchased at the store, emerged from a midnight blue stretch Lincoln limousine once owned by Katherine Hepburn and provided for the evening by Robert McNamara of Norwell. She proceeded into the soiree to enjoy a warm and elegant event hosted by the King family.

Area guests joined the television star in a romantic and inviting experience which presented multiple services for brides-to-be and those seeking ideas for getaways, pampering, luxurious baubles and delightful edibles in an intimate and welcoming setting.

Future brides posed for pictures holding bouquets by Winston Flowers and a piece of jewelry of their choice from the cases of the King show room. Vendors of versatile collections from precious stones to casual sterling possibilities chatted with clients.

Honeymoon consultant, Mimi Bonomi from Scituate Harbor Travel informed those inquiring of idyllic excursions near and far.

The staff of Ellen MacKenzie Catering Co. presented trays of delectable bites as guests mingled and viewed the alluring selections surrounding them. A cascade of fanciful engagement cupcakes created by Five South Main Street Confections graced a table enticing guests to sample one. Cosmetic and hair professionals from Lemon and Lime Salon gave beauty tips for special occasion looks.

DeAnna beamed in a black cocktail dress and stunning matinee length sprinkle necklace made of 22 karat gold fine chain and white topaz by Dragonfly Studios of Cohasset.

Guests attending included several King client brides-to-be who absorbed all at the evening happily, some enjoying the atmosphere and others anxious to meet with vendors and focus on specific plans for their special day.

One guest, Rosemary Nelson of Scituate will be mother-of-the-bride at her daughter, Sarah's wedding scheduled next autumn.

"This is a lovely evening. It's great for people looking for ideas but it is especially nice for DeAnna and her fiancé," Nelson said. "They are able to talk with the visitors and wander from vendor to vendor casually without being pressured or interrupted. I am so glad I came!"

Responsible for her presence was Susan Warren, also of Scituate, who had heard of the event and informed Rosemary. Warren, a devote fan of the TV series, was ecstatic to be present. She said she was having a wonderful time looking at the diamond jewelry and helping Rosemary as she tried on various silver jewelry pieces by Kum-Kum with the assistance of Liz Paine, representative from the company.

Southeastern Massachusetts Pandora representative Rachel Brighton was excited to be there for the party. As someone who regularly does bridal shows and parties, she observed the intimate and comfortable atmosphere of the evening.

"It is really nice to see customers including DeAnna and Steve to be able to take their time and just look in a party setting," Brighton said. "Everyone is pleasant and helpful but no one is applying pressure to anyone looking at merchandise. It makes you know people will want to come back here when the time comes for them to make a purchase."

Her line of charms and add on bracelets was a popular area for clients to browse throughout the evening. "We sell quite a lot of bracelets as attendants' gifts," she said. "Brides buy them for their bridal party to wear that day with a few charms, usually something commemorating the wedding combined with Murano glass beads in the theme colors of the day. Members of the bridal party then have a starter charm bracelet to add to depending on their interests and life experiences."

Maryanne Englander, a local designer who creates spectacular jewelry in her home studio and shows her Dragonfly line at King Jewelers was also thrilled to be included. Not only was DeAnna wearing a piece of her jewelry but she had an opportunity to meet clients and tell some of the early historic lore and symbolism she incorporates in much of her collection as well as introduce those not aware of her line to her upscale and exquisitely crafted jewelry.

Her assistant, Brenda Hill expressed her enthusiasm for being present that evening. "This has been such an elegant event," she said. "Everyone has been so nice and the atmosphere has been really fun. The store looks gorgeous, people have come in party dresses; it has really been a special occasion… definitely a gala for the area's beautiful people."

As the evening drew to a close, DeAnna and Steve, tired but ecstatic, expressed words of affection and admiration for their hosts and their guests. "I really enjoy Boston people," said Steve. "Everyone is so friendly and warm. It is unlike any other place I have visited in the country."

DeAnna's words were the ultimate compliment. "I knew about the store for a long time from Melissa (fourth generation King and her close friend.) "The first time I was here I thought it was a beautiful store but coming in this evening, it truly felt like a home."

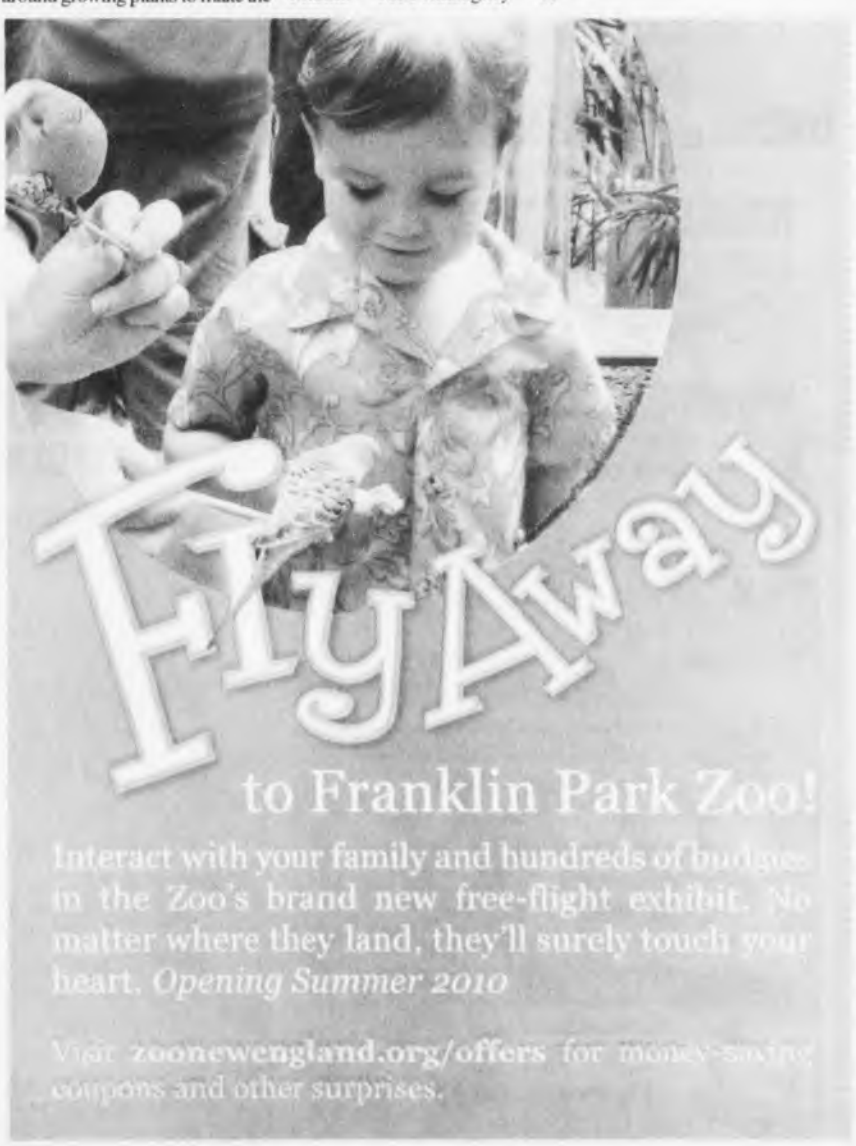
Campers had fun on the farm this summer

By Janice McPhillips
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

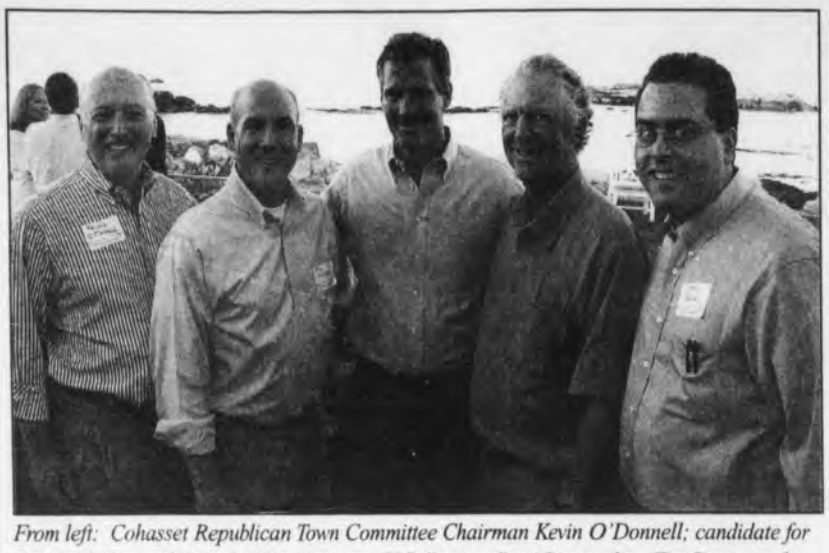
When school starts next week, many children will be asked to write about their summer vacation. Sure to top the list for kids from the South Shore will be trips to the beach and the local ice cream place, bike rides, theme parks, hiking in New Hampshire, the list goes on and on. And surely they will write about their fun experiences at summer camp – rec camp, sailing lessons, learning to swim and playing tennis, pulling weeds and making compost. What's that, pulling weeds and making compost at summer camp? Yes, that's right – kids who went to Holly Hill Farm on Jerusalem Road in Cohasset spent the week discovering what it takes to grow healthy vegetables from the ground up. This includes learning about healthy soil enriched with compost made at the farm, pulling weeds to eliminate competition for space and nutrients, providing much needed water to parched fields, and carefully harvesting organically grown vegetables, flowers and herbs from the 5 acres of land under cultivation.

Holly Hill Farm offered 11 weeks of summer programs for children ages 3 through 16 this past summer. Kids as young as 3 years old had fun mucking out the stalls of Pumpkin the Pony and Billy Jo the quarter horse and then mixing the manure with weeds and snack leftovers to make compost. Turning and sifting compost and looking for worms that live deep in the compost pile is a magical experience for children. Spreading this finished compost around growing plants to make the soil healthy and helping children make the connection from the seed in the palm of their hand to delicious organically grown vegetables was one of education director Jon Belber's goals. Tasting what's growing is an important part of the weeklong experience so the children harvested, washed and made a salad from produce growing in the education garden. The older children spent five days doing farm work with farmers Ben and Hannah Wolbach and Keren Ganin-Pinto, which was a very hot experience this past summer. The payoff came on Fridays when these Young Farmers prepared a meal for the farmers and their own families from fresh produce they helped grow and harvest. The menu included garlic bread, frittata made from farm-fresh eggs and sautéed kale and chard, zucchini bread, pesto pizza and a fresh salad. Sumac tea accented with mint finished off the casual and delicious meal.



What do kids think of this experience? Andrew Rohleder from Hingham did the Young Farmers program last summer and loved it so much he returned this summer and brought a group of friends with him. He especially loved feeding the chickens and goats, nibbling on the stems of just-harvested onions, and building a box oven for cooking pizza. Conversations while working in the fields often concerned food and Andrew's mother Lori loved hearing him talk about the healthy food choices the farmers were making. The farmers undoubtedly serve as healthy food role models to this group of eighth-graders. Martha McConnaughey of Cohasset has been purchasing produce and visiting Holly Hill for many years. She and her husband hoped the camp would give their three children, ages, 10, 8 and 6, the opportunity to see where the vegetables they eat come from. The activities at camp helped connect the kids to the farm and in turn connect the farm to the community.

This summer Belber offered a new program called Market Gardeners for children ages 9 through 12. These children learned about growing produce and sold their wares at the Cohasset Farmer's Market in Cohasset on Thursdays. The hot weather took a toll on the education garden at Holly Hill Farm and produce was limited in late July and August. However, these clever and enthusiastic Market Gardeners spent the week learning important skills like how to read and use all the information on a seed packet to properly sow seeds in the education garden for late summer and early fall crops, and how to sift and screen finished compost. At the Farmer's Market on Thursday they sold several bags of this compost, marigold plants, dried herbs, and recently harvested garlic.



Camp at Holly Hill Farm is a different way to spend a week for sure, but the lessons and memories will hopefully inspire these young people to appreciate what it takes to grow food and help them make healthy food choices for a lifetime.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
SEPT. 13, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Careful, Lamb. Taking on too many tasks at one time can cause you to create more snarls each time you try to work your way through the tangled mass. Best to handle one job at a time.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Making bold moves is what Bovines do. But the best moves are made with lots of data to provide backup just in case you charge into an unexpected complication. A new relationship shows promise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Sharing credit for a job well done is easy for you to do, but not necessarily for your partner. But fair is fair. Don't let yourself be denied the right to have your contributions recognized.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Communication is important to help bridge a gap that can lead to problems at home and/or at the workplace. Find a way to get your points across before the breach becomes a chasm.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Relationships, whether business or personal, need to be watched carefully for signs of trouble. Any negative indications should be dealt with before they become too burdensome.

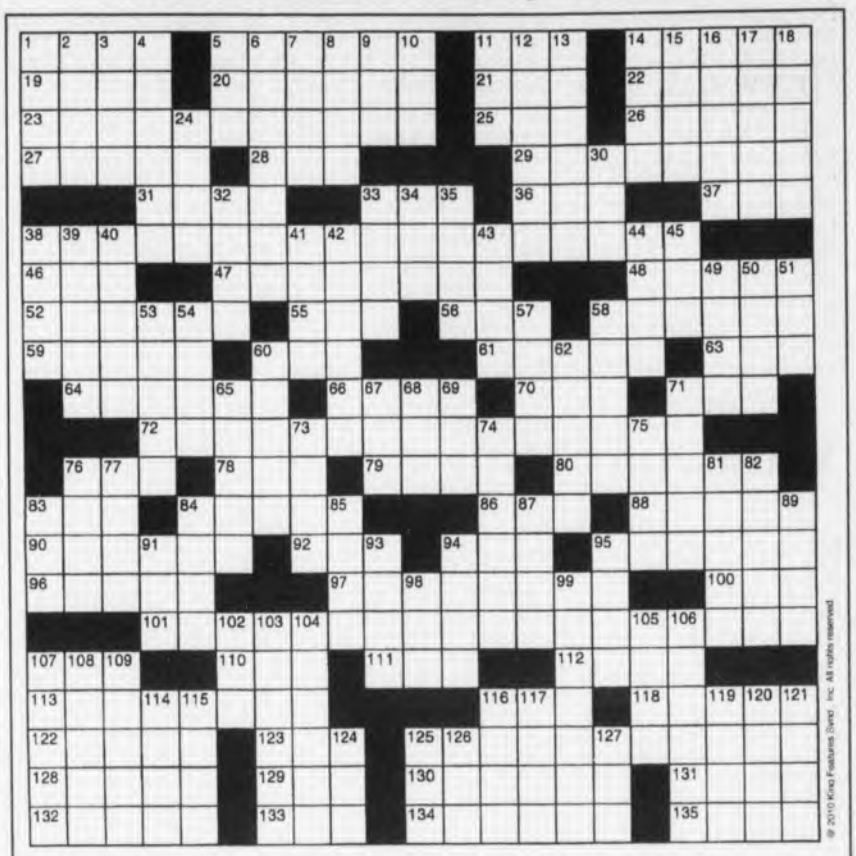
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Congratulations. A more positive aspect highlights much of the Virgo's week. You should find others more receptive to your suggestions, and also more likely to act on them.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) All work and little play could wear the Libra's usually positive attitude down. Take some much-needed time off. Perhaps a short jaunt with someone special is the way to go.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to expand your view from the known to the unfamiliar. Confronting new situations could be challenging, but ultimately also could be extremely satisfying.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Giving advice to those who just want validation for what they're doing can be unsettling. So back off and save your counsel for those who really appreciate it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Cultivating a more positive attitude not only makes you feel better about yourself, but also has an upbeat effect on those around you, especially that certain someone.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Keeping the lines of communication open and accessible is the key to establishing the right foundation on which to build an important and meaningful relationship. Stay with it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Before agreeing to act on a request, consider using your perceptive Piscean talents to see what might lie hidden beneath its surface and could possibly cause problems later on.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

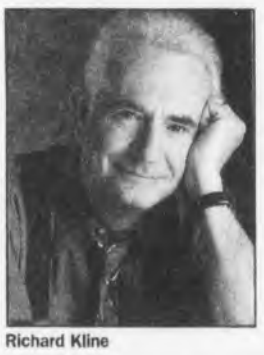
Off to see the wizard

Richard Kline lands 'Wicked' role

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

When he was cast as the Wizard in "Wicked," the Tony Award-winning musical that opened its third engagement at Boston's Opera House this week, Richard Kline knew he had some hard acts to follow.



"This character has two influences that could lead you astray. The dithering Frank Morgan from the classic movie based on L. Frank Baum's story 'The Wonderful Wizard of Oz,' or the darker character from Gregory Maguire's novel," explained Kline by telephone last week. "I wanted to be very careful to do something that was different with the character. I'm playing the Wizard as a guy who just wants to hold on to power and show that he is in command. His task is to keep everything status quo."

The Stephen Schwartz musical with book by Winnie Holzman – spinning the Dorothy Gale tale from the witches' perspective – is loosely based on Maguire's best-selling "Wicked: The Life and Times of the Wicked Witch of the West." Continuing to break box office records in its seventh year on Broadway, on North American tour, and in sit-down companies world-wide, "Wicked" has proven to be anything but status quo, a fact not lost on veteran actor Kline.

"This show's reputation preceded it, of course, when I got the call to audition. I saw the show twice before going into it, and by the second time, I remember just being completely blown away by it – the caliber of the talent, the costumes, the scenery, and, of course, the music. Even now that I'm in the show, I sometimes stand backstage and listen to 'Defying Gravity.'"

Richard Kline stars as the wizard in "Wicked" at the Boston Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, through Oct. 17.

Richard Kline

Lasting appeal is something Kline knows first-hand, having co-starred as Larry Dallas, John Ritter's ("Jack Tripper") womanizing best friend on the sitcom "Three's Company," from 1977 to 1984, and its spin-offs "The Ropers" (1979-1980) and "Three's a Crowd" (1984-85). Thanks to syndication and cable networks like Nick at Nite and TV Land, "Three's Company" has never really gone off the air.

"When we were doing that show, I thought it was great that we got eight seasons of work out of it, but I thought it was over when it ended. I never imagined it would remain popular for as long as it has been. Farce has a life of its own as it turns out. And, in addition to that, I think a lot of the show's enduring appeal has to do with how much people really enjoy watching good physical comedy that you don't have to think about too much."

What Kline, 66, does think about often are his co-stars from the ABC-TV comedy about a carefree bachelor platonically sharing an apartment with two beautiful female friends.

"It may have been called 'Three's Company,' but John Ritter was the show," says Kline of his friend and former co-star, who died at age 54 of an aortic dissection on Sept. 11, 2003. "We had hung out together so much while we were doing the series that we just kind of drifted apart when it ended. More recently, however, I had gone to see him on Broadway and he had come to see me in a couple of plays and we had resumed our friendship. We took in a ballgame together just a few weeks before John died. I drew so much inspiration from John and his amazing comedy style and I also valued him as a person very much. He is very much missed. These days, Joyce DeWitt ("Janet Wood"), Priscilla Barnes ("Terri Alden") and I get together occasionally at autograph shows. I adore Joyce and we remain good friends to this day."

The same cannot be said for Kline's relationship with the show's original third room-mate, Suzanne Somers, who famously left her role as dumb blonde Chrissy Snow in the series' fifth season when her salary demands were not met.

"My thighs are in pretty good shape and I haven't needed any estrogen replacement lately, so I haven't had any reason to contact Suzanne," says Kline of the actress turned TV pitchwoman and self-help author.

"Wicked" will be at the Boston Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, through Oct. 17. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 800-982-2787 or go online at BroadwayAcrossAmerica.com/Boston.

Bill Griffin is leaving town

Town manager takes job in private sector

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It was with mixed emotions that Town Manager Bill Griffin announced his intention to retire from public service at the end of October.

His leave notice marks the closing of his 34-year career in town management; the last five spent in the town of Cohasset.

When reached on Wednesday, Griffin was upbeat about what the future holds for him while recognizing this was the end of a chapter for him.

"From the very first day I came to Cohasset, I was welcomed here in town," Griffin, 57, said.

Griffin has spent his entire career working in a Town Hall. After receiving his masters in public administration at age 23, he walked right into his hometown's Town Hall looking for a job. His career led him to the top town management positions in several communities. He served as town administrator in Bourne and Dedham and Town Manager in Plymouth.

The news that Griffin is leaving surprised town officials, who all spoke highly of his expertise and accomplishments.

"He is really going to be missed."
— Selectman Fred Koed

The opportunity to start the next stage of his career came unexpectedly; Griffin said he wasn't looking for something new.

"It's an opportunity that came out of the blue," Griffin said. He saw a job posting in the Massachusetts Municipal Association's publication, The Beacon, and decided to send his resume in.

"It's a strange thing. This was the first job I've gone for that was not subject to the public process," Griffin said with a laugh. He didn't have to be interviewed in public, and he didn't have to see his name in the newspaper as a finalist for a position.

"This one was done in a very different way," he said.

After leaving Cohasset, Griffin will become the property manager at Round Hill Community in South Dartmouth.

State primary is Tuesday

Polls open 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There are 5,461 registered voters in Cohasset and this Tuesday's state primary vote is not expected to bring out even close to all of them.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas is estimating about 25 percent of registered voters will come out to cast ballots.

"I looked at the amount of absentee ballots and I looked back at years ago to see the turnouts. It's always hard to say and you always hope for a higher turnout," Douglas said. As of Wednesday, 35 voters had returned absentee ballots to the Town Clerk's office.

The most contested race on the ballot is for the 10th Congressional District seat. U.S. Representative William Delahunt announced in March he would not seek another term as congressman.

Both precincts (1 and 2) vote at the Town Hall auditorium and polls will be open from 7a.m. to 8p.m. on Tuesday.

Two democrats face off for the nomination: William R. Keating of Quincy and Robert A. O'Leary of Barnstable. Robert E. Hayden III, Raymond Kasperowicz of Cohasset, former state treasurer Joseph D. Malone, and Jeffrey D. Perry are fighting for the Republican nomination.

Playing under the lights

Sports Complex seeks 70-foot lights for turf field

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Playing under the lights of Fenway Park or Gillette Stadium is part of many young athletes' aspirations. While no one is proposing having lights of that caliber in Cohasset, the Cohasset Sports Complex is seeking permission to install 70-foot lights for their outdoor turf field.

The private complex, on the hill behind Hingham Lumber, opened over the summer. It has two full-size turf fields, one inside and one outside. Soccer and lacrosse are intended to be the main sports to utilize the complex.

The owners of the property are currently seeking a variance from the Zoning Board of Appeals to erect the permanent light fixtures, which are not permitted under the town's zoning bylaws.

Under zoning bylaw, 45-foot light poles are allowed by right. Anything higher than 45-feet requires a variance or approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

On Tuesday night, the ZBA held its second public hearing on the topic.

The applicant presented that the current industry standards for sport lights, and to minimize off-property glare, higher poles are needed.

"At the crux of everything is if the lights were installed at the height permitted, it would be unsafe," said Andrew Dyjak of Musco Sports

Home Instead SENIOR CARE

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

OUT AND ABOUT

For those seniors who have chosen to remain living in their homes, transportation is critical to ensure access to necessary services such as medical care and grocery shopping. Adequate transportation enables seniors to remain living independently in their communities and helps prevent isolation and the possible need for long-term care placement. Many seniors must rely on the "good graces" of family and friends to provide much of the transportation. For those who need additional assistance with rides, a home healthcare service will provide an aide to assist the senior with his or her individual transportation needs. This option can take the burden off family members and ensure that the senior will have reliable transportation.

Running your own errands is hard enough. Add to that your parents' various appointments and needs, and you can feel like nothing more than the family chauffeur. We can help. Our compassionate caregivers can not only provide transportation, but we can also help with the daily tasks that can be so exhausting - bathing, grooming, dressing and medication reminders. You deserve help. Call 781-878-2994 to learn more about what we can do for you. Our address is 145 Washington St., Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

POLICE BEAT

Truck, small kids show danger of bridge jumping

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A concerned citizen reported to police at 6:32 p.m. on Wednesday (Sept. 1) that a large group of youth was using the bed of a pickup truck that was parked at the Border Street bridge to make the jump into the rapids below higher. Police, who were tied up at a domestic incident, did not immediately have a cruiser available and the truck and jumpers were gone on arrival.

In an unrelated incident, a concerned caller notified police at 3:45 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 2) that a father was allowing his two very young children to jump off the bridge. The caller was concerned for the children's safety. The man and children were gone when police arrived.

Police said with summer bicycle officers assigned to watch the bridge and conduct parking enforcement on Government Island, Sandy Beach, the village and Parker Avenue — that they have been better able to monitor the bridge jumping this summer. However, the two incidents, one with the truck and the other involving young children, are examples of why constant vigilance of bridge jumping during the summer months is needed, police said.

Telephone scam

At 10:23 a.m. on Monday (Aug. 30), a Jerusalem Road man went to the police station to report an apparent telephone scam from a veteran's organization. Police advise all residents not to donate to a charity that they do not know.

Break-ins

Two break-ins reported on Monday (Aug. 30) at Reservoir Road and King Street, are still under investigation. Police said the 54-year-old homeowner of the Reservoir Road home reported that about $20 in loose change and some jewelry were taken. There were no signs of forced entry. The report came in at 9:51 p.m.

The 80-year-old King Street homeowner reported that about $4,000 in jewelry was stolen. There was no sign of forced entry. She notified police at 10:08 p.m.

Detectives processed both crime scenes well into the night and gathered physical evidence.

MV crash

A 2006 Honda Civic operated by an 87-year-old Cohasset woman did not yield while making a left onto 3A from Beechwood Street at the lights and hit a 2005 Toyota Camry head on that was operated by a 64-year-old Cohasset man, police said. Both cars were towed; neither operator was transported. However, the female driver did complain of chest pains when she was served with a citation later at her home for failure to yield and she was transported to the hospital at that time.

Man located

A 72-year-old Scituate man was located at the funeral home in Cohasset at 11:40 p.m. where he works as a greeter after he had been reported missing by his family at 5:30 p.m. Scituate police notified Cohasset and thought he might be at the funeral home.

Suspended license

An 18-year-old Scituate man, operating a 1988 Chevrolet pickup, was arrested for operating after license suspension (subsequent offense) following a traffic stop at 8:20 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 31) on Cushing Road. The officer recognized the motorist, who had been summonsed on the same charge the prior week, and made the arrest.

Missing packages

A 43-year-old Cohasset man, who had been away for a few days, reported that two packages were taken off his mailbox. The report came in at 5:32 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 31). The man's neighbor noticed the packages that were left on the mailbox and when the resident returned asked if he had taken the packages in.

VCR taken

A 49-year-old Hull man, who had had a fight with his 45-year-old girlfriend also from Hull, was advised to seek restitution in court for items, including a VCR, he alleged his girlfriend had taken from a third-party's house in Cohasset where the argument took place. The boyfriend said the missing items belonged to him and police advised him to find proof of ownership and take the matter to court.

Fence damaged

A 68-year-old North Main Street man reported to police at 5:35 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 2) that his fence was damaged. He believes his driveway is used by some who attend the weekly farmers market on the common as a turnaround and thinks the damage may have occurred by someone turning around. Several pieces of the fence were on the ground.

Facebook

A mother concerned about Facebook postings regarding her and her daughter was advised to contact Facebook. Police said the postings were not of a threatening nature. The woman made the complaint at the station at 10:18 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 4).

Fence damaged

A 62-year-old Pleasant Street woman reported that someone had kicked in four or five pickets in her picket fence last Tuesday (Aug. 24). She believed the incident occurred the night before. Police think the incident was random and it is under investigation.

Summonsed

• A 31-year-old Scituate man is being summonsed for unlicensed operation and speeding following a traffic stop at 6:13 a.m. on Saturday (Sept. 4) at Chief Justice Cushing Highway. An officer on traffic patrol observed the 2003 Nissan Xterra speeding and pulled the vehicle over. A computer check revealed the operator was unlicensed and the car was towed.

• A police officer on patrol in the area of Route 3A and Brewster Road at 6:37 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 4), observed a 2005 Toyota van pass him. The officer noted that the van had an expired registration sticker on the plate and pulled the van over. The operator, a 62-year-old Cohasset man, will be summonsed for court for having an expired driver's license and for a number plate violation. Control of the vehicle was taken over by a family member and a tow was not necessary, police said.

OUI arrest

A 45-year-old Cohasset woman was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol late Thursday (Sept. 2) on Atlantic Avenue at about 10:07 p.m. Police said she drove her 2007 VW down a long driveway at a high rate of speed, hit a cord of word and another car. The Atlantic Avenue homeowner called police. The motorist failed field sobriety tests, police said. She was also charged with failure to stay in marked lanes.

Seagull attack

A concerned citizen called police at 11:41 a.m. on Saturday (Sept. 4) after seeing a man throw a rock at a seagull on Sandy Beach, hitting its foot. The family had been eating lunch and seagulls were flying around them. Police responded and did not find the seagull but witnesses said the seagulls were menacing the family and they were just trying to shoo them away.

No baby in trunk

A 77-year-old Scituate man swore to police that he observed a woman put a baby into her trunk, shut the lid and walk away. The 911 call came in at 4:26 p.m., Thursday (Sept. 2). Police and fire arrived where the 1997 Nissan Maxima was parked in the Shaw's lot. They did not hear any sounds from the trunk and had the owner paged at Shaw's where the man said she went. Just as firefighters were about to force open the trunk, the 53-year-old Scituate woman emerged from Walgreen's. She was very agitated about what was going on with her car, police said. She willingly opened the trunk that revealed a beach blanket, folded up beach chair and a five-gallon water jug – there was no baby inside. Police said the man apparently did not know what he had seen.

23 partygoers given second chance

Teen host on pretrial probation

"I cannot stress enough the importance of that phone call. The caller could have stopped a car accident from happening."
— Chief Mark DeLuca

Charges against a Cohasset teen who police said threw a drinking party with his mother's permission will probably be dismissed.

Quincy District Court Judge Kevin O'Dea on Aug. 30 put Taylor R. McQuade, 18, on pretrial probation until March 1. Charges are usually dropped if a person stays out of trouble while on pretrial probation.

The previous week, Judge Mark Coven gave the 23 underage partygoers at the McQuade party the option of taking part in the Brains at Risk Program seminar offered the Brain Injury Association of Massachusetts or enter a diversion program.

Cohasset Police Chief Mark DeLuca said the majority opted for the brain injury program, which is an education and awareness court-referral program that links choices made behind the wheel to traumatic brain injury.

DeLuca explained that the charge of being minors in possession of alcohol against thee 23 partygoers was dismissed prior to arraignment so the charge would not appear on their record.

However, DeLuca said Judge Coven and Clerk Magistrate Arthur H. Tobin did not take the matter lightly.

"I was impressed by the way Judge Coven and Magistrate Tobin handled the situation," he said. "The charge won't be part of a criminal record but they won't get a second shot." Therefore, if they were arrested again they would not have the opportunity to take part in a pretrial probation program and any new charges would appear on a criminal record, the chief said.

DeLuca explained that a courtroom was cleared out for the case. DeLuca spoke to the partygoers as did Christopher Barrow, who was paralyzed in an alcohol-related crash in Cohasset in February 2008. Barrow, then 18, was driving a pickup truck involved in the crash that killed his passenger, Tim Mahoney, 16. DeLuca said Barrow's talk was very compelling.

"Barrow explained from his wheelchair how he thought that (accident) would never happen to him," DeLuca recalled.

DeLuca said one of the attorneys representing several of the teens also got up and spoke about some of the situations he has dealt with.

McQuade and his mother, Elizabeth McQuade, 50, were both charged with violating the state's social-host law on July 31. They allegedly gave alcohol to 23 teenagers at their house in Cohasset. The teens ranged in age from 17 to 19 and were from towns across the South Shore.

Elizabeth McQuade's case is still pending. She is due back in court Oct. 18.

When she was arrested, McQuade was on pre-trial probation. She had been arrested after allegedly showing up intoxicated at her ex-husband's home, punching him and attacking him with her shoe, according to a police report. That incident led to her being charged with two counts of assault and battery.

Police arrested the McQuades on the night of July 31 after a neighbor complained of noise coming from the family's Deep Run house.

Chief DeLuca praised the concerned neighbor for calling the police.

"I cannot stress enough the importance of that phone call," DeLuca said. "The caller could have stopped a car accident from happening. We will thankfully never know what the caller could have prevented."

Cohasset police have stressed the importance of the fact that none of the partygoers were allowed to drive home that night.

The state's social-host law was enacted in the aftermath of a June 22, 1996, crash that killed a Marshfield teenager, who was drunk and on his way home from a graduation party in Cohasset when his vehicle crashed into a tree in Marshfield.

School superintendent search to get underway

The first order of business is contracting with a consulting firm to guide the committee and the process.

The School Committee is gearing up for a busy year as they set off on a search for a new superintendent. With less than a year to fill the top position in the school district, the committee is getting going.

The first order of business is contracting with a consulting firm to guide the committee and the process.

On Saturday, Sept. 25 the school committee will meet and interview three of the four interested consultants. The interviews are scheduled for 10a.m., 11:30a.m. and 1p.m. A fourth consultant possibility may be interviewed at an evening meeting the following week, school committee member Jeanne Astino said this week.

The school committee will then make a decision on which firm to hire. Both the interviews and deliberation of which firm to hire will be posted public meetings and will be televised on public access cable.

The one-day event was chosen over several night interviews for convenience.

"We'll have all the information right there in front of us. It will streamline the process," Astino said.

The committee expects the consultant's services to cost, at the upper end, $15,000. The cost was not budgeted in the fiscal 2011 budget; the committee will have to find savings in other line items before the close of the fiscal year (June 30, 2011) in order to pay for the consultant.

"We're all about transparency in the search for a new superintendent," school committee chair Helene Lieb said. "This is one of the most important positions in our town. We need input from the community, faculty, students – this needs to totally be a community hire."

Current school superintendent Denise Walsh's last day with Cohasset Schools will be April 6, 2011.

The superintendent hire process typically takes six months, and the committee would like to see someone in place by the time of Walsh's departure. Many current superintendents are bound to contracts that require 60 to 90 days notice.

"That's why we're going now, full speed ahead," Lieb said.

Sports Complex seeks 70-foot lights for turf field

Lighting, the company that would install the lights. With a lower height, glare on the field is increased, he said.

Dyjak said industry standards called for 50-foot lighting poles, at a minimum. However, over the past few years the vast majority of sports lighting for high school and youth sports has been installed with 70-foot poles.

Zoning Board member Ben Lacy argued the applicant themselves were creating the hardship for themselves by wanting to install the lights. He was concerned drivers could be distracted by "the four brilliant cones of light" from the field.

In order to earn a variance, the applicant needs to provide evidence that because of the zoning bylaw regulation, they are not able to use their property for an allowed purpose.

"We're not asking to do something that we're not permitted to do; we're asking to do it as a different height," said attorney Richard Henderson, who is representing the sports complex.

Dyjak said while it may seem counter-intuitive, but the higher height light fixtures create less off property light than the 45-foot light poles. About 150-feet away from the field there would only be some light visible in some areas, similar to a full moon.

Lacy said at 45-foot the lights won't be able to be seen from the distances the 70-foot lights would be. He said he visited the property on a recent night and temporary lights, about 25-feet in height, lit up the field for night play.

"Those lights right now are not creating glare," Lacy said.

Henderson said it came down was a safety issue.

"We'd be happy if we could (install the lights) at 45-feet. But the industry standards say we would create a better situation at 70-feet than what zoning prescribes," Henderson said. "My client is trying to run a business and comply with industry standards."

Henderson said this was a classic variance case, "(due to safety concerns) we're prevented from doing something we can do by right."

There was no public comment from the audience; although the ZBA said one letter from a Sanctuary Pond resident concerned that the glare from the lights could cause a car accident.

The zoning board closed the public hearing, with the provision they will accept the planning board's recommendation before making a decision.

The Zoning Board will deliberate the application at their next meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 5.

BRIEFLY

No regionalizing with Hull

The Cohasset School Committee once again rebuffed the Hull's Schools proposal to study a regionalization of the two school districts.

Recently, school committee chair Helene Lieb and school superintendent Denise Walsh met with their Hull counterparts to discuss the possibility of "marrying" the districts. Hull officials drafted a specific motion for the Cohasset School Committee. The motion was to form a study committee to look at the advantages and disadvantages of regionalizing the school districts. Hull requested they take up or down action on that specific motion.

"We need to have a vote on that. They really need to know the direction," Lieb said.

None of the members of the Cohasset School Committee supported the motion as it was written resulting in no action being taken.

In lieu of taking action on Hull's suggestion, member Jeanne Astino proposed a new motion.

Astino said she's like to see the districts look at how to capitalize on economies of scale – where can they save money on supplies, equipment. Member Paul Schubert also suggested adding services, utilities and personnel.

"This would not be a full regionalization of the school districts," Astino said.

The committee voted 3-0 in favor of the motion. Member Linda Snowdale abstained from the vote as she is an employee of the Hull School system.

Walsh said she would communicate the votes to the Hull school officials.

Contracts ratified

The School Committee ratified the contracts of two unions working in the school district at their meeting on Sept. 1. The food service employees and the custodial staff received new contracts for the new school year.

Historical Society to present program on 'Tuskeegee Airmen'

Cohasset Historical Society will begin its Wednesday night lecture series on Sept. 22 with a program on "The Tuskeegee Airmen." In July 1941 a unique group of men began a program that was the first of its kind in military history. These highly qualified, courageous men were the first African American men to undergo training to become pilots in the US Army Air Corps. Of the original 13 to start the program, only five finished the grueling 9 month course and received commissions. This group lead the way for the training and successful completion of the pilot training course for 996 men between 1941 and 1946. Overcoming discrimination and prejudice, these men had an outstanding fighting record in World War II.

Guest speaker Jack Bryant was a member of this elite unit. He will bring his experience and that of his comrades to life with a talk and a film. The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Pratt Building at 106 South Main St. Members and non-members are invited to attend this event. There is no charge and light refreshments will be served.

Griffin takes job in private sector

"I'm very happy for him, but very sad for the town,"
Advisory Committee chair Sam Wakeman

Mass., a gated condominium development on Buzzards Bay. There are about 90 units, including single-family homes and a historic mansion divided into 16 condo units. The facilities include a private, nine-hole golf course and a private beach.

Griffin said his responsibilities would be similar to those of a town manager: managing finances, staff, and facilities.

Although responsibilities will be similar, Griffin said the switch would give him more time with his wife and family. Griffin estimated he attends between 80 and 100 meetings in the evening and weekends per year in his role as town manager. In his new job he will have Board of Directors meetings just five times per year.

"I'm going to be able to at home at night. It's going to be a better quality of life and it's invigorating and exciting to do something different," Griffin said.

This past year has been more controversial than others with the regional dispatch center and the water department's budget crisis, but Griffin said none of that played into his decision.

"I've dealt with more than this in past years!" Griffin said. "It financially made sense and for my quality of life it made sense."

He named working with the current and past boards of selectmen as one of the positive features of his five years.

"They have been wonderful to work with. They were respectful of the town manager position and allowed me to do my job," Griffin said.

One of his enduring legacies will be the town department head appointments he has made over the years.

"Not everyone may agree, but I think we made good appointments," Griffin said.

Griffin's last day will be Friday, Oct. 29.

Reaction

Griffin came to Cohasset five and a half years ago under less than optimal circumstances. Previous town manager Mark Haddad had abruptly resigned at the end of a controversial year for the town.

"I think (Griffin's leaving) is a great loss for the town. He was the perfect town manager to come in after the last situation," Board of Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said. "(Griffin) has been a great asset and has seen us through some challenging economic times."

Advisory Committee chair Sam Wakeman lauded Griffin's team approach to what he does, "he works well with everybody."

"I'm very happy for him, but very sad for the town," Wakeman said, adding Griffin has helped to turn around the town's financial situation.

"He has given us some great guidelines and all we have to do is follow them," said Wakeman.

Selectman Fred Koed sat of the Board of Selectmen when Griffin was hired.

"He came in at a tumultuous time. We has a couple of good candidates, but he stood out," Koed said. "He is really going to be missed."

Koed said Griffin is widely respected in the municipal world for his expertise, and Koed has always appreciated his non-confrontational and very business-like demeanor.

"In situations where there is a lot of contention, he is able to calm the waters down," Koed said. "I've really never heard anyone have any complaints about him and that's saying something…He is an outstanding manager."

Moving forward

With seven weeks until Griffin's departure, there is a lot to do.

The Board of Selectmen will meet on Monday, Sept. 20 to discuss plans for an interim town manager, what needs to be accomplished before Griffin's final day and how to move forward in the search for Griffin's successor.

This fall is expected to be a busy one. Special Town Meeting is in November, budget planning for fiscal 2012 is already beginning, the regional dispatch planning is ongoing and the water department is about to have its audit.

"One thing that is clear is the town can't afford to stand still while looking for a new town manager," Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said. She expects an interim town manager to be someone that will be proactive and pick up where Griffin left off.

Quigley said the warrant for special town meeting will be completed before Griffin's leaves and he has offered to come back for the meeting to answer any questions that may come up.

Griffin and Quigley are already looking at the Selectmen's agenda for the next few weeks to ensure what needs to be discussed is discussed.

"We want to be in the best state we can before he leaves," Quigley said. "We all need to rise to the occasion."

Cohasset student captures environmental scholarship

Megan Richardson of Cohasset, set to begin her undergraduate engineering studies at Lafayette College this fall, becomes the first Henry David Thoreau Scholar to enroll at her school. She received a four-year HDT Foundation Scholarship of up to $20,000 for studies in environmental fields.

Since 1999 Henry David Thoreau Scholars have studied in colleges and universities around the world. They work to advance global health by protecting the environment and ensuring sustainable use of the world's natural resources.

At Cohasset High School, Megan's accomplishments were impressive. For instance, she teamed up with several classmates to build a 27-foot tall model of one ton of carbon dioxide. It towered above their school and delivered a powerful message about environmental problems. She worked four years at the Center for Student Coastal Research, where she specialized in wetland monitoring and pollution discharge elimination systems. And she completed a video for pre-school students on the subject of Minot's Light, a site rich in maritime history. Her parents are Mark and Elizabeth Richardson.

DTC Movie Night is Sept. 17

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee presents the first in its monthly series of movie on Friday, Sept. 17th at 7 p.m. "Our Daily Bread" and other films of the Great Depression will be shown in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Library. This collection of Depression-era films of the 1930s "mirrored the new social consciousness that was helping to pull the United States out of economic ruin and despair." This collection of rarely seen short films and a full-length feature includes "California Election News #1," "The Flow that Broke the Plains," "The River" and the agrarian drama, "Our Daily Bread." These historic films of the Great Depression will naturally bring comparisons to the financial downturn of 2008. This showing will appeal especially to history buffs, in particular, to those local folks who may have lived through the Depression. There is no charge and refreshments, as always will be served.

Milestones for children

Cohasset mothers focused on finding a cure for a rare disease

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If you hear the phrase, "the fight for a cure," it could refer to any one of thousands of fundraising efforts happening right now to support medical research to find cures for innumerable diseases.

Each one of the efforts has a story behind it and a story to tell. Each one is in a different stage in its pursuit for the ultimate goal — a cure.

Here in Cohasset a little boy lives with a rare disease — a brain energy metabolic disorder — and the fight for his cure is at a critical stage of research. For close to two decades researchers have been chipping away at the neurological condition called glucose transporter deficiency syndrome, or GLUT1.

For all intents and purposes seven-year-old Bobby Allen, the son of Shelly and Chris Allen, is a normal growing boy. He started second grade at Osgood this week. He rides a bike. He plays with his brother and sister. What sets him a part is he is one of about 300 in the world diagnosed with GLUT1.

"If you met him you wouldn't know he had this disease," Shelly Allen, Bobby's mother, said. An early diagnosis and treatment gave Bobby the best opportunity to deal with GLUT1. "He is the exception."

In many cases, it has taken families years to discover the true cause of their child's seizures and lack of development, both symptoms of GLUT1. A diagnosis of GLUT1 means your cells are not picking up and transporting glucose to the brain properly. Glucose is the principal source of fuel to the brain and without it the brain does not have what it needs to develop and grow.

Children with this disorder have a myriad of physical and mental disabilities, ranging from mild to so severe that they cannot walk or talk.

The only known treatment for an extremely restrictive diet called the ketogenic diet, which is usually used for children with seizure disorders that do not benefit from conventional drugs. The diet is high fat, no sugar, adequate protein and very little carbohydrates. Calorie and food intake are extremely limited due to the high fat nature of the diet. The diet provides an alternative brain fuel to energize brain cells and ensure they continue their development.

In 2003, at 11 weeks old, Bobby was diagnosed with GLUT1. The life-altering early diagnosis was possible because of the efforts of the New York City-based Colleen Giblin Foundation and Dr. Darryl DeVivo, who discovered the GLUT1 syndrome in 1991 and undertook to find a way to diagnose and someday cure it.

Shortly after the diagnosis, Bobby's family and friends joined the Colleen Giblin Foundation's mission to support finding a cure for GLUT1.

In 2008 Allen returned from New York with news that the federal funding for the ongoing research for GLUT1 had been discontinued and she decided it was time to step up her efforts.

Allen joined forces with her close friend and fellow Cohasset mother Muffy Antico to found a non-profit dedicated to finding cures for rare diseases one at a time, starting with GLUT1. Milestones for Children was born.

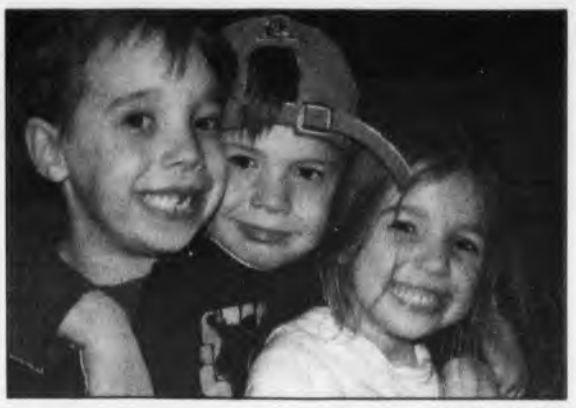
A partner organization to the Colleen Giblin Foundation that has supported children's neurological and cancer research since the 1980s, Milestones for Children is helping to bridge the funding gap and reach the goal of finding a cure for GLUT1.

"The researchers and doctors are pretty confident this is a curable disease," Allen said. "What makes this a compelling story is in just one generation we could find a cure to this horrible, debilitating brain disorder."

Allen said the research has been gaining ground and the possible drug therapy cure is ready for human trials.

"Money for this research right now can make all the difference in the world for a child," Allen said.

There are about 300 known cases of GLUT1, but it is estimated 10 times that number suffer from the disease without a diagnosis.



While fundraising is a focus of Milestones for Children, raising awareness about the little-known disease is an equal goal.

"Over time we hope with more awareness more children can be saved and given the chance to reach their potential," Antico said. "We want to have every child be diagnosed immediately in the first few weeks of life."

Allen and Antico hope to make Milestones for Children a household name.

"This is just the beginning. We're so close to a cure for GLUT1. Once we have the cure, Milestones for Children is going to move on to another rare disease that is underfunded and neglected," Antico said.

"We know there are other families out there struggling with something ... we don't even know what yet ... but they need help, too."

How to help

Milestones for Children is putting on a fundraising event in Cohasset on Saturday, Sept. 18 at 7p.m. The event will take place under a tent at 124 Atlantic Ave. Aldous Collins and his band will be performing so be ready to get up and dance.

This year's event – the third annual — will be serving heavy hors d'oeuvres, beer and wine. Tickets are $125 per person. Donations to Milestones for Children are tax-deductible and if purchasing tickets for this event, all but $50 per ticket is a donation.

To purchase tickets or to find more ways to contribute, visit www.milestonesforchildren.org.

How 'Milestones for Children' got its name

According to the dictionary definition, a milestone is "a significant event or stage in the life, progress, development, or the like of a person, nation, etc." Synonyms include: achievement, anniversary, breakthrough, event, landmark, plateau step.

"Considering our mission is to fund research to cure rare diseases, I thought of it as the cure being the ultimate milestone for children as we help them meet their other milestones along the way," said Shelly Allen, co-founder of the non-profit.

Her son, Bobby, has GLUT1. Every time Bobby successfully completed a normal childhood milestone, like riding a bike or growing an inch, it was an incredible victory.

"We want every children with GLUT1, or another rare disease to do whatever they are capable of and want to achieve," Allen said.

Artists capture Cohasset Day spirit

Local artists will capture the activity and flavor of the third annual Cohasset Day, Sunday, September 12 from 1-4 pm. Hingham artist Vcevy Strekalovsky will paint en plein air throughout Cohasset Village, which will be host to a number of activities including a Farmer's Market, retail shop events, a classic car parade, live bands and a food festival. At the Art Center, there will be a community art project for all and artist demonstrations by oil painter Susan Dragoo Lembo and fiber artist Virginia Holloway. The galleries will be open for visitors, showcasing Liminal Spaces, featuring the work of five contemporary artists exploring boundaries through various media.

Barnistas: Four Cohasset artists who work under the name The bARnisTas, will hold an open studio in the Barn at 207 N. Main Street, just outside the Village. Annemarie Whilton, Trish Berube, Amy Geyer and Danguole Rita Kuolas have gathered weekly for over five years to create art, critique each other's work, plan outings to see exhibits and share information on exhibition opportunities. Each artist is also involved in the art world on a full-time basis, whether teaching art, working as book designer, taking art classes or working in their own studio preparing for exhibitions. Their artwork can be seen at exhibition spaces on the South Shore and in galleries and juried shows in Boston, Cambridge, New York and Chicago, frequently winning top awards. All four have art degrees and have been creating art for many years, but they will readily admit the their current success as artists can be attributed to the encouragement and support they show one another at their weekly meetings in the barn on North Main.

Cohasset's natural and historic beauty — from the quintessentially New England Common to its rocky shores —speaks to artists and creative thinkers. For over 50 years, South Shore Art Center has flourished because of the many generations of talented artists, students and supporters who understand the value of the arts in a thriving community. South Shore Art Center will be open Noon- 6 pm on Sunday, September 12. For more information call 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org.

Fleming Trust anniversary celebration

On Sept. 16 at 6 p.m., Cohasset residents are invited to join the celebration of the 20th anniversary of the Fleming Trust.

In 1989, before retiring, Mary E. Fleming was the donor of two trusts, which provide financial assistance to any Cohasset resident, who chooses to further his or her education at Boston College High School or College of the Holy Cross.

This year the Fund is celebrating its 20th year of aiding Cohasset students. To date approximately 200 families have benefited from this legacy.

This year also marks the 8th anniversary of the founding of the Edward Fleming Company now known as Flemings of Cohasset Village on Elm Street. Some of you will remember vividly the store and Mary and John. Both were born and raised in Cohasset and spent their business careers operating the store until their retirement in 1983. They were an integral part of what makes Cohasset such a wonderful place to live.

There will be a mini exhibit of the Fleming family and the store at the Cohasset Historical Society Headquarters the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St. for the month of September.

To observe the anniversary of the store's opening and the creation of the Scholarship Fund we are asking you to join the celebration from 6 to 8 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 16 Lightkeeper's House at Government. Cost is $20 per person. Please call for reservations. Contact Owen L. O'Malley at 781-383-0379 or Philip H. Smith at 781-383-0549.

COHASSET DAY

Classic cars on parade Sunday

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

COURTESY PHOTO

One of the 2010 Cohasset Classic Concours entries. A rare 1935 DKW AutoUnion F 5 Roadster—a Larz Anderson German Car Day winner. Other Pre-War entries, like this one include a very rare 1938 Delahaye 135M Roadster and a beautiful, two toned, 1934 MG PA roadster.

There are more than 25 cars getting their final coats of polish and care as they prepare for the 3rd Annual Cohasset Classic Car Concours as part of Cohasset Day 2010, and the field of "beauties" is still growing. Classic Car owners from the South Shore and beyond take great pride in entering their beloved autos into the morning judging event, which will take place prior to the cars cruising into Cohasset Village on Sunday. Whether your knowledgeable about classic cars or not, this year's entries are sure to grab the attention of "children" of all ages.

For the car fanatics out there, here are some of the entries to date: Jaguars (1962 racing XKE coupe; 1957 XK 140 Roadster; 1968 E Type Coupe OTS; a 1953 C Type roadster); 2 Ferrari (1992 348 TS [last year's Cohasset Class winner] and a 1997 355 Challange); Aston Martins, a '54 DB2; several '50's-60's era Porsches (including the 2010 Larz Anderson winner of German Car Day and a double winner in last year's CCCC — 2nd in Championship Class and the public's choice "Hottest Car", a 1958 356 speedster); Mercedes SL's; a Rolls Royce Corniche Convertible; an award winning MGA 1500 roadster; a Triumph TR3; a fabulous Navajo beige 1964 Ford T-Bird; a 1978 Delta 88 convertible with a "Rocket Engine"; a 1973 Karmann Ghia; a 1965 Dodge Dart convertible with it own bar under the hood; and a 1978 red Volkswagen convertible (also a double winner last year's Cohasset Classic Concours-2nd in Cohasset Class Competition and the public's choice "Kid's Favorite" winner); and more.

The Concours participants will be on tour, with police escort, from approximately 2:30 pm -2:45 p.m., traveling at about 15-20 mph. Cars will begin at Nichols and Jerusalem roads. The route they take is as follows: Nichols to Atlantic; Atlantic to Beach; Beach to Highland to North Main; North Main to Ripley; Ripley to Pleasant; Pleasant to Cushing; Cushing to Pond; Pond to South Main (at St Anthony's Church); Straight up South Main to Brook Street. All the entrants will then travel to Brook Street on South Main where the parade stage commences at approximately 2:45 p.m. The parade will then tour up South Main to Robert Jason Road to Highland, around the Town Common, back onto North Main and land on the north lawn of the Common.

Members of the Cohasset Classic Car Concours 2010 Committee include: Pete Brown, Chairman; Peter Richardsson, Head Judge; Kate Richardsson, Head Scorer and Official CCCC Photographer; Jim Theriault, Judge and Head of Event Logistics; Jim Hazen, Judge and participant with 1954 Aston Martin racing DB 2/4; Jim Sandell - Judge; Stephen Murphy, Judge; and Brian Wilkin, Member and past participant.

A table will be set up on Cohasset Common, where the cars will be parked, so that the public can cast their vote for "Best of Show", "Hottest Car" and "Kid's Favorite." Take some time looking at the cars, asking questions of the owners and then cast your votes for the ones that get you all revved up! Winners will be named at the 5 p.m. ceremony at the music stage. Fun gets underway at 1 p.m.

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"Simply put, it's a day to have fun and be grateful for where we live. We hope everyone will stop by to have some fun for a least an hour — or two."

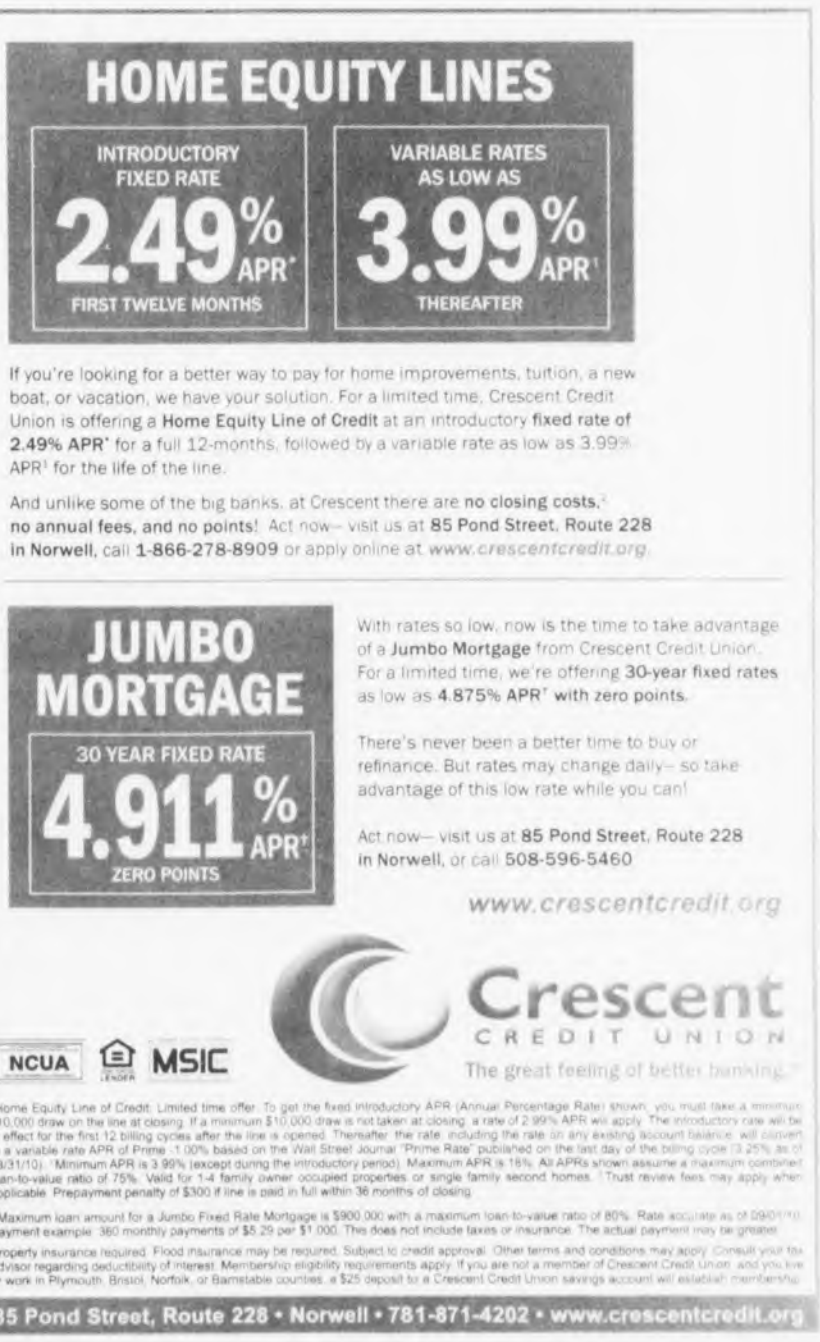
— Tim Chamberlain, Cohasset Day Committee

This Sunday, residents of the South Shore are all invited to bring friends and family to the 3rd Annual Cohasset Day from 1- 6 p.m. Celebrate this beautiful seaside community and help foster the idea of keeping it "local" to sustain the vibrancy of our village and businesses along Route 3A.

"It's a day to sample food from local restaurants, shop, enjoy the live music by local bands and enjoy the kid's games on the Common," says Tim Chamberlain, Chair, Cohasset Day Committee. "This event is a fun way for businesses in the Village to show how grateful we are for those who patronize the local 'mom and pop" store and even help them thrive in this challenging economy. Simply put, it's a day to have fun and be grateful for where we live. We hope everyone will stop by to have some fun for a least an hour — or two."

It couldn't truly be a "Cohasset" Day without that strong sense of community service that is such an integral part of life in this town. Over 20 non-profits will be participating in the day's events at tables throughout the Village or through Open Houses at various storefronts around town, they include: Cohasset Education Foundation; Cohasset Elder Affairs; Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library; Scituate Animal Shelter; Cohasset Garden Club; Cohasset Historical Society; Cohasset Recreational Department; Cohasset Historical Commission; Cohasset Rotary; CHS Cheerleaders; Cupcakes for Cancer; Cohasset Gridiron/Friends of Cohasset Football; Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research/Cohasset Maritime Institute; Appalachian Services Project; Cohasset PSO; Sandy Beach Association; Our World Children's Museum; First Parish Unitarian Church; Beechwood Congregational and St. Anthony's Church.

Cohasset Day is free and open to the public, residents and non-residents alike. However, the most delicious part of the day, the Fine Foods Galore event within the event, does have a price of admission. The food sampling has a cost of $10 for individuals and $20 for a family This year there are no advance sales for Fine Food Galore, tickets may be purchased at either end of Main Street on the Day of the event.



The downtown will be closed to vehicular traffic so all can browse and shop the stores and sidewalk tables that will be lining the streets. The Common, the Arts Center, Historic Society and businesses along Ripley will also be participating so be sure to explore outside the Main Street.

Cohasset Day is a joint initiative of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and the Cohasset Economic Development Committee. Donations from the day's proceeds will be made to the Council on Elder Affairs and the Cohasset Food Pantry. Visit www.cohassetday.com for a full list of activities.

OPINION

Endorsements in the 10th Congressional District race

O'Leary for the Democrats

There are many people mad as hell at government and they aren't going to take it anymore. A few of them have decided to run for office and are building a platform on their anger.

While they may be well-intentioned, they are short on specifics, action plans and what they can do about their anger beyond shouting it to whomever will listen.

Fortunately, for voters who make up the 10th Congressional District we have a Democratic candidate in Robert O'Leary who has a proven track record of getting things done in the state Legislature, has been a champion of important causes as state senator from Cape Cod and the Islands and has the political fortitude to best represent the needs of the 10th district. That's the way we see it from our vantage point and why we are endorsing O'Leary for the Democratic primary on Sept. 14.

O'Leary has been a vocal and tireless advocate for education, the environment, our beleaguered fishing industry and economic opportunity. He is credited with rewriting legislation that in the end not only sought to boost state support for life science businesses, but also marine science, such as the Marine Biological Laboratory in Woods Hole. State funding allowed the renowned Cape institute to pursue private funding for its work, and the result was a multi-million grant from the Howard Hughes Foundation that created jobs and research opportunities.

As a college professor, he has been a champion for education, leading the way on many causes, including the state's bullying bill, as well as leading the charge with this year's ed reform bill that led to substantial "Race to the Top" funding for the Commonwealth. On the environment, he wrote the oceans management act, the first of its kind in the nation. The act seeks to better manage our water resources so they are protected but at the same time can increase maritime jobs and energy opportunities.

O'Leary readily acknowledges that many of the issues facing the Cape are remarkably similar to those on the South Shore, including education and coastal issues. In the northern end of the district, we will need O'Leary to help bring a positive resolution to the development at the former South Weymouth Naval Air Station, as well as continue to fight at the federal level to protect our coastline along the South Shore as it pertains to funding for seawalls.

The previous representatives from this district — Democrats Gerry Studds and William Delahunt — earned a reputation in the district for their constituent service and responding to the needs of the people. As a state senator, O'Leary has also received high marks for being in close touch with the people, organizations and businesses he represents. He is visible at countless meetings and events, working with his constituent base. We expect nothing less from him if he is privileged enough to serve in Congress representing Quincy to Provincetown.

Malone for the GOP

There's not a lot of difference between 10th Congressional District Republican candidates Joe Malone and Jeff Perry — or between either of them and fellow GOP hopefuls Robert Hayden and Ray Kasperowicz, for that matter.

Both Malone and Perry are opposed to the health care reform bill that passed earlier this year, believe in a tax, spending and regulatory structure that they say would create jobs because businesses would know what the rules are going to be, support continuing to fund the war in Afghanistan and say they're willing to stand up to their own party as well as the Democrats.

Both have a track record in state government — Malone being a former state treasurer and Perry having served the last eight years as a state representative from Sandwich.

Both even have scandal in their pasts — Malone's being theft of state funds from the Treasury Department by what he called "scoundrel employees;" and Perry's being his handling of illegal strip-searches from his days with the Wareham Police Department and accusations that he received a college degree from a "diploma mill."

So why is Malone the best candidate for the GOP in the Sept. 14 primary?

It actually has something to do with a line associated with one of Massachusetts' most famous Democrats, former Speaker of the House Tip O'Neil — "All politics is local."

Perry likes to tout his lengthy list of endorsements, and there are some impressive names on there, including U.S. Sen. Scott Brown, former Gov. Mitt Romney and Massachusetts Republican National Committee member Ron Kaufman.

But while Perry — in spite of his history of delivering for his constituents — has been appealing to voters based on his mainstream Republican credentials, it's Malone (who granted, has a pretty mainstream Republican behind him in former New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani) who has built his campaign around seeing voters face-to-face time through his "Joe's on the Job" or "Morning Joe with Joe" campaign stops. Chances are very good you've seen Malone in your town during the course of the campaign.

Malone's success in getting spending under control during his time as treasurer — reducing operating expenses by 62 percent by his calculations — bodes well for the biggest challenges ahead, which include jumpstarting the economy and getting people back to work.

And Malone, who has been out of the political spotlight for the last 11 years, stands to bring more of an independent mindset to Washington, despite his Republican affiliation. As state treasurer, Malone not only battled powerful Senate President Billy Bulger, but also took on fellow Republican governors during his tenure.

Malone provides tenacity, experience and is politically savvy — all important qualities needed to bring about change in Washington and to make sure the myriad issues facing the 10th Congressional District are given due attention.

Malone promises not only to be a champion for the district, but also vows to "shake the system up." From what we've seen of the system lately — meaning government — it could use shaking.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

CEF grateful for EF Homestay support

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Education Foundation I would like to thank Education First Homestay (EF Homestay) and in particular all of the host families (over 50!) that participated in the cultural exchange program this summer. For each host family in Cohasset, EF Homestay donated a part of their proceeds to the CEF to support the Foreign Language Lab project at the Middle/High Schools.

Because of the tremendous support from the Cohasset community, this July EF Homestay was able to present a check to the CEF for $5,000.

This fall, for the first time, both Cohasset Middle and High Schools will have access to their own state-of-the-art Language Labs. Thanks to everyone involved for your commitment to our kids, our town and our future!

Pond project to set sail soon

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Meeting House Pond Project — As we write this article there is a meeting underway in Town Hall for prospective contractors who might be bidding on the reconstruction of Meeting House Pond on the Common. If this project has not been on your radar screen, we thought we might tell you a bit about it. You are probably familiar with the pond that has anchored the southern end of the Common since the early days of Cohasset when it was used as a watering place for the animals that grazed on the Town's Common land.

Over time, the pond has been formalized with concrete walls and even a fountain in the center that adds ambiance to the pond. The pond was rebuilt by the Department of Public Works in the late 1980s, but now has started to crumble in a serious way. Each winter, with its freezing and thawing cycles just makes matters worse. It is now to a point where further degradation may cause the pond sidewalk area to be closed.

At this past Spring Town Meeting our citizens appropriated the necessary funds to reconstruct Meeting House Pond. The new design will construct new walls erected on a frost resistant foundation.

You may have noticed that the fountain that sprays upward from the large rock in the center of the pond has not been functioning for a while. Actually, it was turned off as a water conservation measure during this summer's drought. The fountain is directly connected to a Town water line and the water is not recirculated in the pond. One of the new design features is a recirculation system that will allow a vigorous fountain that will recirculate the water in the pond.

We have to admit that we are not used to its new name of Meeting House Pond, and find ourselves often referring to it as the Duck Pond, as we have for years. We sometime wonder if the ducks that frequent the pond are aware of the name change. They don't seem to be very upset about it, as they blissfully swim about.

Seriously, there has been an issue of residents and visitors feeding the ducks even though it might encourage then to hang around beyond the time that they should be packing up for their sojourn to the southlands. Several years ago a sign was posted on the benches to discourage the practice.

In spite of the sign the ducks don't seem to be unhappy about it. Perhaps they can't read very well and aren't aware of what they are missing.

HEALTH NOTES

Topics worthy of attention

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Don't use hearsay. Get expert timely information, but qualify it with a question or two to a reliable knowledgeable source about your specific case.

After more than 500 issues of Health Notes in the Mariner, gradual alterations of our society, our Town and the writer, have changed the approach to the column. As a result of changes in our daily lives, factors affecting our health have taken on a holistic character and no longer directly related to medical condition but on a vast number of effects other than clinical matters. We depend on you, the readers, to whom I'm enormously grateful for your kind casual comments, interpreted by Joe Godzik, Tara Tradd, Mary Goodwin, and the Board for topics. We welcome our readers' important suggestions.

We have always paid casual attention to the varied and mostly polite comments we've received, but hereafter, we intend to be particularly attentive and have prepared a listing of topics which we believe are important and need, at some time to be covered including:

Hand sanitizers: why the fact that the overuse of such obviously beneficial measures lead to a host of unexpected consequences – Asthma type reactions, runny nose, watering eyes, etc. - the too much of a good thing syndrome.

The Bedridden Medical System: We're learning frightening facts about why everything costs so much. Consider a friend who's 94; tells me she's in perfect health; sees her doctor regularly, has little need for help from anybody. Was sent to spend two nights and days in a hospital bed complaining to the staff there was nothing wrong with her. Every doctor agreed when each examined her. When is it necessary to have a checkup?

Media coverage: especially of the H1N1 is now about the best example of the premise that the present condition of a situation has little to do with its impact on an individual. Don't use hearsay. Get expert timely information, but qualify it with a question or two to a reliable knowledgeable source about your specific case.

A problem when it occurs, deserves questions about how serious is your own experience as compared to others you know with the same complaint.

Interval between occurrences: Frequently a decision to act depends on how often the problem arises. What's done about it frequently awaits the optimistic view that it may go away by itself. Often the optimistic assessment merely postpones a decision to a more serious outcome.

Solutions change: Old solutions can become new problems. Take for example acetaminophen like Tylenol. It used to be that the doctor would say take two aspirins and call me in the morning. Now, Aspirin is outré. Doctors may have stopped saying "take two etc. etc." Damage to the liver caused, in some part by broad use of acetaminophen particularly among children and lower income people has burgeoned.

Weight gain or loss. Let's face it, fat goes on in places no one wants it, like arteries and in front, or other unattractive places and several industries are kept busy trying to redistribute it. We all know the problem and its solution, and we attack it in different ways with varying frequency and success.

Location Location Location: Cohasset has diseases Back Bay, Scituate or Hull never heard of, and vice versa. Location has much to do with types of illness. For example, asthma is prevalent in urban areas and sun damage is more likely where occupations are practiced outside. Would that we could always be assured of a climate adapted to our health needs.

The March of Technology: Diagnosis and medical data are a problem for doctors, but its impossible to obtain a judgment about one's condition only from sources in the health field.

When dealing with any practitioner, their response to you may center on the solution to your problem, but they also have the same real life issues most of us have, those of preserving their livelihood, investing wisely, keeping current on the latest developments in their field and balancing their interests against those of their patients and others with whom they may be associated. Tell us of matters you'd like discussed.

Vision to build orphanage being fulfilled

LETTER FROM KENYA

VIRGINIA BURBANK

Editor's Note: Mrs. Virginia Burbank is a former Cohasset High School English teacher. She retired in 1996 after 32 years of teaching in the district. In 2006, she traveled to sub-Saharan Africa, to Nairobi, Kenya, to visit her missionary sister and saw thousands of children living in poverty and filth — and without parents to watch over them. She felt she was called to do something about it. For the past four years, she has worked endlessly to build an orphanage – An Oasis of Peace – in the heart of Kenya.

I am filled with overwhelming joy because my vision to build an orphanage in Kenya is being fulfilled as I write this letter. Yes, the children will be moving in on Friday, Sept. 10th, and Monday we will be registering all of them at St. Peter and Paul's Catholic Academy, a local school. They will be picked up by the school bus at 6a.m. and dropped off at their new home after school.

This week we spent a whole day at the local clinic having them tested for malaria, typhoid, yellow fever, amoeba, worms, and HIV/AIDS. Among our 18 children we have five cases of typhoid fever, four with malaria, two cases of HIV/AIDS and the rest with worms and/or amoeba. There were only two healthy children among them.

The doctor has assured us that the typhoid will clear up quickly with the new clean environment that we are providing and, of course, with medication. Up until now, the children have been drinking filthy water anywhere they can find it. The children with HIV/AIDS look very sick and sad right now, but the doctor said that with the nourishment that we are providing for their little bodies, they too could live a "normal" life. What a privilege to be in a position to change the lives of these precious children.

What a privilege to be in a position to change the lives of these precious children.

Every month I will be sending you a photograph and a biographical sketch of one of our orphans. In this way, if you feel ready to be a child's educational sponsor, it will cost $39 per month to attend the St. Peter and Paul's Catholic Academy, which is ranked number one in academic excellence in this district. This tuition money covers porridge in the morning at ten, lunch, school uniforms, and transportation.

The orphan for September is Mwaniki, a six-year-old boy, who has been living in utter poverty in his grandmother's little mud hut, sleeping in a twin-sized bed with six other children. That's right, seven in one bed. I have fallen in love with this child already and he has not even moved in yet. Mwaniki is one of the five who have contracted typhoid, but we know that, by faith, he soon will be well.

If you would like to sponsor Mwaniki, even providing for his breakfast and supper with us ($24 per month), please send your monthly tax-deductible check to: "An Orphan's Dream,Inc." Box 692727, Quincy, MA 02269. If you wish us to have your monthly donation taken out of your account automatically, please e-mail Josephine Costello, our financial clerk, and she will set it up for you. Her e-mail address is josephinecain@hotmail.com.

The names and ages of the other boys are Kimanthi 12, Trevor 12, Symon 11, Kariuki, 10 Kinyua 10, Flavian, 9, Brian 5, Mutembei 3, and the girls are Nicetta 14, Victoria 13, Wamiru 12, Karimi 9, Risper 7, Kagendo 7, Makena 7, Synthia 7, Agata 2.

Thank you for reading this letter. I hope some of you remember me as your English teacher at Cohasset High School from 1964 to 1996.

Facebook departure has ripple effect

School scrambles for biology teacher

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Some school committee members questioned the urgency of filling the position.

Cohasset Schools are on the hunt for a biology teacher to fill two sections at the high school.

What Superintendent Denise Walsh described as a "critical" open position is a result of former STEM program supervisor Dr. June Talvitie-Siple's abrupt departure two weeks ago.

Walsh asked Talvitie-Siple to resign from her $92,000-a-year position after parents found disparaging remarks about the community on her public Facebook page.

With school starting this past Tuesday, Walsh is looking for a commitment from a biology teacher to teach for at least the first semester.

The open program supervisor position came up several times, over various different topics, during the course of last Wednesday's (Sept. 1) School Committee meeting.

The position for the STEM program supervisor, who oversees the curriculum and faculty in the science, math, technology and engineering areas, is currently posted. The deadline for application submittal was Tuesday, Sept. 7.

Chairman Helene Lieb asked whether teachers from the relevant departments would be involved in the interview process of the program supervisor.

Walsh said she planned to establish a team including the high school administration, members of the science and math faculty and one of the other program supervisors, to help her choose the next program supervisor.

While the search is on for a new program supervisor Walsh said high school principal Joel Antolini and assistant principal Mike Gill would interface with the STEM departments for budget development and supervisory purposes.

Some school committee members questioned the urgency of filling the position.

School Committee member Jeanne Astino asked whether it was possible to forgo filling the position this year and appoint an interim department head.

Walsh said she'd like to see what kind of candidates have applied before making that decision.

Next, the school committee discussed the possibility of limiting the length of any contract to one-year contract. Walsh was again non-committal.

"It depends on the type of experience a candidate brings to the table. There might be someone we don't want to get away," Walsh said, adding she was not going to fill a position just to fill a position.

Astino said she had some concern about Walsh tying the district to a multi-year contract for a program supervisor when she would be leaving the school system in the spring.

Paul Schubert said he wouldn't want the school district to sacrifice a strong candidate for the sake of a one-year contract.

A greater issue was whether the school committee wanted to continue on with the program supervisor model at all.

Lieb said she has done some research into the differences between the department head and program supervisor model.

"In school systems of our similar size the focus needs to be on energizing the faculty. You want as much faculty involvement as possible in department decisions," Lieb said. "The topic should be discussed – is (the program supervisor model) working for Cohasset?"

Walsh said that question might best be answered through the strategic planning efforts of the coming year.

Member Linda Snowdale agreed the program supervisors should be re-visited, "it has been a controversial topic."

Cable studio gets a home

School committee gives OK for studio use

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I'm very happy with the idea of having a studio in the building."
— Linda Snowdale, School Committee

At long last, the town's cable studio has a home — an already built-in space in Cohasset Middle-High School.

An area off of the middle-high school library that is currently used as a small classroom and storage space will be transformed in the coming months to a functional television studio for all members of the community to use.

After months of unsuccessfully searching out an affordable and practical location for the town's television studio the Cable Advisory Committee approached the schools. Over the summer the committee hammered out an agreement with the school business manager to ensure the venture would be beneficial and workable for both parties.

At the School Committee meeting on Sept. 1 the agreement was approved. The non-profit Cohasset Cable Television Group, the town's designee for cable services, will pay $500 per month for the use of the space. The committee formerly targeted space in the Town Hall auditorium, but bids for the build-out came back substantially over budget.

"We're one year behind in our plan. We've been held back due to the need for space. We can't wait much longer," said Pat Martin, chair of the cable advisory committee. Currently, Verizon customers have no access to public television, which is currently only broadcasting live public meetings, due to the lack of a studio. Being a new local access provider, Verizon needs a central location to install their broadcast equipment.

Superintendent Denise Walsh said she would like to see the agreement include a specific plan on how the studio will benefit students.

Martin said the plan is to create a vibrant television station to meet the needs of the community. Two channels (10 and 22) will eventually broadcast local programming. Channel 22 will not be online right away, but is designated for student and school purposes.

An addendum to the contract was made to stipulate the cable group would provide access for student and school staff participation in the productions of cable TV content as soon as practicable. It also stipulated channel 22 should be up and running within the first five years, but the committee expects it to be sooner.

The contract stipulates the Cohasset Cable Television group will have access to the studio during after school hours (between 2 and 10p.m.) as long as the building is open and available. All users of the studio will need to have CORI checks.

"I'm very happy with the idea of having a studio in the building," said school committee member Linda Snowdale.

The contract will run for five years.

Last year, with the advent of the competition, cable TV providers are approaching local access television, dubbed public, educational and governmental access, differently. In past years, Cohasset has utilized a television studio on Route 53 in Norwell (and before that a studio in North Scituate) to film local programming like the popular local talk show "Our Town."

But a year ago, Comcast closed its Norwell studio and left the area towns without the ability to produce local access television. The cable providers are now hand the money (from the subscribers) to the town to create and maintain their own studio.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call has obtained the official list from the state treasurer's office of the "per diem" travel, meals and lodging reimbursements collected by the 40 state senators in 2010 through August 30. The list reveals that senators have collected a total of $36,732. Under state law, per diems are paid by the state to senators "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." These reimbursements are given to senators above and beyond their regular salaries.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a senator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. The Legislature in 2000 approved a law doubling these per diems to the current amounts. The payments range from $10 per day for senators who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 per day for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 per day for those in Nantucket. Senators who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often are the ones who collect the highest total of annual per diems.

Supporters of the per diems argue that the system is fair and note the rising costs of travel, food and lodging.

Some opponents say that most other private sector and state workers are not paid additional money for commuting. Others argue that the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous when thousands of workers are losing their jobs and their homes, the state is in the midst of a recession, funding for important programs has been cut and taxes have been raised.

The 2010 statistics indicate that 14 senators have received reimbursements ranging from $400 to $6,570 while 26 senators have so far chosen not to apply for any money. State law does not establish a deadline that senators must meet in order to collect the per diems.

The senator who received the most per diem money in 2010 is Sen. Benjamin Downing (D-Pittsfield) with $6,570. The other 13 senators in order of the amount of money received include Sens. Michael Knapik (R-Westfield) $5,610; Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst) $5,580; Gale Candaras (D-Wilbraham) $3,120; Richard Moore (D-Uxbridge) $2,880; Jennifer Flanagan (D-Leominster) $2,808; Michael Moore (D-Millbury) $2,376; Susan Tucker (D-Andover) $1,638; Harriette Chandler (D-Worcester) $1,476; Anthony Petruccelli (D-East Boston) $1,330; Steven Panagiotakos (D-Lowell) $1,144; Joan Menard (D-Somerset) $1,080; Frederick Berry (D-Peabody) $720 and Marian Walsh (D-West Roxbury) $400.

LOCAL SENATORS' PER DIEMS FOR 2010 THROUGH AUGUST 30

The dollar figure next to the senator's name represents the total amount of 2010 per diem money that the state has paid the senator through August 30. The number in parentheses represents the number of days that the senator certified that he or she was at the Statehouse during that same period.

A total of 26 or 65 percent of the state's 40 senators did not list any days and did not request any per diems. This should not be construed to mean that these senators were never at the Statehouse in 2010. It simply means that they chose not to list the number of days and not to request their per diems.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL:

Here are five bills that have almost made it to Gov. Deval Patrick's desk. Supporters of each measure are hoping they can clear the final hurdle or two remaining to get the proposals to the governor for his approval.

WIND ENERGY FACILITIES (H 4955) - The House and Senate both approved the conference committee version of a bill that would change the process of siting wind energy facilities in cities and towns. Only final Senate approval is needed prior to the proposal going to the governor. Republican senators have been holding up the measure by repeated moves to delay final action in the Senate.

Supporters say the bill streamlines the permitting process and still includes safeguards that would ensure cities and towns have the final say whether to allow a wind energy project. They note that more wind energy projects would create jobs and help Massachusetts wean itself off imported fossil fuels.

Opponents say the bill goes too far and would dilute the power of cities and towns to decide whether to grant a permit to a wind energy developer. They note that voters should have the final say on whether to allow a wind energy project in that community.

Y = Yes, N = No, NV = No Vote. *President rarely votes.

New information for Ripley Road project

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"In real estate it is all about location, and this is a prime location."
— Larry Escobar of First Colombia Realty

The 40-B proposal at 25 Ripley Road has new information to present to the Zoning Board of Appeals this week.

Armed with a revised site plan, new developer, lighting plan and landscape proposal, the members of the ZBA began to get a clearer picture of the proposal.

The application proposes transforming the current 2,200-square-foot, single-family home into a seven condominium units with 11 bedrooms. Three units will have one-bedroom and four will have two-bedrooms.

This is not the first time the Ripley Road project has had an audience before the Zoning Board. A year ago, the zoning board denied the project's application after months of hearings, largely due to a lack of evidence.

Cohasset resident, property owner and developer, Will Charles, appealed the denial of the application to the state. The state's Housing Appeals Committee has remanded the application back to the Zoning Board with some very specific requirements for more information.

Two of the units will be deemed "affordable" by state standards. The inclusion of these two units allows the entire project to be possible under Chapter 40-B, the state's affordable housing law. Under Chapter 40-B towns with less than 10 percent housing stock are vulnerable to housing projects that can be approved under flexible zoning rules.

The application as it stands asks for waivers relieving the project of at least a dozen local zoning requirements.

The applicant introduced a new developer, Larry Escobar of First Colombia Realty, for the project. Escobar said he has been a part of building 200 homes and his company currently owns 80 rental units in the Worcester area.

"In real estate it is all about location, and this is a prime location," Escobar said, adding he is looking forward to developing something in Cohasset and the South Shore.

One of the primary concerns brought up throughout the hearing process last year and this year is the parking density. The town's zoning bylaws call for two parking spaces per unit for a total of 14 parking spaces required.

Although the 14 spaces meet the requirements of the zoning bylaws, ZBA chair Woody Chittick had some concern with the lack of guest spaces.

"I'm raising it as a safety issue…there cannot be on street parking; it's prohibited and for good reason," Chittick said. He asked the applicant to come up with some options to address this situation.

The driveway will be made into a one-way entrance and exit, from Ripley Road to Sohier Street and the applicant agreed to change the parking plan to angled spaces.

The project engineer Neil Murphy said the angled parking spaces could free up additional space on the property to allow for required setbacks or additional parking spaces.

The ZBA said they would like to see an updated site plan by the next hearing, scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 9.

Some aspects of the site plan had already changed with the new plan set. While the project has previously proposed the addition of a farmer's porch on the Ripley Road and Sohier Streets sides of the house, the last plans call for its removal. Landscaping will be added in its place.

In reviewing the landscaping proposal, Chittick said he would like to seek input from public safety officials to ensure the landscape screening does not interfere with the sightlines of the nearby intersection of Sohier and Ripley.

Chittick said he would like to have the town's engineering consultant review the lighting plan data before a decision is made.

"I had a hard time understanding the existing lighting plan," Chittick said. Although the applicant said the outside lights were staying the same the plan indicated some changes.

"My concerns are is the lighting adequate on the site and does it not put glare or spill over to neighboring properties," Chittick said.

Joslyn Peters of 12 Ripley Road said was concerned that the lights, although they might not be changing very much according to the plan, would be on more frequently due to safety reasons. She suggested the lights be fixed from edge of the property to shine on to the property rather than from the building out.

Other neighbors – there were about six in the audience – expressed concerns with the project as presented.

Kathy O'Malley of 56 Sohier St. said her primary concerns stemmed from the density of the project.

"It's way too big, seven units is way too many," O'Malley said.

Mindy Evans of 36 Sohier St. expressed concerns with the lack of conformity in the plans, "my head is spinning tonight trying to keep up with the plans."

Chittick agreed the lack of consistency in the plans was an issue. The new site plan expected by the next hearing should get the board, the applicant and the interested public on the same page. The new plan set is expected two weeks prior to the next hearing.

The hearing was continued to Tuesday, Nov. 9 at a time to be determined.

Polls open 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday

"I looked at the amount of absentee ballots and I looked back at years ago to see the turnouts. It's always hard to say and you always hope for a higher turnout."
— Town Clerk Marion Douglas

Douglas said having a Cohasset candidate (Kasperowicz) in the congressional race could bring out a contingent of local voters.

There's also a race for auditor in both parties and for treasurer and councilor on the Democratic side.

Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, is unopposed on the Republican ticket and Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, is unopposed on the Democratic side.

While there is no Democratic candidate for Hedlund's seat, Republican Timothy F. Finnerty of Hingham is running for Bradley's seat and his name is on the Republican primary ballot.

Voters in Tuesday's primary will also have the opportunity to cast votes for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General, Secretary of State and Norfolk County Sheriff.

There is a three-way race for Norfolk County District Attorney on the Democratic ballot. Michael Chinman, Joseph R. Driscoll, Jr. and Michael W. Morrissey are the candidates seeking the position.

There are a total of 5,461 registered voters in Cohasset; of those 1216 are Democrats, 1198 are Republicans and 13 are Libertarian. There are 3027 voters who are unenrolled in any political party. Unenrolled voters can pull a Republican, Democrat or Libertarian ballot and it does not change his or her unenrolled status.

For the state primary, registered Democrats, Republicans, and Libertarians are required to take the ballot from their party. However, there are no candidates on the Libertarian ballot, but write-ins are possible.

The primary does not include unenrolled independent candidates.

Unenrolled voters may take any ballot and will automatically return to unenrolled status after the election, according to Douglas.

On Tuesday, Sept. 14 the polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Voting will be at the Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., for Precincts 1 and 2.

For further information, contact the Town Clerk's Office, 781-383-4100.

Candidates Corner

Chambers announces candidacy for state Representative

Editor's Note: Candidates provide their own campaign announcements.

Carlton Alan Chambers of Hingham has entered the race for state Representative of the Plymouth Third District for the towns of Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and North Scituate. Currently a Realtor at Raveis Realty in Norwell and a substitute teacher at Weymouth High School, he has extensive experience in banking and securities. Notably, his volunteer experiences include Board of Directors of South Shore Hospital; boards of Mass Mortgage Bankers and Quincy Savings Bank. Chambers is active in the Hingham Police Academy Alumni, Citizens Emergency Response Teams and the Massachusetts Medical Reserve Corp.

Chambers will run as an Independent candidate opposed to the political machine controlling the General Assembly. The resulting oligarchy is dictated by the Speaker of the House, and is unresponsive to voter direction.

The primary focus of his tenure will be loyal representation to the citizens of the district without the entanglements of political party demands. Chambers is a fiscal conservative and is firmly opposed to the Commonwealth's unfunded mandates that bankrupt the towns and are causing the layoffs of police, fire and teachers. While all states are required to present balanced budgets, Massachusetts exceeds the limits at the demands of special interests. It is time for Independent voting to end the flagrant mismanagement of the Commonwealth's budget and direction.

The State Primary election will be held Tuesday, Sept. 14. The Candidate Profiles on these two pages were compiled from questionnaires sent to eachof the 10th Congressional candidates on the ballot for the September primary.

Robert Hayden

Age: 43
Address: 126 Pleasant St., Hanover
Family: wife: Pat; children: Jacqueline, 10, Ryan, 6, Victoria, 3
Current occupation: Dig Safe Compliance Officer
Education: Hingham High School, Plattsurgh State University, NY. Southern New England School of Law
Public service experience: Assistant District Attorney, Plymouth County D.A.'s Office (three years)
Civic involvement: Hanover Youth Hockey coach, Bay State Breakers
Key endorsements: None. I have not sought any endorsements.

Position Points

What are your top three key issues? Why?
Incumbents in Washington have stopped listening to us (i.e., ramming Obamacare through over the objection of the majority of Americans). We need to take our country back from career politicians and political insiders by sending regular people to Washington DC.

We need to get government out of the way so that the economy can recover and get people back to work by cutting taxes and focusing government on keeping Americans safe.

We need to stop the out-of-control spending that is burying this and future generations under a mountain of debt.

Do you support a definitive timeline for withdrawing troops from Afghanistan?
No

Do you support efforts of individual states to enact immigration laws?
Yes

Would you support repealing the healthcare bill that passed earlier this year?
Yes

How can government help the economy:

To turn the economy around we must elect people to Congress who will repeal Obamacare; Americans didn't support it because we know it is unaffordable and will lead to long waits and bad care. We also need to return certainty to the economy by cutting taxes. It worked when Presidents Kennedy, Reagan, and George W. Bush did it, it will work now. Businesses are sitting on capital because they are waiting to see how these specific issues are addressed. They are waiting to see whether Americans vote for business as usual in the fall, or we vote to restore America's greatness. We need to fire the incumbents and career politicians who grew government and put their own political fortunes ahead of the country's. We need to replace them with people whom we can trust. We need to reject the policies that redistribute wealth from people who earned it to those who have not. We need to send a message that the government works for us, not the other way around. We will end this two-year love affair between the leftist running our country and European-style social democracy. It spends too much, increases the size and reach of government, kills liberty and it creates long-term-high unemployment.

Raymond Kasperowicz

Age: 67
Address: 172 South Main St. Cohasset
Family: wife: Tanna; sons: Peter and Thaddeus
Current occupation: certified public accountant
Education: Degree in accounting from University of Rhode Island.
Public service experience: Cohasset Sewer Commission (nine years); Cohasset Advisory Board (one year) as a member and chairman
Civic involvement: Cohasset Republican Town Committee, Citizens for Limited Taxation
Key endorsements: None

Position Points

What are your top three key issues? Why?
Jobs. People need jobs to survive.

I will work to reduce government spending. If we don't reduce spending we will end up in a situation similar to Greece. The people we owe money to will start making spending decisions for us. Jobs.

Do you support a definitive timeline for withdrawing troops from Afghanistan?
No

Do you support efforts of individual states to enact immigration laws?
Yes

Would you support repealing the healthcare bill that passed earlier this year?
Yes

How can government help the economy:

Passage of the Health Care bill has created a business environment that is leaving $2 trillion of investment capital on the sideline. This investment capital is the equivalent of 2.5 stimulus packages. Added discussion of a Cap and Tax scheme on carbon emissions by our President and Congress doesn't help bring this capital off the sideline and into the economy creating jobs. Business feels confident to hire people when they know what labor costs are. Our current President and Congress have not helped business because they have added uncertainty to future costs by passing the Health Care Bill and threatening to introduce carbon emission taxes. If elected I would vote to repeal or defund the Health Reform bill which would bring that $2 trillion off the sideline and into the economy creating jobs.

Borrowing money from the Chinese to create government jobs does not constitute "job creation" it only increases our national debt.

Age: 55
Address: 142 Jericho Road, Scituate
Family: wife, Linda; four children, – Joey, 21, Sam, 18, Carolyn, 16, Charlie, 13, as well as guardians to Rodney, 19.
Current occupation: small businessman – business development and consulting
Education: Harvard University, 1978, B.A. in Government; Waltham High School, 1973; Phillips Andover, 1974
Public service experience: Massachusetts State Treasurer (eight years); Executive Director, Massachusetts Republican State Committee, one year
Civic involvement: Big Brothers Big Sisters, YMCA, Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, Children's Hospital, MARA (Mentoring At-Risk Athletes, Scituate Basketball Association
Key endorsements: House Republican Chief Deputy Whip Congressman Kevin McCarthy; Mayor Rudy Giuliani; Governor Bill Weld; Governor Paul Cellucci; U.S. Attorney Michael Sullivan; former State and National Committeewoman Polly Logan; Christy Mihos; former Cape and Island state Senator Paul Doane; Yarmouth Selectwoman, Tracy Post; Barnstable Planning Board Vice Chairman, Matthew Teague.

Position Points

What are your top three key issues? Why?
Improving our economy by creating jobs, reducing spending and lower taxes. Without these, we will not be able to right our economic ship. Let's extend the tax cuts for everyone; take left over Stimulus funds and pay it toward the debt; repeal and replace the job killing health care bill that increased costs for business and individuals and stop the outrageous spending.

Do you support a definitive timeline for withdrawing troops from Afghanistan?
No

Do you support efforts of individual states to enact immigration laws?
Yes

Would you support repealing the healthcare bill that passed earlier this year?
Yes

How can government help the economy:

Get out of the way. The government has over-taxed and over-regulated business to the point of making it impossible for them to grow and hire, particularly in a poor economy. We need to stop the massive spending and regulations that are creating a climate of uncertainty. We need to stop the bailouts on the backs of taxpayers and stop the implementation of taxes and fees on people through the health care bill and the terrible Cap and Trade energy tax. We need jobs to improve the economy and we must remember that the government doesn't create jobs, private sector small businesses do. Let's get back to the basics in Washington. Kick the special interests and lobbyists out of the offices of the Congressmen and put the voices of the people back in. I believe that I have the unique experience, will, and backbone to take on the broken system in Washington and fight for the people of the 10th District.

Jeff Perry

Age: 46
Address: 7 Burning Tree Lane, East Sandwich

Education: Graduate of Bristol Community College (Associate's Degree), Curry College (Bachelor's Degree), and New England School of Law (Juris Doctor).
Public service experience: Represented the 5th Barnstable District (which includes the town of Sandwich and portions of Barnstable, Bourne, and Mashpee) since 2003.

Position Points

What are your top three key issues? Why?
Families across America are hurting right now, and my top priority as Congressman will be to find ways to turn our economy around and get people back to work.

I believe that health care costs and high taxes are the biggest factors inhibiting business growth, and as a member of Congress I would fight for a more responsible tax policy and reform of the cost side of health care.

The secure future of our nation is threatened by illegal immigration and a skyrocketing national debt, and I would work hard as a Congressman to find ways to get both problems under control.

I cannot answer this question in one word.

Do you support efforts of individual states to enact immigration laws?
Yes

Would you support repealing the healthcare bill that passed earlier this year?
Yes

How can government help the economy:

Half a million people nationwide filed for first-time unemployment benefits last month. That's almost as many people as live in the entire 10th Congressional District itself. With nearly one in 10 Americans out of work, our country needs sound policies to revive our economy and restore jobs.

I believe strongly in a responsible free enterprise system where lower taxes promote opportunity and encourage economic growth. Government should regulate responsibly where necessary and be a partner where appropriate. Small businesses are the key to quality employment opportunities. This is the American story, which I believe we need to refocus on.

In particular, I support making the so-called "Bush tax cuts" permanent as a way to help Americans keep more of their hard-earned money. I also support eliminating the so-called "death tax" so family businesses can pass from generation to generation without being taxed out of existence.

I also believe we need to tame our $14 trillion national debt. Its crushing size inhibits job growth, causes tax increases, and threatens to rob future generations of their quality of life as they struggle to repay our bills from today. Our foreign-owned debt load also poses a national security issue for America.

Candidate Profiles -10th Congressional Democrats

Bill Keating

Age: 57
Address: 10 Adeline Place, Quincy
Family: Wife, Tevis; daughter Kristen; and son Patrick
Current Occupation: Norfolk County District Attorney
Education: BA in Political Science from Boston College; MBA from Boston College Graduate School of Business; JD from Suffolk University Law School
Public Service Experience: Massachusetts House of Representatives 1977-1985; Massachusetts State Senator 1985-1999; Norfolk County District Attorney 1999 to present.
Civic Involvement: Founder of Norfolk Advocates for Children, a non-profit child advocacy center for children who have been sexually and physically abused.
Key Endorsements for this election: The Sierra Club, Massachusetts AFL-CIO, Weymouth Mayor Sue Kay, State Sen. Michael Morrissey, American Federation of Teachers Massachusetts, State Rep. Garrett Bradley; The Retired State, County and Municipal Employees Association of Massachusetts, Professional Firefighters of Massachusetts, former State Rep. Richard Kendall; Massachusetts Coalition for Police

Position Points

What are your three key issues? Why?
Job creation, protecting Social Security and Cape Wind.

Job creation is a priority that we must focus on. As Norfolk County District Attorney I have seen the impact that this recession has had on this district. I've seen people lose their jobs and I've seen families lose their homes.

We also need to focus on projects like Cape Wind, which will create nearly 1,000 jobs and make Massachusetts a leader in the alternative energy sector. Cape Wind will also prevent environmental disasters like the recent BP oil spill and global warming.

I am the only candidate opposed to raising the retirement age of Social Security. I think that raising the retirement age is unnecessary and cruel, especially during the worst recession since the Great Depression.

Yes

Do you support efforts of individual states to enact immigration laws?
No

Would you support repealing the healthcare bill passed earlier this year?
No

How can government help the economy:

To help the economy, we need to focus on helping small businesses and job creation.

In Congress I will fight to free up loans and provide tax credits for small businesses so that they can hire new employees again. Small businesses make up 85 percent of our state's economy, and they are what we need to focus on to get people back to work.

The Southfield redevelopment of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station is a $1.3 billion dollar project that must be a priority for the next Congressman. Located in the towns of Abington, Rockland and Weymouth, Southfield is the largest development project in the state that will create thousands of construction and permanent jobs.

I also support Cape Wind because it will help create a green technology industry in Massachusetts while changing the way we produce energy and preventing future environmental disasters. Cape Wind will provide an immediate boost to the economy by creating nearly 1,000 construction and permanent jobs here in Massachusetts. I want to be the Congressman who brings this technology and these jobs to the Massachusetts 10th Congressional District.

Robert A. O'Leary

Age: 64
Address: 154 Indian Hill Road, Barnstable
Family: daughters: Christina Barlow - married to Eugene Barlow - children: Caroline, Cameron; Kate Etherington - Married to - children: Ella, Lowen, and Aiden Nicole O'Leary
Current occupation: State Senator - Cape & Islands District; Professor - MA Maritime Academy
Education: Georgetown School of Foreign Service-B.S; Tufts PhD-History; Harvard - MPA
Public service experience: Barnstable County Commissioner (1987- 2000); MA State Senate 2001-current Civic involvement: Board of Trustees of Sturgis Library, Association to Preserve Cape Cod, National Seashore Advisory Commission, American Heart Association
Key endorsements: Massachusetts Teachers Association, SEIU Local 1199, Massachusetts League of Environmental Voters, the United Food and Commercial Workers Local 328, five former state environmental secretaries, and former U.S. Senator Paul Kirk.

Position Points

What are your top three key issues? Why?
My top three issues are to focus on and create jobs, to prioritize and invest in renewable energy and green technologies, and to set a hard deadline for troop withdrawal in Afghanistan. By investing in renewable energy we can reduce our dependence on foreign hostile nations and create jobs here at home. Ending the war in Afghanistan allows us to bring our soldiers home along with the billions of dollars we have spent there, so we can invest our tax dollars into our economy here and put our men and women to work rebuilding our economy.

Yes

Do you support efforts of individual states to enact immigration laws?
Yes

Would you support repealing the healthcare bill that passed earlier this year?
No

How can government help the economy:

We need to nurture the recovery, promote a healthy business climate, support small businesses, and promote wise capital investments. By ending the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan and letting the Bush tax giveaways for the wealthiest families expire, we'll save hundreds of billions of dollars that we can use to cut the deficit, protect Social Security and Medicare for seniors, and invest in green jobs and education. We need to get health care costs under control because they threaten to bankrupt both state and the federal governments. Also, key to protecting the jobs we have and creating jobs in the future is preserving our environment and creating green jobs. Finally, in order to attract and create good, lasting jobs we must prioritize education. I've been a teacher for 34 years, and as the Chairman of Education in the State Senate I've helped make our best-in-the-nation schools even better and I'm proud of that.

Boys soccer wins opener

Skippers knock off Harwich

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Boys' Soccer

Last season, the Cohasset boys soccer team felt they could beat Harwich, but both times the teams played, Harwich walked off the field with one-goal wins.

Things have changed.

This season, after graduating the bulk of the team that was nearly flawless the last two years, Harwich is back to Earth and Cohasset might be even stronger than the playoff edition of a year ago.

It showed in the season opener, where the Skippers knocked off Harwich 3-0 behind two goals by Drew Cobin and a pair of assists from Anders Goetz.

Coach Jim Willis is hoping for big things from his team.

"We have a big mix off classes," Willis said. "All four classes have starters. There are freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors. Last year we had a senior-laden team. It was a good senior group, but we have a pretty good core back."

Willis said he hopes this year's group plays with the same intensity as last year's squad.

"We'll be a little more skilled this year," he said. "But it's yet to see if we have the same fire. Last year we worked hard."

When it comes to graduation, the biggest loss is probably goalie Will Wise, who at times kept Cohasset in games single handedly.

"Will Wise was a four-year starter and an All-State player," Willis said. "Sam Richardson did a good job as his backup. He did a good job. He'll do well. He's a tall athletic kid. He's got a good foot and he fills the net. Last year he played well on the JV and the varsity."

Willis said getting the first no-no so quickly can only help.

"To get a shutout in the league and the first one is nice," he said. It can only help the confidence."

Still, Willis doesn't plan to get overconfident after one win.

"Harwich is rebuilding right now," he said. "They were solid, but I don't know if they're the best in the league."

A strong preseason helped.

"We played a lot of good teams," Willis said. "We played teams that were bigger, stronger, like Weymouth, Scituate, Hingham, Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop Williams, Plymouth North and Stoughton. I know a few of those teams went a long way in the playoffs last year."

Offensively, Willis said he'll look to Goetz, Cobin, Jamie Timothy and Jonah Adkins to make things happen.

"Drew Cobin controls the midfield," Willis said. "He's a big kid who can put pressure up front. Jonah Adkins had a goal yesterday and had four great chances that their goalie made great stops on. Jamie Timothy has the hardest shot on the team."

Other players who could pitch in offensively are Nick Tangherlini and Nick Brown.

Willis is especially excited about his midfield.

"I think we're pretty well balanced," he said. "Possession in the middle of the field should be a strength. With Cobin, Adkins and Monaco, we should control the possession in the middle. I love our back line too. They're very solid. Travers and John McGoldrick will do well. Joe Buckley is a freshman who will be playing in back. He's the biggest kid we've got. I feel very comfortable with our backs."

"In years past we've had a lot of 1-0, 1-1 games," Willis said. "We have to learn to put the ball in the net and finish. We have to be thinking more aggressively. If the midfielders get the ball up, we'll do well."

A wacky, winning start

Field hockey downs Carver

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Field Hockey

It took a while for the Cohasset field hockey team to pick up their first win of the season.

There were no losing streaks, in fact Cohasset won their opener at Carver. It just took some extra time because of the weather.

"It was a crazy day," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "There were 12 minutes left in the second half and there was lightning so we had to wait a half hour. Then as soon as we went back on the field there was more lightning. We started again and it started pouring."

Giuliano said Cohasset was ahead 1-0 when the lightning struck, and technically if the game were called Cohasset would have been the winner because it was far enough into the game.

"When it was delayed we were winning 1-0 Giuliano said. "If it had been called we would have won. They wanted to go back out. It felt like we really won."

Olivia Murphy and Angela Cipolla scored the goals for Cohasset. Murphy scored in the first half and Copolla scored in the second half.

It starts with the five captains,

Anna Seraikas (6) goes up for a header on a 50/50 ball late in first half action of Cohasset's 2-1 win over Harwich in their season-opener. Rachel Fredey and Caroline Fein both scored for the Skippers in the win. For more photos, see Page 20.

Kelsey Erler, Eliza Kinnealey, Sarah Mavilia, Natalie Dignam and Emily Toomey.

"They are the highest quality girls," Giuliano said. "They've kept the team upbeat and together. We're very tight. Even between the varsity and JV. We play as one squad. The girls know anybody can move up at any time. The captains do a great job. They're good athletes, but it isn't just athletic strength. They have character strength."

Giuliano said the captains have plans.

"They want to win the South Shore League title," she said. "That's a goal. We also have a goal of making the tournament. Those are our two major goals. We want a fun, successful season. That's important."

The captains have shown leadership on and off the field.

During the summer they put together a field hockey clinic and ran it themselves and they also had a car wash. Between the two they raised $3,000 for the team and had the entire team involved.

On the field, Mavilia and Kinnealey lead the way on defense and have help from goalie Whitney Jaffe, who was leading the league in goals against average last season before she was hurt midway through the season.

Offensively, Dignam and Murphy will probably lead the charge.

"Olivia has looked unbelievable in the preseason," Giuliano said. "One year she scored 23 goals with the JV. She looks set to do it again."

Giuliano said her squad should be in good shape, especially after they play a few games.

"We have a few freshmen who will probably play," she said. "There's an excellent group of them. I have to give credit to Beth Gilman in the Youth Program. She's done a great job. They'll come along once we have a few games under the belt."

TRULY SUPER

Due to an editing error, in the Aug. 27 edition of the Cohasset Mariner, Cohasset baseball star Jeff Cavanaro was inadvertently left off the CNC Super Team for baseball. Cavanaro should have been a member of the Super Team. We're making up for that by adding him to the team today. Cavanaro was the winning pitcher in the Div. 4 championship game and more than one player and parent said that he was the heart of the team. Cavanaro will be front and center again this week when he steps under center as the quarterback for the Cohasset football team.

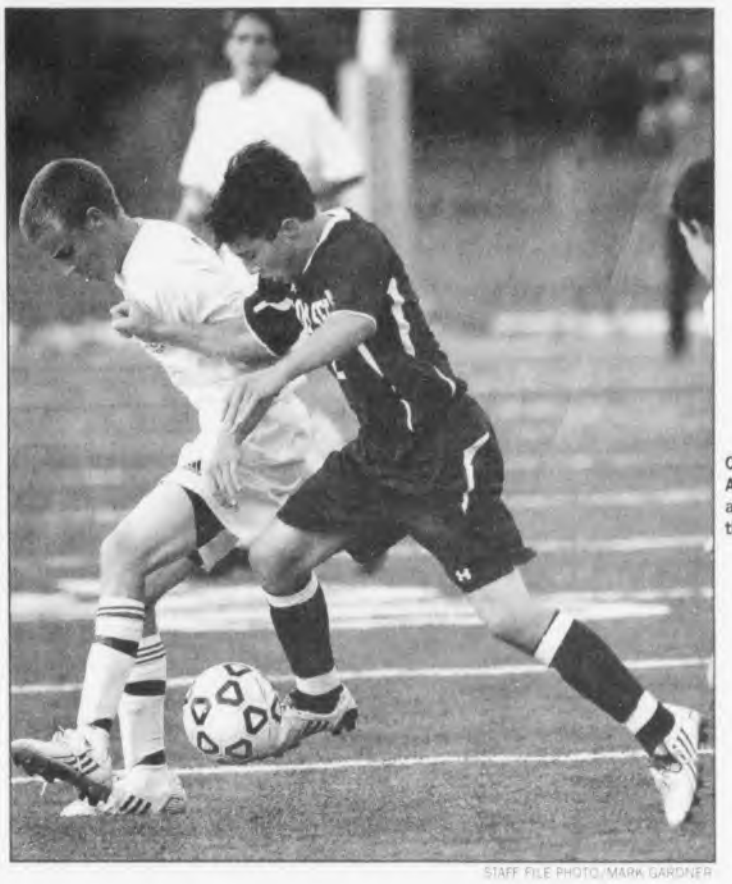
Willis said he isn't sure what to expect from the rest of the league this season.

"I don't know what the challenges are this year," he said. "Last year the league had a lot of seniors. The whole All-Star team was seniors except one. I know there were a lot of good JV games. I know there are good teams. Norwell should be good. Hull is learning to score and East Bridgewater and Mashpee will be tough."



With that in mind, Willis said the key to success will be to focus on his own team.

"We have to focus on ourselves and do what we want to do," he said. "If we do that we'll do well."

Willis was happy to get off to a winning start.

"It's good to get that first one under your belt," he said.

Cohasset plays Norwell and Hull next week.

JUDETH VAN HAMM

Sunday (Aug. 29) we celebrated a dedication of the Conservation Restriction that has been placed on the Chatham Street entrance. Scott Plympton, president of the Hull Land Conservation Trust, which owns the entrance, joined Steve Sloan, Boston regional director of The Trustees of Reservations, and Max Horn, Hull Conservation Commission member, in a ribbon cutting ceremony. TTOR and the Hull Conservation Commission jointly hold the CR. The purchase of the Conservation Restriction was made possible by a Conservation Partnership Grant from the MA Executive Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs. The effort to match the grant is still underway thanks to use of the TTOR revolving fund and a private loan. All told, to date approximately $237,000 has been raised to pay for the entrance, about half in grants and half in donations, with $43,000 to go.

The Woods has had trails, a small pond, a bridge over the pond, steps up a rock cliff and viewing benches since a Bicentennial grant project in 1976. However, it was missing a public entrance and parking until the newly formed Hull Land Conservation Trust purchased the Chatham Street property in 2007. Since then, after meeting with the Woods' neighbors, Tucker Oddleifson, a Cohasset Eagle Scout candidate, and his fellow Scout members defined the parking spots with a grassy berm and logs cut from a dead tree, built a kiosk to hold a trail map, and opened an estuary overview along a trail.

The CEF is thrilled to have their support.

Cohasset's Jack Tolman, who is Jay Tolman's son, changes the number on the board to a higher number as the donations keep coming in for the Telethon.

Meaghan Reilly of Hanover, Gabrielle Weissman of Cohasset, Bryan White of Whitman and William Beachus of Hingham do their part collecting donations for the Tolman MDA Telethon on South Street in Hingham Square on Sunday.

'Another amazing, heart-warming experience'

Tolman MDA telethon party a success!

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

No one breathed a bigger sigh of relief when Hurricane Earl bypassed the South Shore than Jay Tolman, organizer of the annual Tolman Muscular Dystrophy Association telethon party.

Last weekend marked the 34th time that Tolman, a Cohasset resident, and his family and friends hosted this event in Hingham in conjunction with the Labor Day Jerry Lewis MDA Telethon.

The weather couldn't have been nicer, and those who participated enjoyed fun and good food — all for a good cause.

However, while the weather usually cooperates, Tolman remembers that a hurricane occurred around the time of the event one year and a tropical storm another during the telethon party's long history.

Still, the event always went on as planned, he recalled. "This time of year we do get concerned when we hear about tropical depressions down South," he said.

The 24-hour party ran from 7 p.m. Sunday until 7 p.m. on Labor Day at a new venue, Congregation Sha'aray Shalom on Main Street, because Hingham Community Center is undergoing renovations. The hall was decked out with colorful balloons and other decorations.

"The temple has been really great to us, helping out and being involved, and were excited to be able to host the telethon party here," Tolman said.

Over the 24-hour period, the lively event featured DJ and live music, Irish step dancers, games, dancing, delicious hors d'oeuvres and desserts, prizes, raffles, a giant cookout, clowns, a hula hoop contest, face painting, balloon animals, new special attractions for children, and a visit from Channel 5. A big-screen TV was tuned in to the Jerry Lewis telethon during the entire event.

"I've been coming to this event since I was a baby and it feels good collecting money for MDA. It's a great cause."
— Jack Tolman, 12

While no telephone calls are made during the party, donations were collected in front of the Community Center as usual, at a special drive-up donation center at the temple, and by tossing a contribution into the fish bowl during the party.

By 9:30 p.m. Sunday, only 2-1/2 hours into the event, more than $1,100 had already been collected, with still more to be counted that evening. In all, well over $17,000 was raised this year, exceeding last year's $17,200 in donations, with more still coming in after the event wrapped up on labor day. Contributions throughout the event's 34-year history have exceeded $400,000.

"It was another amazing, heart-warming experience over Labor Day Weekend," Tolman said. "From the gracious support at our new venue, Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, to help from so many local businesses such as Dunkin' Donuts, which gave gift baskets and set up a tent serving free iced tea and 'Munchkins,' as well as a generous cash donation from area manager Carol Porter. This is just one example of the caring support of local businesses."

Tolman is also grateful for the many young people who help with the event. The kids collecting donations did another fantastic job raising thousands of dollars over the 24-hour period," he said. "The Telethon Team of volunteers worked so hard giving up another Labor Day weekend to help support MDA. They are all so fantastic!"

The human spirit was alive and well at the event again this year. " I can't thank everyone enough for the out-pouring of help that will mean so much to the kids and families who battle muscular dystrophy," Tolman said. "A large number of volunteers show up year after year to help make the event a success, along with newcomers who also offer a welcome helping hand."

Jay and Jodi Tolman's son, Jack, 12, was bursting with enthusiasm. "I've been coming to this event since I was a baby and it feels good collecting money for MDA," he said. "It's a great cause."

Jack's favorite part is seeing friends from other towns who participate in the event every year and playing games, including limbo and wonder ball.

He plans to continue participating in the event during the years to come. "When my Dad gets really old, I'll take over," he said sincerely.

Liz Hennessey, 17, of Hingham has participated in the telethon party since she was six. "I feel so blessed to be able to do all the things that I can do and feel it's our responsibility to help people who are trapped in this horrible disease," she said. "People wouldn't keep coming back year after year if they didn't feel strongly about the cause and want to help out."

On top of that, Liz said that taking part in the Tolman event is like having another family.

"It's fun to see the people who come back every year and to meet new people, too," she said.

Donations are still welcome and may be made by visiting www.tolmantelethon.com.

Fitness Together Cohasset launches Type 2 diabetes study

Some of the newest clients exercising at area Fitness Together in Cohasset are doing more than stepping on a scale to chart their progress. They're giving blood. They are part of a Type 2 diabetes observational study being conducted by area Fitness Together studios to examine the impact of a 26-week individualized fitness-training program. Regular blood glucose tests with a small prick on the finger are as important as the exercise in measuring safe success.

Fitness Together studios are welcoming a minimum of 50 subjects to the program and will share the results with the American Diabetes Association of Eastern New England where the Fitness Together franchise group is also the official health and fitness sponsor for the ADA's Step Out: Walk to Fight Diabetes.

In one of the largest research projects of its kind, 42 Fitness Together studios have assembled across Massachusetts and Rhode Island to enlist men and women over the age of 30 who have been clinically diagnosed with Type 2 diabetes and are more than 30 pounds overweight. They will be monitored by a certified diabetes educator as well as Fitness Together studio personal trainers.

"Through this observational study, we will better understand the impact of diet and exercise on diabetes control, high blood pressure, one's sense of well-being and the costs of medications," said Joan Hill, registered dietitian, certified diabetes educator and licensed dietitian/nutritionist.

From September through February, Fitness Together studios will chart weight loss and conduct A1c tests, which measure one's average blood glucose level and helps track if people are at risk of complications due to uncontrolled diabetes. The studios will also track blood pressure, medication use and sense of wellbeing before and after test results and look for indicators of significant health improvements from the clients. People with Type 2 diabetes who wish to be part of the study can locate participating studios at www. FT Gets Results.com.

Each client who signs up for the Type 2 diabetes study must be cleared by a doctor to exercise and must agree to six-months of observation for the following: Resistance training three times a week with a personal trainer in the studio; cardiovascular exercise a minimum of three times a week in the studio; an initial fitness evaluation followed by fitness re-tests every six weeks; documenting of all meals in a nutrition journal; and frequent blood glucose checks at Fitness Together.

In the help to fight diabetes, the Fitness Together studio franchise owners have also pledged to raise a minimum of $40,000 for the ADA Eastern New England Chapter. To join the cause, a donation can be made at participating studios.

Both the Cohasset and Norwell Fitness Together locations are looking for a few people with Type 2 diabetes to participate in the 26-week exercise program now through December. Upon acceptance, Fitness Together will subsidize up to 50 percent – participants save up to $2,500 – on the complete six-month program. Participation is part of the Fitness Together diabetes study.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
SEPT. 13, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Careful, Lamb. Taking on too many tasks at one time can cause you to create more snarls each time you try to work your way through the tangled mass. Best to handle one job at a time.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Making bold moves is what Bovines do. But the best moves are made with lots of data to provide backup just in case you charge into an unexpected complication. A new relationship shows promise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Sharing credit for a job well done is easy for you to do, but not necessarily for your partner. But fair is fair. Don't let yourself be denied the right to have your contributions recognized.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Communication is important to help bridge a gap that can lead to problems at home and/or at the workplace. Find a way to get your points across before the breach becomes a chasm.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Relationships, whether business or personal, need to be watched carefully for signs of trouble. Any negative indications should be dealt with before they become too burdensome.

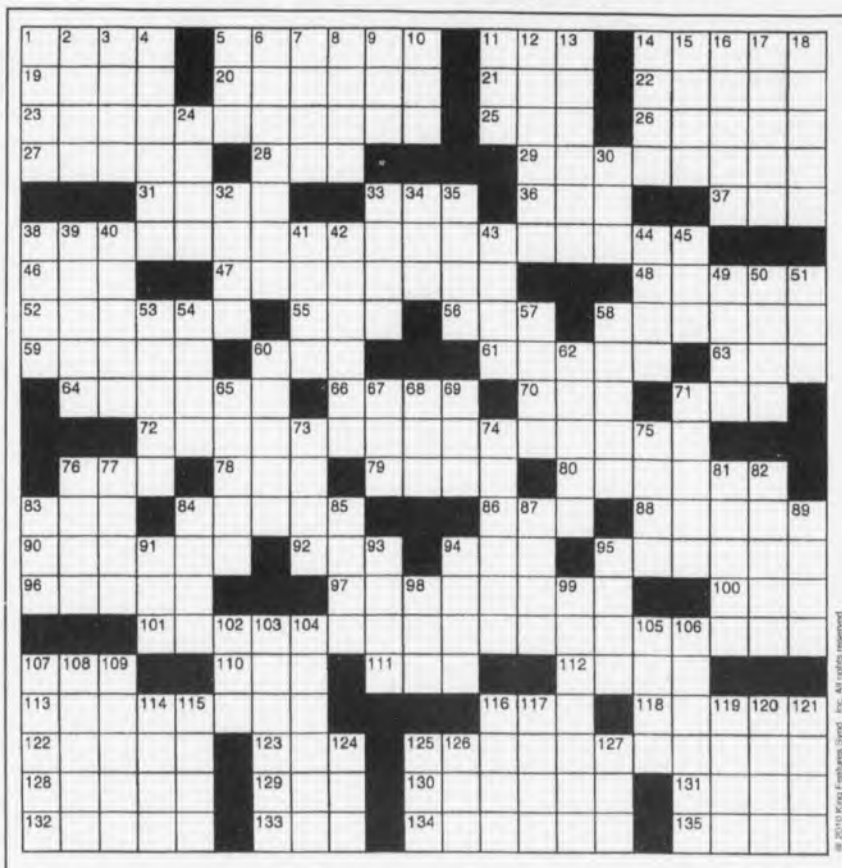
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Congratulations. A more positive aspect highlights much of the Virgo's week. You should find others more receptive to your suggestions, and also more likely to act on them.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) All work and little play could wear the Libra's usually positive attitude down. Take some much-needed time off. Perhaps a short jaunt with someone special is the way to go.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to expand your view from the known to the unfamiliar. Confronting new situations could be challenging, but ultimately also could be extremely satisfying.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Giving advice to those who just want validation for what they're doing can be unsettling. So back off and save your counsel for those who really appreciate it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Cultivating a more positive attitude not only makes you feel better about yourself, but also has an upbeat effect on those around you, especially that certain someone.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Keeping the lines of communication open and accessible is the key to establishing the right foundation on which to build an important and meaningful relationship. Stay with it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Before agreeing to act on a request, consider using your perceptive Piscean talents to see what might lie hidden beneath its surface and could possibly cause problems later on.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Donald W. White Sr.

Donald W. White Sr.

Son of the late Esther M. (Kelley) and Alan R. White of Milton, he was born in Boston and lived in Milton before moving to Scituate in 1954.

Mr. White attended and graduated from Milton Academy, Babson College and Cornell University.

He served as a first Lieutenant in the USAF during the Korean War.

In 1954, Mr. White joined White Brothers Milk Company of Quincy, a family owned business since 1913, that was co-founded by his late father, along with his two brothers, Robert G. White and the late Allan R. White Jr., both of Milton. The company was the first to pasteurize milk in New England and regularly collected milk from over 800 dairy farms in Vermont and New Hampshire. Donald was known for decades as the only living New England trademark as the eleven month old baby pictured on milk bottles and horse drawn (later motor driven) carriages and delivery trucks.

Mr. White later joined his brothers in buying and expanding Hendrie's Ice Cream, Inc., Milton, in 1961 and New England Frozen Foods of Southboro in 1966, together building them to be the largest purveyor of frozen foods in New England while acquiring seven other competing ice cream companies in the process.

During that tenure, he developed the Hendrie's brand name frozen single stick novelty items such as healthy Juice Bar, York Peppermint Patty bar, Nestles Crunch Bar, the Welch Bar and other national branded products propelling Hendrie's into the most innovative frozen novelty creator and seller in New England. The company was one of the first to create and introduce all natural ice cream products.

Mr. White's proudest achievement was working with his brothers in these successes for over 50 years.

Mr. White is a former Dana Farber Institute trustee and representative of the "Jimmy Fund". He was co-founder and Chairman of the Boston Dairy and Ice Cream multi day festival known as the "Scooper Bowl," which raises funds annually for the Jimmy Fund. He was a corporate member and trustee of Babson College, director of Cornell University's PEM program advisory council and was visiting guest faculty there as well as at Purdue University's agricultural marketing program.

Mr. White was an honorary member of the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club, Scituate Country Club, Scituate Rod and Gun Club, New England Corinthians, Scituate K of C, the American Legion and member of the Scituate Etrusco Association, Ducks Unlimited and of Saint Mary's parish in Scituate.

Mr. White had a life long fascination of 1775-1815 naval maritime history and also enjoyed adventurous world travel, western bronze sculpture collecting, classical music, photography, sailing, hunting, skiing and tennis.

Mr. White leaves his beloved wife, Pauline (Gladu); his brother, Robert G White of Milton and his sister, Audree Parr of Erie, Pa. Mr. White is the former husband of the late Elaine Knapp White of Scituate. Survived by six devoted children, his daughter Cynthia White of Scituate and five sons, Donald W. White Jr. of Marshfield Hills and his wife Judy Olsen White, Bradford D. White and his wife Julie-Anne (Miner) White, also of Marshfield Hills, Dominic A. White and his wife Jondi (Poe) of Portland, Maine, Donald A. White and his wife Pamela (Carron) of Summit N.J., Adam White of Weymouth and four loving grandchildren, Olivia Olsen White and Trevor Donald White, both of Marshfield Hills, Holden White and Cooper White, both of Summit, N.J. and also survived by cousins and numerous nieces and nephews.

The White family wishes to thank all the incredible staff, doctors and nurses at the South Shore Hospital, who took such wonderful care of our father over the past few weeks.

Visiting hours Thursday, Sept. 9, 2010, from 4-8 p.m., at the Richardson Gaffey Funeral Home in Scituate and funeral Mass of Christian Burial at St. Mary's of the Nativity Church in Scituate Harbor, Friday, Sept. 10, 2010, at 11 a.m. Interment immediately following at the New St. Mary's Cemetery, also in Scituate.

News flash!

Gary LaPierre earns spot in Broadcasters Hall of Fame

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

It was 46 years ago now, but Gary LaPierre still remembers his first assignment as a staff reporter for WBZ Radio.

"WBZ was a rock and roll station in those days, so I covered the Beatles on the Boston stop of their first U.S. concert tour. I met their plane at Hanscom Field in Bedford where security was tighter and rode with them to the Madison Hotel near the old Boston Garden. I knew it was a good first story, but I can't say I really knew how good it was at the time. I'm not sure anyone knew then just how big the Beatles would become. It is interesting to look back and know that Paul McCartney and I were both just 22 years old then."

For LaPierre, who will be inducted into the Massachusetts Broadcasters Hall of Fame (MBHOF) at Massasoit Community College in Brockton during a Sept. 16 luncheon ceremony at the Marriott Quincy Hotel, the Beatles' Boston invasion was just the first memorable news story he would cover in his first months on Boston radio. The second happened while LaPierre was on assignment.

"I was in Springfield to cover the 1964 State Democratic Convention. Morton Dean, my boss at the time, and I were speaking with a state trooper when we heard something come over his radio. Morton asked the trooper what was going on and we were told a small plane had just crashed into an apple orchard in Southampton, not too far from where we were. When Morton and I pulled up in our cars, we were the first reporters on the scene. The pilot and another passenger were killed in the crash, but we watched as first Senator Birch Bayh and his wife and then the more seriously injured Ted Kennedy were pulled from the plane. Senator Kennedy was rushed to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton and we stayed on the story. I was the first reporter to speak with Joan Kennedy at the hospital. It was history of immense proportion and I was right there, on the job."

Gary LaPierre will be inducted into the Broadcasters Hall of Fame during a luncheon ceremony Sept. 16, at Marriott Quincy Hotel.

LaPierre remained on the job for WBZ for the next four decades. In 1966, the Shelburne Falls native was named newsman for Carl DeSuze's morning program, continuing in that role when Dave Maynard took over as host. LaPierre eventually became morning news anchor and host of the entire morning broadcast when WBZ ended music programming following the first Gulf War in 1991.

"Whatever the news was, WBZ was the place people turned for it. The first Gulf War was our first big story. We had been number one in rock, then talk, and then in news."

While working mornings, he also served as WBZ's chief investigative reporter for 15 years, and anchor of the noon news on WBZ-TV from 1996 to 1999. Nine years ago this week, the veteran journalist was in his familiar Soldiers Field Road broadcast booth when the first plane hit the World Trade Center.

"On the morning of Sept. 11, 2001, my job was all about choosing the right vocabulary to explain the bloodiest attack ever on the U.S. It was an enormous challenge, and responsibility, to be reporting that story. To this day, people come up to me and tell me that they listened to every word we reported that day. By far, the events of that day were the biggest I covered in my career," says LaPierre, who retired as co-host of the WBZ Morning News on Dec. 29, 2006.

For LaPierre, who worked part-time in the WBZ mailroom while studying broadcasting at the former Graham Junior College in Boston and went on to become the first inductee into the WBZ Hall of Fame, his latest honor is one he welcomes.

"My old partner, Gil Santos, was inducted last year so I am a bit familiar with this group," says LaPierre, who plans to attend next week's MBHOF luncheon with his wife of 49 years, Peg. "When I heard about my own induction, I thought, 'Yeah, I think this is a good thing. I worked 43 years in this market and I deserve to be there.'"

The 2010 Massachusetts Broadcasters Hall of Fame induction ceremony and luncheon – honoring Gary LaPierre, longtime Boston news anchor Tom Ellis, former co-host of WBZ-TV's "Evening Magazine" and current National Public Radio personality Robin Young, WCVB-TV's investigative reporter Janet Wu, former disc jockey Dale Dorman, news executive James Coppersmith, radio personality Bruce Arnold, and many others – will take place on Sept. 16 at the Marriott Quincy, 1200 Crown Colony Drive. Election Day

Democrats, GOP gear up for Nov. 2

Kasperowicz reflects on the race

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Just over a quarter of Cohasset's 5,461 registered voters came out to the polls on Tuesday. Of the 1,394 voters, 815 took Republican ballots and 579 opted for Democratic ballots.

The most contested race on the ballot was for the 10th Congressional District seat. U.S. Representative William Delahunt announced in March he would not seek another term as congressman.

There was a four-way race on the Republican side. Cohasset resident Raymond Kasperowicz did not win his hometown. Joe Malone, a resident of neighboring Scituate, took Cohasset by receiving 341 votes, 101 more than Kasperowicz. Jeff Perry, who ultimately won the Republican nomination for the Tenth Congressional District, received 193 votes in Cohasset. Robert Hayden of Hanover received 35 votes.

On the Democratic ballot, William R. Keating of Quincy and Robert A. O'Leary of Barnstable went head to head. Keating won the primary in the 10th Congressional District and in Cohasset (357 votes to O'Leary's 201 votes). For full results, see inside this week's Cohasset Mariner.

The winner of the Democratic and Republican primaries will face off in the Nov. 2 general election, to determine who will represent the district on Capitol Hill.

Both Republican and Democratic Town Committee chairs were surprised at the turnout for the primary election.

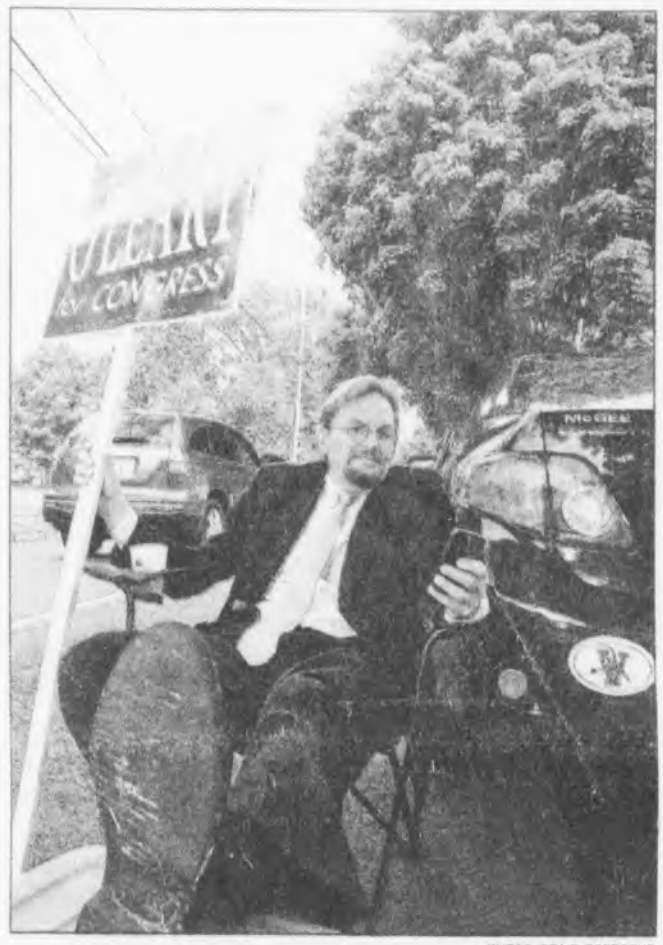
"I'm sure there was interest, but people often don't understand the importance of primaries," Kevin O'Donnell, Republican Town Committee chair, said.

"The primaries are a very important – it is where the candidates that go to the final polls are selected. It's a tremendous screening process and a tremendous opportunity for voters to get familiar with the candidates and the issues," Democratic Town Committee chair Kevin McCarthy said.

However, Cohasset has a higher turnout than the state average, which was in the teens.

The next seven weeks leading up to November's general election are expected to be an exciting political time for the area.

"This is going to be one of the hardest fought and hotly contested races we've seen in some time," McCarthy said.



Republican Perry has a stronghold on the Cape while Democrat Keating has strong support at the other end of the district, in Weymouth and Quincy.

"The central area – the South Shore – is going to be ground zero. There's going to be a lot of political excitement right here," McCarthy said.

With the primary behind the state other races, where candidates were unopposed on their respective ballots, will heat up in the coming weeks.

Republican candidate for governor Charles Baker was the top vote getter on the Republican ballot in Cohasset with 689 votes. Baker will face incumbent candidate Gov. Deval Patrick in November; Patrick received 439 votes in Cohasset.

Callahan, a former Cohasset selectman, was one of a handful of campaign workers for various candidates along Highland Avenue on Tuesday. O'Leary lost to William Keating who will face off Nov. 2 against Republican, Jeff Perry. Callahan said he injured his foot when he stepped on a nail while working on a home project.

The colors of fall

Historical Society celebrates the season in fashion

By Nancy White

On the runways of Paris, Milan and New York fall fashion always makes a big splash.

This fall, Cohasset has its own kind of fall fashion show – of a historical persuasion. This month the Historical Society has put together an exhibit of a half dozen looks that pay homage to the colors of fall.

"We pulled from our collection objects that had fall colors," said Historical Society director Lynne DeGiacomo. Originally they sought out the definitive foliage colors — yellow, red and orange, but found the collection did not have much to choose from in those colors. But, browns, deeps reds, tans and peaches were abundant.

Martha Fisher, who has been working at the historical society on a grant, gathered much of the exhibit's pieces and put together the outfits. Cohasset High school volunteer Whitney Jaffe also helped wit h the exhibit.

"I wanted to include hats and like magic all these fabulous hats were found," Fisher said. One of her favorites is a deep burgundy velvet hat, best described as an oversized beret. The hat belonged to Mrs. Clarence (Jessie)

Progress report

CPD looking for accreditation

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's been more than six months since Police Chief Mark DeLuca stepped into his role as head of the department. DeLuca was asked by the Board of Selectmen to give a six-month update and review. He had largely positive news and progress on several initiatives to detail.

Much of the department came out to hear the presentation and several officers spoke to their role on department projects.

DeLuca said one of his first initiatives in the community was to distribute a survey to Cohasset residents. From the responses, he was able to discern some of the most important areas for the department to focus.

Residents asked for follow up by detectives, better information distribution in real time, traffic enforcement, better communication between the department and residents and youth programs.

"I think we've successfully addressed all these issues," DeLuca said.

Young teens out late, one intoxicated

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police called in the K-9 unit from Hull to help find a 14-year-old Cohasset girl who was intoxicated and took off from her house following an argument with her parents at about 3:44 a.m. on Sunday (Sept. 12).

Earlier at 3:13 a.m., an officer on patrol found two girls and two boys, three of whom are 14 and one is 13, at the Barnes Field complex off North Main Street. One of the girls was drunk, police said. Everyone was returned to their parents. There was no alcohol at the scene.

A short time later at 3:44 a.m., the mother of the girl, who was intoxicated, called police about having her daughter removed from the house because she was out of control. Once at the scene, police reported that the girl had fled on foot on North Main Street toward Hingham. Police conducted a search and out of concern for her safety, requested the K-9 unit from Hull that took an hour to arrive. The girl was located at 5:20 a.m. and was returned home.

Police said the teens had been texting each other earlier that night to rendezvous at the Little League fields.

CHS traffic

Last Tuesday (Sept. 7) at 7:12 a.m., police received the first complaint about high school traffic. The caller was concerned about vehicles speeding up Norfolk Road toward CMHS. Police said they also expect complaints from Forest Avenue, and Route 3A and Pond Street as high-schoolers travel back and forth to school. Police advise motorists of all ages to slow down; they also warn seasoned drivers that there are young drivers out there.

Tools taken

At 12:34 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 7) a construction worker, a 41-year-old Malden man, went to the police station to report that $1600 in tools had apparently been stolen from the unsecured basement of a house under construction on Heritage Lane. The missing tools include saws, nail gun, and a compressor. The reporting party is working framing a house in the development. Police detectives are investigating.

Stumbling

A 58-year-old Cohasset man who was operating a 1998 Acura stumbled out of Curtis Liquors at 3:35 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 7) after being refused service. The liquor store notified police who went to the man's house and spoke with him. He was impaired but was not arrested because police did not see him operating the car.

Voicemails

A female manager at a local business reported to police last Tuesday (Sept. 7) at 4:12 p.m. that she had received several threatening voicemails on her work phone and had two of the messages saved. Police said the recorded messages were sexual in nature. Detectives are checking with Verizon to see if they can backtrack where the calls came from.

Strange call

A South Main Street woman notified police at 5:35 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 7) reporting that she received a call on her cell phone at home and the caller's number on the display was her home phone number. The caller said that he was in her house and used her name. Police checked the property and found nothing. They believe the call was a "spoof" where callers can enter a number that will appear in the display of the person receiving the call.

Fender-bender

Two students – one with a 2002 Honda Odyssey and the other with a 2005 Ford Explorer – were involved in a very minor accident in the high school parking lot at 7:21 a.m. on Wednesday (Sept. 8), police said. There was very minor damage. The incident occurred on the second day of school.

Advice

Police provided advice to Cohasset parents who came to the station last week to inquire about how to handle an abusive situation that their college daughter is involved in. Police advised them to contact the college as their daughter is out-of-state and the laws vary from state to state.

Warrant arrest

A 19-year-old Cohasset man was arrested on a warrant last Thursday (Sept. 9) for domestic assault and battery. During the initial investigation several weeks ago, he took off and police did not catch up with him so police sought the warrant.

Summons

A 29-year-old Weymouth man is being summonsed to court for speeding and unlicensed operation following a traffic stop on Friday (Sept. 10) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A). Police said the man was driving a 2001 VW Golf that was traveling 51 in a 35 mph zone. Police said the man, who is Brazilian, did not have a license or a passport. His car was towed.

Uninvited guests

Atlantica reported a group of wedding crashers that were refusing to leave on Friday (Sept. 10) at 10:30 p.m. However, the group decided to leave before police arrived, police said.

Parking problem

Police used the cruiser's public address system to ask yard-sale attendees to move their cars that had been parked on both sides of North Main Street on Saturday (Sept. 11) at 11:20 a.m. A caller notified police about the parking that was causing a hazard.

Wrecker

A 41-year-old Scituate woman and her two children were given a ride to Scituate following a traffic stop on Saturday (Sept. 11) at Sohier Street and Fairoaks Lane. Police said the 1998 Dodge Caravan the woman was driving had an expired registration sticker on the plate. Police cannot permit an unregistered car on the road and the minivan was towed.

Courtesy booking

A 45-year-old Cohasset man who was wanted in Scituate for breaking and entering in the nighttime as a result of a domestic incident was booked by Cohasset on Saturday (Sept. 11).

Groceries

An elderly man shopping at Shaw's and who is suffering from dementia, was given a ride to his Scituate home on Saturday (Sept. 11). The man had wandered away from his shopping cart and thought that someone had taken his groceries, police said.

MV crash

At 9:10 p.m. on Sunday (Sept. 12), police responded to a single-car accident in the Shaw's parking lot. Police said a 26-year-old Humarock woman, operating a 2000 Isuzu Trooper hit a light pole in the parking lot. Her vehicle was towed. There were no injuries.

Police chief gives progress report

Only 41 of Massachusetts' 351 cities and towns are accredited. DeLuca said accreditation increases professionalism, the effectiveness and the efficiency of the department.

One of initiatives close to DeLuca's heart, and one he talked about extensively during the interview process, is department accreditation.

Accreditation is a self-initiated outside assessment of a police department to ensure compliance with operational, administration and procedural standards set by law enforcement professionals.

"It addresses the entire gamut of police operation," DeLuca said. Only 41 of Massachusetts' 351 cities and towns are accredited. DeLuca said accreditation increases the professionalism, the effectiveness and the efficiency of the department.

"It makes you more accountable. The ultimate goal is better service for residents," DeLuca said. He hopes to be ready for certification, the first step toward accreditation, by November.

DeLuca did broach some challenges within the department.

The department is still struggling to keep its younger officers in town. Officer Regen Steverman is in the process of making a lateral change from Cohasset PD to Weymouth PD.

"The concern is we are a 17-man force versus 100-man force. As a smaller department our resources are limited and advancement is limited. It is an issue," DeLuca said, adding this is the sixth officer in five years to make a similar lateral move. To address the problem, and hopefully ward off more young talent from leaving the Cohasset department, DeLuca is putting together a five-year plan.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley asked the Chief to speak to the challenges of improving and sustaining morale in the department.

"Anytime's there's change there is going to be some naysayers. But, I'm not a slow roller and a large percent of the force is on board, jumping in and getting busy," DeLuca said, adding he continued to work with those not embracing change.

DeLuca noted the aging vehicle fleet. More than half the cars in the fleet (marked and unmarked) have over 100,000 miles on them.

"It's an older fleet, but it's serving us at the time," DeLuca said. In fiscal 2010, $52,000 was spent on vehicle maintenance.

Karen Quigley said she appreciated all the department's efforts and hard work.

"No one likes change, but in Cohasset we really don't like it. I know you couldn't have done what you've done along and it reflects well on the whole department," Quigley told DeLuca.

Police stats

The chief presented year over year (January 2009 through July 2009 and January 2010 through 2010) statistics for the calls for service, car stops, arrests, and accidents. Calls for service were up 12 percent and arrests were 25 percent (127 in 2009 versus 170 in 2010).

Car stops (not necessarily citations) were up 42 percent over the same period the year before. Car accidents were down 45 percent.

"That's because our officers are out there slowing down cars," DeLuca said.

K-9 proposal coming

Chief Mark DeLuca said the department is currently working up a proposal to bring a trained police K-9 to Cohasset. The town is one of the few in the area without a dog on their force. In recent months, the police department has had to call on mutual aid in instances where a K-9 was needed during a search for a suspect.

Recently, DeLuca was able to acquire a police cruiser from the City of Quincy at no cost to the town. The cruiser is still in good condition and has 88,000 miles on it. The department has spent $5200 to get the car in working condition. A digital radio (valued at $6000) and a roof light bar (valued at $2000) came with the vehicle. Once the cruiser is repainted, DeLuca said he expects the cruiser to be worked into the vehicle rotation.

If a K-9 is approved, this car could become the cruiser for the K-9 team.

The police department will come before the Selectmen in the coming months to pitch the need for a K-9.

Parent highly critical of Dr. Walsh

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the second year in a row President Barack Obama's back to school speech has caused controversy in Cohasset Schools.

Last year, two School Committee meetings were packed with parents angry about the handling of the speech within the school district. The speech was not shown to the student population during its live broadcast.

This year, Obama's back to school speech was shown in many middle high school classrooms and to a standing-room only crowd in the auditorium.

Yet, there was confusion among the parent community earlier this week after the middle high school principal issued a school-wide phone message requesting a letter from parents seeking permission to have students watch, or not watch, the speech.

At the School Committee meeting Wednesday night there was not a large crowd — just three parents were in the audience — but anger and drama ran high.

One parent, Jodi Tolman of Forest Circle, read a statement, a statement she said was drafted with the help of many parents, in response to the Superintendent Denise Walsh's handling of the speech.

"It's hard to believe and extremely disturbing to see that we are experiencing déjà vu, all over again," Tolman said.

The five-minute statement accused Walsh of a "total abdication of responsibility" by not ensuring the speech was shown in the schools in a seamless fashion.

"In light of last year's controversy over the speech and the way it was handled, it really seems as if Dr. Walsh is thumbing her nose at the community and School Committee," Tolman said. She felt the handling of the speech this year constituted "a crisis of leadership."

"Dr. Walsh is being paid an enormous salary to manage the issues that affect our district. To fail to step up and figure out a way to make this work this time, when it was so poorly handled last time, was her responsibility alone," Tolman said.

The conclusion of her statement called for a termination of Walsh's contract early (The School Committee is not renewing Walsh's contract; her last day is set for April 4, 2011).

"We would do a greater service to our children – and use our precious and too few educational dollars so much more effectively – by paying Dr. Walsh to stay home for the next seven months," Tolman said.

The immediate response to Tolman's statement came from School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz.

"President Obama is an accomplished man and a gentleman. He – and I – would be offended by what you just read," Slanetz said.

In the greater scheme of things and with an eye to the future Slanetz said such rhetoric could be a detriment to the Cohasset Schools' search for a new superintendent.

"We are trying to attract the next best superintendent. No one is going to want to work in this community if this is the way they are treated. It's hard to believe someone would say such hateful, damaging and unconstructive things about someone who works in our community," Slanetz said.

Walsh, who stood after she was asked to speak louder, had a passionate response to Tolman's words.

"There is a cornerstone in education that we all believe in and that's respect. I heard none of that in the statement you just made," Walsh said.

"No matter what you feel personally about me, I am the current superintendent of schools and I am proud of that title. I am proud of the administration team. I am proud of our faculty and I am proud of our students. I will not have that undermined by personal feelings someone may have about me."

She asked that discussion be civil and respectful.

"I am heartbroken to have such a poor example set for our community and our children," Walsh said.

Parent Virginia Brophy of Beechwood Street said she did not think there was a lack of respect in the statement and it was more a matter of disagreement.

"The School Committee went over this issue ad nauseum last year and it should have been at the forefront of everyone's agenda," Brophy said.

School Committee member Linda Snowdale was prepared to take part of the blame for the perceived missteps associated with the Obama back to school speech.

"We are the ultimate boss, so if this has happened again I feel partially responsible," Snowdale said.

Public meeting vs. public forum

School Committee member Paul Schubert had concerns about members of the community being allowed to speak from a letter without knowing what is going to be said.

"This is a public meeting, not a public forum," Schubert said. He requested written statements be submitted to the committee before being read in an open meeting – or save written statements for a Mariner letter to the editor.

Adrienne MacCarthy, former school committee chair, spoke from the audience shortly before adjournment, said the committee needed to review the Open Meeting Law.

"You're required to hold the meeting in open session so the public can see the business of the town, but that does not mean (the committee) has to entertain every comment," MacCarthy said. "If someone is going to read something you better know what the heck is going to be said."

MacCarthy said Tolman's statement addressed the character and reputation of an employee and set a bad precedent. Under the Open Meeting law, character and reputation discussions are exemptions to the Open Meeting Law and can be discussed in an executive session.

"If you allow it for one you open the door for many," MacCarthy said, adding what is to stop a disgruntled parent from speaking out about a teacher.

Earlier in the meeting, School committee chair Helene Lieb said she felt it was important to give people in the community the chance to express their views.

"We do live in a democracy and we may or may not agree with what is said, but it does make us stop and think about things," Lieb said.

Lieb suggested developing a better way of relaying feedback from the community to Walsh while respecting the chain of command and respective roles of the superintendent and the school committee.

Water and sewer audits underway

Report should be ready before the STM on Nov. 15

NWHITE@CNC.COM

When voters approved a significant water rate hike — the third in four years — they did not do so without a fight. Voters, along with many town officials, asked for an in-depth look at the management, finances and operations of the water department for the past several years. They wanted to know how the water department — and by extension, the town — got to the point where a town department was hundreds of thousands of dollars in debt for the fiscal year.

Three months later a professional auditor is on board and stands ready to delve into the water and, at the Advisory Committee's request, the sewer department.

"We felt very strongly that we were unhappy with what we were seeing in terms of financial reporting in the water and sewer departments," said Sam Wakeman, chair of the Advisory Committee. "We know we need to make some improvements in the management of both departments and we thought we needed outside assistance to do that."

The Advisory Committee approved the transfer of funding — $65,000 to complete both audits — from their reserve funds at their meeting last Thursday night (Sept. 9).

Melanson Heath & Company based in Andover has been selected for the project. They began this week looking at the water and sewer financials and operation. A press release from the Advisory Committee stated the group has "extensive experience in this type of audit and operational analysis."

The audits for both the water and sewer departments, the town's two enterprise funds, include a review of past operations, verification of financial statements and assistance in developing recommendations for improvement in operation and future budget projections.

The components of the water audit include: a review and certification of the financial reports from fiscal 2008 to fiscal 2010, an analysis of the capital spending program from 2004 to the present, an evaluation of the departmental processes and billing system, and develop a comparison for the cost/mile of pipe versus other local and regional systems.

The sewer audit calls for a similar review of the financial statements fiscal 2008 to fiscal 2010, capital spending since 2006, and cost compared to other districts.

The audit firm has 60 days to complete the audit.

A water and sewer audit group will hold weekly sessions with the auditors to review progress and deal with any difficulties that arise.

Wakeman said he expects to have a report ready before Special Town Meeting (Nov. 15).

Water/sewer audit group selected

Melanson Heath & Co. from Andover has been selected to perform an audit of both the Sewer and Water departments. They bring extensive experience in this type of audit and operational analysis having performed similar functions with other towns and municipalities.

The Advisory Committee approved the transfer of funding for the engagement of these outside auditors to review past operations of the water and sewer departments, verify financial statements, and most importantly assist in developing recommendations to improve the operation, and future budget projections in both areas.

The audit process has started with a gathering of information. The Water/Sewer Audit Group – Pat Gallagher, Ed Lappen, and Sam Wakeman – will meet weekly starting the Sept. 24 and will receive weekly updates to review the progress and deal with any difficulties encountered. It is expected the audits will be completed and a report available prior to the November Special Town Meeting.

Tweaking the Cohasset Triathlon

Fifth annual event will be June 26, 2011

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The fourth annual running of the Cohasset Triathlon this past June had a small, but significant, change: the starting time was moved back an hour.

The result was an increased interference with church services and residents trying to go about their business on a Sunday morning.

Burnett was at the meeting to offer a review of the 2010 race and request permission to run the race again on June 26, 2011. The date was approved, but it was not a unanimous vote and Burnett will be back to discuss race time specifics and other details.

Overall, Burnett said the race ran "very smoothly" due in large part to the calm seas and clear skies. He said there would be tweaks made to certain details throughout the race to make it safer and more efficient. Burnett named a quick clean up in the village following the bike portion as one of this year's improvements due to feedback from local business.

"The biggest challenge is juggling everyone's needs," Burnett said. "My goal is to keep as many people in town happy and it's difficult."

The Selectmen agreed with Burnett's sentiment and pushed him to do more to minimize the impact of the race on Cohasset residents' lives.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley and Paul Carlson said they had heard of difficulty exiting driveways/streets from several residents who live along the bike course.

"They were locked into their streets, some of them had jobs they had to get to, and churches had to re-jigger their schedules," Carlson said. He suggested the race be moved to an earlier time (7 or 7:30a.m.) to minimize disruption on the town.

Selectman Ted Carr agreed it was a safety issue for cars to pull out onto the street when bikes were whizzing by.

"I don't know what to do about that, it is a race going on," Carr said.

Quigley said something has to be done to improve the situation for residents, "if people have to leave their homes they should be able to."

Carr said there was difficulty at St. Anthony's Church as parishioners left the 9:30a.m. mass and others were arriving for the 11a.m. service.

Burnett said that was an area he has targeted to look at closely.

Police Lt. Bill Quigley said the later start created the conflict with St. Anthony's and police officers on bikes were sent to the area to help alleviate traffic issues.

Burnett said he recently met with the clergy at five of the local churches to discuss how the race went this year. They asked he consider a Saturday race to eliminate church conflict. Yet, after some thought Burnett said (and the Selectmen agreed) the race would have even more impact on local business and residents if moved to a Saturday.

Quigley also raised concerns over the amount of participants in the race. She said in her research other races run by Burnett (he is the race director for the Nantucket and Marlborough triathlons and the Scituate Duathlon) had a lower participant cap.

Burnett said the amount of parking, the course layout and the transition area capacity were all factors in determining the upper limit of participants.

"You have to think about what the townspeople can handle…what is their tolerance," Quigley said.

Burnett said if the participant level was lowered by 100 athletes, it would not make much of a difference on the overall race in terms of time. However, he offered to draft a report and present it to the Selectmen in October.

"It's a great event, but we have to make sure it fits into Cohasset. The event should fit the community, not the other way around," Quigley said. "We need to find some sort of common ground here."

Quigley and Carlson had concerns about approving the date of the triathlon with several outstanding questions, including the start time and amount of participants.

"I'd like to have the other issues pinned down before giving the date. If not, when (the issue) comes back, they already have the date," Carlson said.

The date was approved for Sunday, June 26, 2010 in a 3 to 2 vote (Quigley and Carlson voted against).

Burnett said he would return in October to discuss the amount of participants cap and the start time of the race.

About the Cohasset Triathlon

The Cohasset Triathlon is the town's first and only multi-sport race. Cohasset resident and race director Bill Burnett brought the idea of the triathlon to the Board of Selectmen in 2006 and the race had its inaugural running in June 2007.

Over the last four years the triathlon has become the country's number-one, third-party volunteer fundraiser for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), Burnett said. In that time, the triathlon has raised more than $600,000 for the charity.

The JDRF was founded in 1970 by the parents of children with juvenile, or Type 1, diabetes, who were desperate to find a cure for the disease as quickly as possible. Type 1 diabetes is a disease that strikes children suddenly, makes them insulin dependent for life, and carries the constant threat of devastating complications.

The athletic event draws elite competitors and weekend warriors alike. The race begins with .25-mile swim off Sandy Beach, a 12-mile bike around Cohasset and a finishes with a 3.2-mile run around Little Harbor.

Registration for the 2011 Cohasset Triathlon will open on December 1 at 8 a.m. The race is expected to sell out very quickly (last year, it took just 72 hours), so Burnett recommended signing up on that day.

Bear Hill tank entry still unclear

No support for access road at CHS

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The School Committee found there were more logistical and safety concerns with a proposed access way next to the middle school than there were for the proposed easement off Reservoir Road.

The School Committee found there were more logistical and safety concerns with a proposed access way next to the middle school than there was for the proposed easement off Reservoir Road.

The search has been on for a new access road since the summer. A new access point for the Bear Hill tank is largely needed because there are two wireless companies interested in putting antennas on the water tank. The construction vehicles for the project may not be able to negotiate the current access road over private property on Pleasant Street.

The water commission initially proposed using a swath of town-owned land off Reservoir Road, but residents raised concerns about safety. The road, which would be utilized by construction vehicles during cell antenna construction and daily by a water department vehicle, is located at a sharp curve and at the top of a hill. Area residents told the water commission it was an accident waiting to happen. Others also mentioned the path is currently used as a cut through for children heading to the elementary schools.

Armed with a map of the area, the water commission explained the various options they had for access. The two alternatives other than Reservoir Road included creating an access behind the high school rear practice field and across town-owned land around the back of Milliken Field.

School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz said the same concerns that exist for a neighborhood exist in a school area.

Helene Lieb, school committee chair, was concerned with the roads proximity to the back practice field.

Water commission chair Chris Seebeck said efforts could be made to limit the times the access road could be used and ensure safety with a fence around the road.

"(The Reservoir Road route) makes the most logical sense. You're not dealing with all these logistical concerns," Slanetz said.

"Our being here is about doing our due diligence. We want to put your concerns in line with the neighbors' concerns," Seebeck said. He said they could explore the option further if the school committee thought it was feasible.

The School Committee voted unanimously that the access road via middle school was not a viable option in terms of public safety.

Parent highly critical of Dr. Walsh

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the second year in a row President Barack Obama's back to school speech has caused controversy in Cohasset Schools.

Last year, two School Committee meetings were packed with parents angry about the handling of the speech within the school district. The speech was not shown to the student population during its live broadcast.

This year, Obama's back to school speech was shown in many middle high school classrooms and to a standing-room only crowd in the auditorium.

Yet, there was confusion among the parent community earlier this week after the middle high school principal issued a school-wide phone message requesting a letter from parents seeking permission to have students watch, or not watch, the speech.

At the School Committee meeting Wednesday night there was not a large crowd — just three parents were in the audience — but anger and drama ran high.

One parent, Jodi Tolman of Forest Circle, read a statement, a statement she said was drafted with the help of many parents, in response to the Superintendent Denise Walsh's handling of the speech.

"It's hard to believe and extremely disturbing to see that we are experiencing déjà vu, all over again," Tolman said.

The five-minute statement accused Walsh of a "total abdication of responsibility" by not ensuring the speech was shown in the schools in a seamless fashion.

"In light of last year's controversy over the speech and the way it was handled, it really seems as if Dr. Walsh is thumbing her nose at the community and School Committee," Tolman said. She felt the handling of the speech this year constituted "a crisis of leadership."

"Dr. Walsh is being paid an enormous salary to manage the issues that affect our district. To fail to step up and figure out a way to make this work this time, when it was so poorly handled last time, was her responsibility alone," Tolman said.

The conclusion of her statement called for a termination of Walsh's contract early (The School Committee is not renewing Walsh's contract; her last day is set for April 4, 2011).

"We would do a greater service to our children – and use our precious and too few educational dollars so much more effectively – by paying Dr. Walsh to stay home for the next seven months," Tolman said.

The immediate response to Tolman's statement came from School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz.

"President Obama is an accomplished man and a gentleman. He – and I – would be offended by what you just read," Slanetz said.

In the greater scheme of things and with an eye to the future Slanetz said such rhetoric could be a detriment to the Cohasset Schools' search for a new superintendent.

"We are trying to attract the next best superintendent. No one is going to want to work in this community if this is the way they are treated. It's hard to believe someone would say such hateful, damaging and unconstructive things about someone who works in our community," Slanetz said.

Walsh, who stood after she was asked to speak louder, had a passionate response to Tolman's words.

"There is a cornerstone in education that we all believe in and that's respect. I heard none of that in the statement you just made," Walsh said.

"No matter what you feel personally about me, I am the current superintendent of schools and I am proud of that title. I am proud of the administration team. I am proud of our faculty and I am proud of our students. I will not have that undermined by personal feelings someone may have about me."

She asked that discussion be civil and respectful.

"I am heartbroken to have such a poor example set for our community and our children," Walsh said.

Parent Virginia Brophy of Beechwood Street said she did not think there was a lack of respect in the statement and it was more a matter of disagreement.

"The School Committee went over this issue ad nauseum last year and it should have been at the forefront of everyone's agenda," Brophy said.

School Committee member Linda Snowdale was prepared to take part of the blame for the perceived missteps associated with the Obama back to school speech.

"We are the ultimate boss, so if this has happened again I feel partially responsible," Snowdale said.

Public meeting vs. public forum

School Committee member Paul Schubert had concerns about members of the community being allowed to speak from a letter without knowing what is going to be said.

"This is a public meeting, not a public forum," Schubert said. He requested written statements be submitted to the committee before being read in an open meeting – or save written statements for a Mariner letter to the editor.

Adrienne MacCarthy, former school committee chair, spoke from the audience shortly before adjournment, said the committee needed to review the Open Meeting Law.

"You're required to hold the meeting in open session so the public can see the business of the town, but that does not mean (the committee) has to entertain every comment," MacCarthy said. "If someone is going to read something you better know what the heck is going to be said."

MacCarthy said Tolman's statement addressed the character and reputation of an employee and set a bad precedent. Under the Open Meeting law, character and reputation discussions are exemptions to the Open Meeting Law and can be discussed in an executive session.

"If you allow it for one you open the door for many," MacCarthy said, adding what is to stop a disgruntled parent from speaking out about a teacher.

Earlier in the meeting, School committee chair Helene Lieb said she felt it was important to give people in the community the chance to express their views.

"We do live in a democracy and we may or may not agree with what is said, but it does make us stop and think about things," Lieb said.

Lieb suggested developing a better way of relaying feedback from the community to Walsh while respecting the chain of command and respective roles of the superintendent and the school committee.

The fourth annual running of the Cohasset Triathlon this past June had a small, but significant, change: the starting time was moved back an hour.

The result was an increased interference with church services and residents trying to go about their business on a Sunday morning.

Burnett was at the meeting to offer a review of the 2010 race and request permission to run the race again on June 26, 2011. The date was approved, but it was not a unanimous vote and Burnett will be back to discuss race time specifics and other details.

Overall, Burnett said the race ran "very smoothly" due in large part to the calm seas and clear skies. He said there would be tweaks made to certain details throughout the race to make it safer and more efficient. Burnett named a quick clean up in the village following the bike portion as one of this year's improvements due to feedback from local business.

"The biggest challenge is juggling everyone's needs," Burnett said. "My goal is to keep as many people in town happy and it's difficult."

The Selectmen agreed with Burnett's sentiment and pushed him to do more to minimize the impact of the race on Cohasset residents' lives.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley and Paul Carlson said they had heard of difficulty exiting driveways/streets from several residents who live along the bike course.

"They were locked into their streets, some of them had jobs they had to get to, and churches had to re-jigger their schedules," Carlson said. He suggested the race be moved to an earlier time (7 or 7:30a.m.) to minimize disruption on the town.

Selectman Ted Carr agreed it was a safety issue for cars to pull out onto the street when bikes were whizzing by.

"I don't know what to do about that, it is a race going on," Carr said.

Quigley said something has to be done to improve the situation for residents, "if people have to leave their homes they should be able to."

Carr said there was difficulty at St. Anthony's Church as parishioners left the 9:30a.m. mass and others were arriving for the 11a.m. service.

Burnett said that was an area he has targeted to look at closely.

Police Lt. Bill Quigley said the later start created the conflict with St. Anthony's and police officers on bikes were sent to the area to help alleviate traffic issues.

Burnett said he recently met with the clergy at five of the local churches to discuss how the race went this year. They asked he consider a Saturday race to eliminate church conflict. Yet, after some thought Burnett said (and the Selectmen agreed) the race would have even more impact on local business and residents if moved to a Saturday.

Quigley also raised concerns over the amount of participants in the race. She said in her research other races run by Burnett (he is the race director for the Nantucket and Marlborough triathlons and the Scituate Duathlon) had a lower participant cap.

Burnett said the amount of parking, the course layout and the transition area capacity were all factors in determining the upper limit of participants.

"You have to think about what the townspeople can handle…what is their tolerance," Quigley said.

Burnett said if the participant level was lowered by 100 athletes, it would not make much of a difference on the overall race in terms of time. However, he offered to draft a report and present it to the Selectmen in October.

"It's a great event, but we have to make sure it fits into Cohasset. The event should fit the community, not the other way around," Quigley said. "We need to find some sort of common ground here."

Quigley and Carlson had concerns about approving the date of the triathlon with several outstanding questions, including the start time and amount of participants.

"I'd like to have the other issues pinned down before giving the date. If not, when (the issue) comes back, they already have the date," Carlson said.

The date was approved for Sunday, June 26, 2010 in a 3 to 2 vote (Quigley and Carlson voted against).

Burnett said he would return in October to discuss the amount of participants cap and the start time of the race.

About the Cohasset Triathlon

The Cohasset Triathlon is the town's first and only multi-sport race. Cohasset resident and race director Bill Burnett brought the idea of the triathlon to the Board of Selectmen in 2006 and the race had its inaugural running in June 2007.

Over the last four years the triathlon has become the country's number-one, third-party volunteer fundraiser for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), Burnett said. In that time, the triathlon has raised more than $600,000 for the charity.

The JDRF was founded in 1970 by the parents of children with juvenile, or Type 1, diabetes, who were desperate to find a cure for the disease as quickly as possible. Type 1 diabetes is a disease that strikes children suddenly, makes them insulin dependent for life, and carries the constant threat of devastating complications.

The athletic event draws elite competitors and weekend warriors alike. The race begins with .25-mile swim off Sandy Beach, a 12-mile bike around Cohasset and a finishes with a 3.2-mile run around Little Harbor.

Registration for the 2011 Cohasset Triathlon will open on December 1 at 8 a.m. The race is expected to sell out very quickly (last year, it took just 72 hours), so Burnett recommended signing up on that day.

Bear Hill tank entry still unclear

No support for access road at CHS

By Nancy White

The School Committee found there were more logistical and safety concerns with a proposed access way next to the middle school than there were for the proposed easement off Reservoir Road.

The School Committee found there were more logistical and safety concerns with a proposed access way next to the middle school than there was for the proposed easement off Reservoir Road.

The search has been on for a new access road since the summer. A new access point for the Bear Hill tank is largely needed because there are two wireless companies interested in putting antennas on the water tank. The construction vehicles for the project may not be able to negotiate the current access road over private property on Pleasant Street.

The water commission initially proposed using a swath of town-owned land off Reservoir Road, but residents raised concerns about safety. The road, which would be utilized by construction vehicles during cell antenna construction and daily by a water department vehicle, is located at a sharp curve and at the top of a hill. Area residents told the water commission it was an accident waiting to happen. Others also mentioned the path is currently used as a cut through for children heading to the elementary schools.

Armed with a map of the area, the water commission explained the various options they had for access. The two alternatives other than Reservoir Road included creating an access behind the high school rear practice field and across town-owned land around the back of Milliken Field.

School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz said the same concerns that exist for a neighborhood exist in a school area.

Helene Lieb, school committee chair, was concerned with the roads proximity to the back practice field.

Water commission chair Chris Seebeck said efforts could be made to limit the times the access road could be used and ensure safety with a fence around the road.

"(The Reservoir Road route) makes the most logical sense. You're not dealing with all these logistical concerns," Slanetz said.

"Our being here is about doing our due diligence. We want to put your concerns in line with the neighbors' concerns," Seebeck said. He said they could explore the option further if the school committee thought it was feasible.

The School Committee voted unanimously that the access road via middle school was not a viable option in terms of public safety.

PROVIDENCE

Sean Aherne, a resident of Cohasset, was among 150 students in Providence College's Class of 2014 who spent their first days in Providence participating in the college's 20th annual Urban Action program.

The freshmen and 25 upperclassmen leaders volunteered 2,000 man hours from Aug. 30 through Sept. 1 working with members of the City of Providence's Parks Department, the South County Conservancy. Students performed various tasks in two communities: in Providence at Neutaconkanut Hill Park in the Silver Lake neighborhood, and in Charlestown, R.I., at Cross Mills Library, Mill Pond, the Nature Conservancy and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Preserve. The volunteers focused on restoring walking trails, clearing brush, repairing and building pedestrian bridges, and creating outdoor seating areas.

Urban Action was initiated by Providence College students in 1991 with 17 volunteering the first year. Since then, nearly 2,600 freshmen have participated, with many returning each year as leaders. The goal of the program is to provide incoming students with an opportunity to make a positive difference in the community that will be their "home away from home" for the next four years.

In addition to Neutaconkanut Hill Park and the South County Conservancy locations, past sites have included Casey Farm in North Kingstown, R.I., and Merino Park, Sophia Academy and Roger Williams Park Zoo, all in Providence

Historical Society celebrates the season in fashion

The Cohasset Historical Society has one of the largest textile collections of a local group in New England. It boasts over 3000 pieces of wearable history in its collection. While many of the stories (and owners) behind the clothes and accessories were not properly recorded at the time of their donation they stand as reminder of a fashion sense and style long evaporated.

One of Fisher's favorite pieces is a remarkably intricate rust, brown and peach silk dress. The society does not know the once owner of the dress, but it was make in New York City by Mme. Rose Gowns circa 1915. The dress has lace, beaded, woven and ribbon elements.

"It was obviously very expensive," Fisher said. The dress is on display with a coordinating hat. Fisher has career background in clothing, display and decorating. She worked for many years at Filene's in downtown Boston. Her role at the historical society has been to help out in organizing, repairing, maintaining and exhibiting the textiles collection.

A redingote, a word long since gone from the fashion world, is also part of the exhibit. It is a coat of some substance and length to be worn over a dress. The one on display is brown and white with honeycomb cotton and sports a pocket – a rarity in the 1870s.

This remarkably intricate rust, brown and peach silk dress was made in New York City by Mme. Rose Gowns circa 1915. The dress has lace, beaded, woven and ribbon elements. A coordinating hat accompanies the dress.

"It's there because how often do you get to show off a tapioca bucket?" Fisher said with a laugh.

The more than two dozen pieces included in the "Colors of Fall" exhibit will be on display through next month at the Historical Society headquarters (the Pratt Building) on South Main St. The society's hours are Monday through Friday, 10a.m. to 4p.m.

Curator of the exhibit Martha Fisher found this jacket, mended it and paired it with a brown skirt found in the historical society's extensive textile collection.

A redingote, a word long since gone from the fashion world, is also part of the exhibit. It is a coat of some substance and length to be worn over a dress.

GIMME SHELTER

Princess lives up to her name

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to feature Princess. Princess does live up to her name. She resides in a room with sundry kittens and one geriatric resident. She gets along or rather co-exists with all the felines. She adores humans and is looking for that special person who is looking for a young, black, silky, friendly, purring feline with white on the tip of her tail. She loves to jump onto your lap and rub her head against you and purr, purr, purr. She can be a bit shy at first, but once you show an interest in her, she'll do her "take me home" dance. Check out our website at www.hsar.org to see more pictures of her and our many cats and kittens.

If you'd like to meet Princess and our many adoptable cats and kittens, we have open hours from 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays, and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays. If these hours don't suit you, call Shirl, at 781-925-3380 for an appointment. The shelter currently has quite a few kittens, please call soon as they go quickly.

We're located at 50 L Street, Hull. The mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. To volunteer, call Nancy at 781-925-3638. For low-cost spay/neuter information, or other matters, call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Local group takes aim at melanoma

Derby Academy concert to raise funds for awareness

By Sara Mason Ader
CORRESPONDENT

Mimi Cangemi Svenning, left, and Maryellen Maguire-Eisen, right, of the Children's Melanoma Prevention Foundation, prepare for a benefit concert by the Neponset Valley Philharmonic Orchestra that will take place at 6:30 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 25) at Derby Academy.

Showtime's new critically acclaimed dramatic TV series "The Big C" revolves around a woman coping with a devastating cancer diagnosis. She learns from her dermatologist that her kind of cancer — melanoma — is aggressive and fatal in the late stages of the disease. The doctor unwillingly pegs the woman's life expectancy between a year and 18 months.

Watching this drama unfold transported me back 15 years to graduate school, where I met my soon-to-be husband. At 25, he was diagnosed with melanoma. After an aggressive and extensive surgery, he recovered fully and we were able to start our lives together. Without awareness and early treatment, he would not be here today — a loving, doting father of three.

A growing number of South Shore residents are learning the hard way about melanoma. Recent statistics compiled by the state of Massachusetts point to escalating levels of melanoma in the South Shore's coastal and affluent communities. Cohasset's rate of melanoma was more than 200 percent higher than it should be for a town of its size and demographics. Hingham's rate was more than 90 percent higher than expected. Norwell's melanoma incidence was 130 percent higher than expected.

These towns enjoy a relatively prosperous coastal lifestyle, where residents engage in such fabulous outdoor activities as boating, golf, swimming and other sports — plus skiing and Caribbean vacations in the winter. Many in the population have Celtic or other fair-skinned roots. "All of that unfortunately means perfect conditions for melanoma," according to Mimi Cangemi Svenning, assistant executive director of the Children's Melanoma Prevention Foundation.

Based in Hingham, the CMPF aims to reverse those statistics by educating the region's children and their caregivers about how to avoid melanoma — not by scaring them into staying indoors all day, but rather by teaching them how to have fun in the sun while being "SunAWARE." (see box) This means taking precautions such as proper application of sunscreen, wearing sun protective clothing, seeking shade, as well as being aware of any changes to the skin.

The CMPF visits hundreds of South Shore classrooms each year and presents students with age-appropriate and actionable information stressing the importance of precautions that prevent the sun's ultraviolet rays from damaging young skin.

"Children are so vulnerable, and much of the damage that later develops into melanoma has happened in childhood," CMPF founder and executive director Maryellen Maguire-Eisen says. "People are not connecting the dots — they don't see melanoma as a real threat — and we need to help them understand that this cancer is vicious."

After 20 years as an oncology nurse at Dana Farber, Maguire-Eisen says she came to view death from melanoma as an unnecessary and avoidable tragedy. She started her foundation to focus on preventing the disease by creating a culture of awareness by educating children. Prevention is key, through carefully protecting the skin from the sun. If that fails, early detection and awareness save lives by preventing the spread of the disease. When detected early, melanoma is typically highly treatable. In the late stages, however, there are no good treatment options.

"That's why education, prevention and early detection are so important," Maguire-Eisen says, noting Australia's success in bringing down its sky-high rate of melanoma deaths through 20 years of education and public health initiatives. Playgrounds and swimming pools are no longer built there without shade. Children are not allowed to attend outdoor recess without sun protection. "The results in Australia have been amazing, but that's because the people there are trained to think about this from a young age," she says.

Maguire-Eisen has spent the past seven years forgoing a salary to help the organization gain momentum in developing and presenting her SunAWARE curriculum in the region's schools. Armed with a photosensitive camera that exposes otherwise unnoticed sun damage on young faces, Maguire-Eisen and her team of educators have enlightened thousands of the area's schoolchildren about the risks of sun exposure and tanning.

"A picture is worth 1,000 words and they are able to see for themselves the damage already done to their skin," says Judy Wilson, who teaches seventh- and eighth-grade health classes at Hingham Middle School. Wilson has invited the CMPF to present to her classes since the foundation's inception. "This is one of the lessons that the kids talk about most all year."

Derby Academy has also brought in Maguire-Eisen's group for the past seven years. "One thing that amazes me about her presentations is the level of information that the students are able to retain," says Ginger Winslow, seventh-grade science teacher at Derby Academy. "When she comes to my science classes, the students often remember her and are able to answer questions based on her visits to their classes in the lower grades a few years earlier."

The CMPF curriculum starts with a primer on climate science covering the earth's position in relation to the sun. In other words, Labor Day is not time to put away the sun block.

"Contrary to what most people think, UV intensity is not related to temperature. It's related to planetary tilt," Svenning says. "That, in and of itself, is a major eye opener with huge implications for the kids."

Svenning explains that in our hemisphere, UV rays are powerful enough in the fall and spring because of the earth's position relative to the sun to do lasting damage to young skin. "Kids are outside for fall and spring sports and they need to know they should be protecting themselves from the sun at those times of the year," she says.

Funding for the foundation's teaching work comes primarily from private donations and fundraising events. This year's major event will be a benefit concert by the Neponset Valley Philharmonic Orchestra at 6:30 pm on Sept. 25 at Derby's Roy Campus Center in Hingham.

The concert is being dedicated to the late Dr. Marie-France Demierre, who was a dermatology and medical professor at Boston Medical Center, a Quincy resident, and an advisory board member to CMPF since its inception. Demierre died suddenly last spring at 42 years of age, leaving behind her husband and two young children. A portion of the evening's proceeds will be set aside for the Demierre family fund.

"She was such a force of energy," Maguire-Eisen says. "She collaborated with us on studies; she taught in the schools. She was doing such important work."

The event will also feature a cocktail hour and silent auction. Items have been generously donated from numerous area businesses including Alyssa Fortin Photography, Sensible Nutrition, Magic Beans and Delicious Designs, Roche Brothers, La Petite Maison and South Shore Skin Center.

For more information about the foundation or how to buy tickets for the event, call 781-875-1773 or visit the CMPF website at www.melanomaprevention.org.

SunAWARE: How to Protect Yourself from Melanoma

Be AWARE of ultraviolet exposure from the sun or artificial tanning sources. When you are SunAWARE, you are sun safe:

- Avoid unprotected UV exposure anytime and seek shade.
- Wear sun protection clothing, including hats, shirts and sunglasses.
- Apply sunscreen with an SPF of at least 30, 20 minutes before UV exposure and reapply every 2 hours while exposed.
- Routinely check your whole body for changes in your skin and report suspicious changes to a healthcare provider.
- Educate your family and community about sun protection.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Nice to be appreciated

On our 73 South St. blog on line at www.wickedlocal.com/hingham we posed the following to our web visitors: "Do you feel fortunate to have a local paper? If not, you should. Many towns around the U.S. have 'regional' community newspapers that cover a bunch of towns — others have no 'local' paper at all. What do you value about your hometown paper? Please share your thoughts."

We received 26 comments – all positive!

One comment in particular stood out for us – not so much for singing our praises here at the Mariner but for the perspective on the future of journalism itself:

David Alschuler commented: "We are extraordinarily fortunate to have a dedicated local news source. And equally lucky that the commitment and continuity of the individuals covering our local news contributes to balanced and complete reporting.

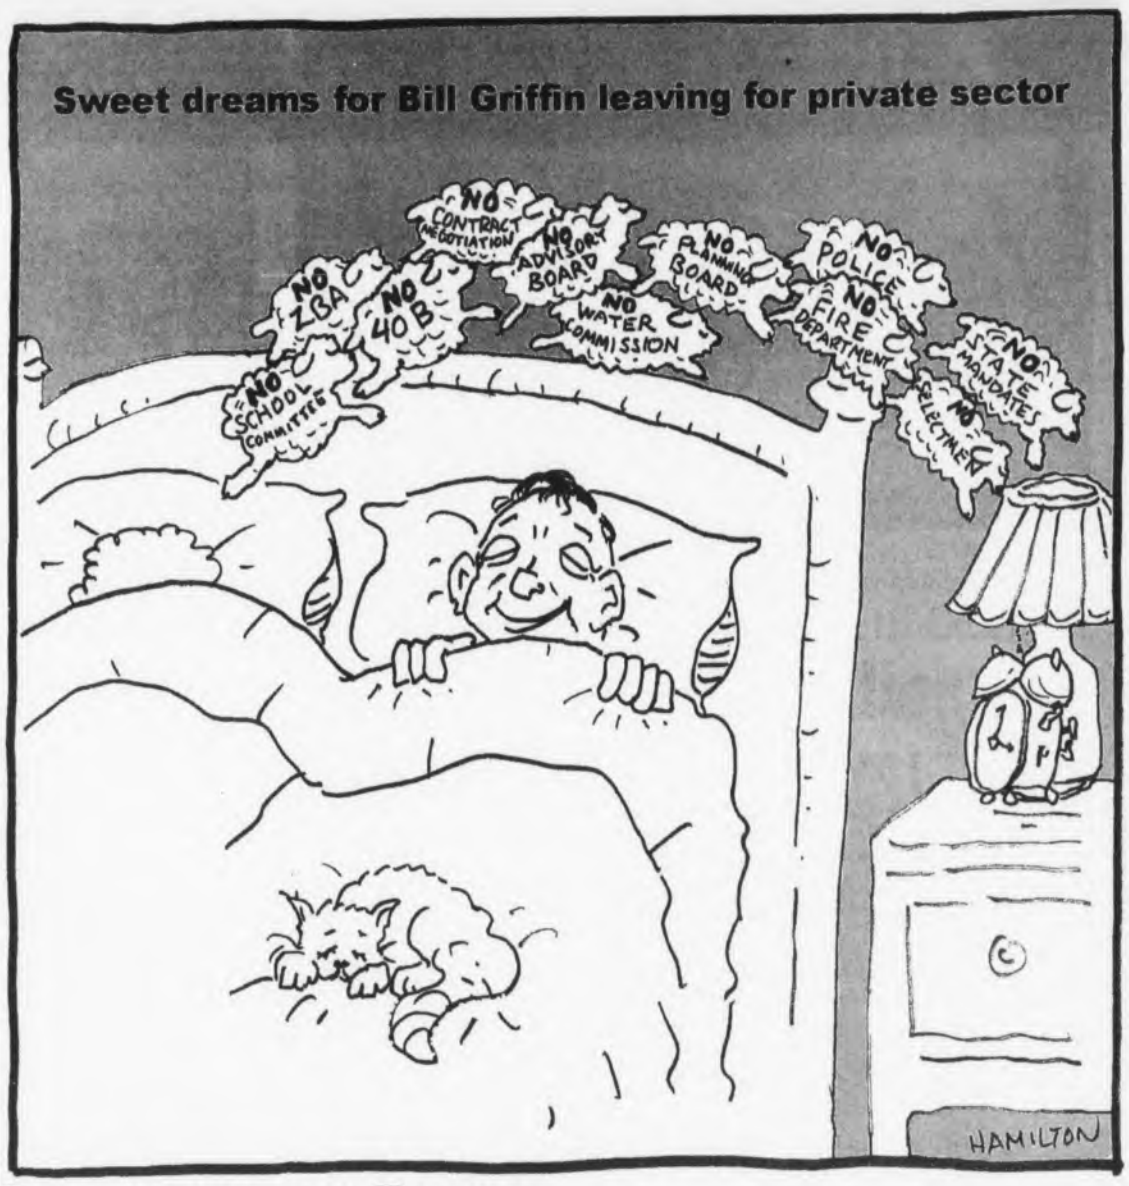
"When Newscorp purchased the Chicago Sun Times, Mike Royko (then the dean of Chicago columnists) packed up his desk and moved across the street to The Chicago Tribune. He was quoted at the time as saying: 'The Sun Times is now a paper that no self respecting fish would be caught dead wrapped in!' He had the right idea.

"One of my larger fears is that carefully edited, fact-checked journalism will disappear — and with it our ability to obtain reliable information — over the coming years in the face of opinion spewed forth in blogs and politically committed 'news' outlets pretending to be news but in fact reflecting personal opinion, intentionally distorted or incomplete versions of 'the truth.'

"The struggle to maintain solvency of every newspaper — national, regional, and local — in the country in the face of 'free' news on the internet should be a concern to all citizens.

"Our present political polarization — at higher levels of government — and the rhetoric that surrounds that polarization is a reflection of this problem. We have (so far) avoided that polarization in our local political discourse and the continuing and accurate coverage provided by (our local paper) significantly contributes to and educates our dialogue."

As journalists we want our readers to know that we share their concern about the future of our field. In fact we worry that the very future of our country is endangered without healthy, vibrant newspapers.



The internet model for journalism is not able to support the "feet on the street" needed to cover news at all levels. Newspapers need feet on the street whether those are in the War in Afghanistan, at the U.S. Capitol, on Beacon Hill or at Cohasset Town Hall.

The support that the Cohasset Mariner has earned from our readers is heartfelt. We are committed to giving Cohasset the coverage it deserves. We hope that our readers will continue to read print newspapers.

We hope you continue to make newspapers a part of your day and week.

Newspapers have always changed; their numbers have dropped with the advent of television and now the internet – but they should not and cannot disappear altogether. There is just no substitute for a good newspaper, one you can hold in your hands, cut up and recycle.

The Cohasset Mariner office is located at 73 South St. in Hingham Square.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'In Kind' contribution to Cohasset Day

TO THE EDITOR:

As both a resident of Cohasset and chairman of the Water Commission, I am a supporter of Cohasset Day. However, it is critical for the citizens of the town and more importantly our ratepayers to know that the Cohasset Water Department did not contribute any money to the event. I was as surprised as anyone to see our name listed among the contributors on this year's brochure.

Peter Brown, the Chairman of Cohasset Day, explained to me in an email that the Cohasset Water Department has been an "In Kind" contributor by filling the dunk tank each year and donating water bottles in 2008. He further explained that the Cohasset Water Department never contributed cash but they do not break out the cash and "In Kind" contributors on their brochures.

Under normal circumstances, this would be a simple misunderstanding but these are not normal circumstances. The town has entrusted me and my fellow commissioners, with the help of the Water Planning Group, to restore fiscal responsibility to the Water Department. It is important that you know that trust has not been violated.

Changes in Cohasset

TO THE EDITOR:

During last Monday's Selectmen's' Meeting, Chairman Karen Quigley made a random statement that some Cohasset residents do not like or have a hard time accepting change. From my own perspective, I do not like change when it does not better the community, its residents or the landscape itself. It seems to me that some boards feel that it's necessary to make changes just for the sake of change itself. Or maybe they feel forced to make changes when they really don't want to. It brings me back to the old adage that "If it ain't broke, leave it alone."

I wish the boards to remember that we are a small community and the ideas and truths of all residents be taken into consideration when making these "changes." Clearly that has been forgotten.

Detectives praised for work in locating Chinese student

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter was in the Selectmen's correspondence packet.

Chief DeLuca:

I am writing to tell you about the incredible service I received from Detective Lieutenant Greg Lennon and Detective Garrett Hunt this summer. I must start by saying I feel badly that it has taken me so long to send you this letter. It has been on my mind to do so since July when I received incredible service from the Cohasset Police on an issue we experienced this past summer.

I work for EF Educational Homestay Programs. As you may be aware, we had approximately 100 international students living in Cohasset and the surrounding communities for three weeks this summer. In late July, one student who had been living with a local host family was reported missing. It was ascertained early on that this was not a missing person's problem, but rather a case where the Chinese boy was trying to defect into the US. I am writing to let you know how wonderful it was to work with Detective Lieutenant Lennon and Detective Hunt, and how impressed I was by their performance and skill in resolving this challenging issue.

The response time by your team was fantastic, and the care with which they investigated the case was notable. Detective Lieutenant Lennon and Detective Hunt worked all day and into the evening to ensure the safety of this student. I spent the entire day with them, along with our adult Chinese leader, working carefully to triangulate the calls the student was making, to find him. It was impressive that they were actually able to locate the student, who had been transported nine hours away, and also work with the authorities in New York to take him into custody. They treated us with great kindness and professionalism while we were in the office and took care to make sure we had everything we needed. Detective Lieutenant Lennon's leadership was strong, and he continued the advancement of this case until it was resolved. I felt very confident in his abilities, and knew that he and Detective Hunt would resolve this case!

Due to both of their hard work and skill, the student was detained, and transported to a location where one of our staff could keep him overnight. The following day, we were able to send the student back to China. We would not have had such a successful outcome without these two detectives. Please know that I commend them highly for the hard work and dedication they show. I feel very safe with these two officers protecting Cohasset!

I am sending a copy of this email to the Town Manager, as I would like to make sure that he is aware of the superb service I received from the Cohasset Police this summer. I'm happy to additionally copy anyone else who might want to know how the detectives in your force are performing. I was extremely impressed, and want to make sure their hard work is noted. I am certain you get letters of complaint all the time and I think it is crucial for you to also find out when your team has performed exceptionally. If I can be of assistance in any way in the future, please feel free to contact me.

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

A Bit of this and That — As mentioned many times before, this office gets involved in a variety of projects that require a significant amount of "behind the scenes" activity, before we get results. To keep our readers informed on what does happen behind the scenes we will give you a glimpse at a cross-section of several of these projects.

Revitalization Phase III — We did mention briefly that the Commonwealth set a deadline of June 30, 2010 for Town applications for a 2010 Public Works Economic Development (PWED) grant. These are grants issued by the Department of Transportation (MassDOT) for capital projects designed to foster economic development in a community. These grants are awarded on a competitive basis.

We submitted a grant application and, based on our application, were invited to Boston to make a one-hour presentation to MassDOT representatives. To summarize our proposed project it includes four areas of work:

- Additional parking spaces in the Town Parking Lot in the approximately one acre of Town owned land behind the Teen Center.
- The improvement of the rear of South Main Street that abuts the Town Parking Lot, including James Brook Walkway, to enhance pedestrian access as well as to improve the general appearance of the area.
- Redesign the intersection in front of the South Shore Art Center to improve both pedestrian and vehicular safety.
- Improve the sidewalks, drainage and roadway infrastructure in the commercial area of Ripley Road as well as the implementation of features that will better link this portion of the Village business area with the balance of the Village businesses.

The presentation seemed to be well received and we should know whether we were successful sometime around mid-October. Keep in mind that these awards are highly competitive and more than likely a large number of towns have applied. Thirty percent of the evaluation for this grant depends on the town's Commonwealth Capital Score. (See chart).

Commonwealth Capital Score (Comm Cap Score) — The Comm Cap Score is a scoring system instituted several years ago by the Commonwealth to evaluate a town according to the following:

"The Commonwealth Capital Policy coordinates state capital spending programs in order to invest in projects that are consistent with Administration policy and the Commonwealth's Sustainable Development Principles and to partner with municipalities seeking to advance our shared conservation and development interests."

A score is developed for each town that applies for a Comm Cap Score. A brief summary of the scores by town size is given below.

Commonwealth Capital Scores: By Population

FY '10	Population	Score-Median	# city/town
	< 5,000	56	31
	5,000 - 30,000	75	82
	> 30,000	90	39

The Comm Cap Score is a scoring system instituted several years ago by the Commonwealth to evaluate a town.

As you can see for a town of our size, about 7250, the Median Score is 75. Cohasset's score in 2010 was 88, which is well above the median score. The maximum score any town can receive is 140. We have applied for an increased score for 2011. But, we have to see how they evaluate our submittal.

The Digging on Nichols near Atlantic — This past week a contractor has started constructing another rain garden on Nichols Road near the intersection of Atlantic Avenue. As you drive by you may see the construction equipment. However, when the work is completed it will be invisible because it is mostly located behind the stonewall as you can see from the photo.

Treats Pond — We have heard a lot about Treats Pond over the past several years. Since Treats Pond is on private property most residents really don't know what is there or what it looks like. Treats Pond is a natural area that collects local surface water and is located just North of Whitehead Road, bordering Atlantic Avenue. It has an 18-inch outfall pipe that flows about 600 feet to the where the edge the ocean used to be. Over the years, that sand has accreted so that the flapper is now about 5 to 6 feet below the sand, blocking the pond from draining. One of the unknowns is whether the outfall pipe is still free-flowing or whether it is partially blocked. This week the Town intends to camera the pipe so we can see its condition inside. In order to do this, the water level in the pipe needed to be lowered, since the camera can't see much under water. This means that the pond needed to be drained to clear the outfall pipe.

To drain the pond, the flapper on the outfall pipe had to be exposed and a trench dug to the edge of the water to create a drainage channel. One of the photos shows the flapper after it was dug out. About five feet of sand was removed to reach the flapper as shown in the photo. In fact, a channel of about 100 feet was required to create a free flowing channel for the pond to drain properly.

If you look closely in the photo showing the trench looking toward the flapper, you can see the two vertical bars marking the flapper. They also show in the close-up photo, located on either side of the flapper. The flapper is 18-inch in diameter, which will give you a sense of scale in the close up photo.

We eagerly await the results to determine the condition of the 600-foot drain line. When and if the camera work gets completed we will share the results in a later article.

Help us Paint the Town Pink

FOR THE RECORD

GREGORY MATHIS

Editor's note: Beginning this week, Editor-in-Chief Gregory Mathis will be writing a weekly column titled "For the Record."

Get ready to Paint the Town Pink, again.

Many will recall receiving a rather unusual copy of their hometown weekly newspaper the first week in October 2009. The color of the newsprint that week has been best described as Pepto Bismol pink. The reason for the pink newsprint that week was to kick off our first Paint the Town Pink campaign to recognize October as Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

The inaugural campaign was successful on many fronts and gave us plenty of reasons to do it again this October. So don't be surprised when your community newspaper shows up in a couple of weeks with a pink hue to it.

Like last year, a portion of the advertising revenue and part of the cover price of every pink newspaper sold will be donated to the American Cancer Society. It really is a win-win situation as we draw awareness to the disease, and help the American Cancer Society raise funds in its fight to cure breast cancer.

Breast cancer awareness is one of so many worthy causes that people are fighting for and contributing to financially through a number of organizations, including the American Cancer Society, the Susan G. Komen for the Cure Foundation and Hope in Bloom, just to name a few. But as far as the technology and research has come in the last decade, and even with all the funds raised by these worthy organizations, breast cancer still manages to impact far too many families.

Although this disease still carries with it pain and suffering – and heartbreak for some families – great strides are being made in the treatment of breast cancer. And while there still is no cure, more and more people are beating breast cancer and living to tell the tale.

Those are the types of stories we'd like to highlight during the month of October in our newspapers and on our websites – your stories.

As part of the month-long coverage we have planned, we would like to profile local people living with, battling and beating breast cancer. We're asking readers to share their stories of strength, faith, perseverance and determination. We know for many breast cancer survivors and their families these are private matters. We also know that many of your stories will inspire others facing similar struggles and give those people the strength, faith and determination in their time of need. Simply put, it's neighbors helping neighbors through difficult times.

You can e-mail me directly at gmathis@cnc.com and I will work with you to make sure the information gets to the proper person.

We hope you take up our offer and share your story.

HEALTH NOTES

Laser pointer damages boy's eye

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Enlightenment, but not too much. For generations, those having children have carefully selected toys for their kids, which are safe; shunning those, which have the least hint of danger from, for example; sharp edges, points and other physical threats. At some time in our life, one of the jobs we assume is to train and provide a safe and healthy environment for our children. The traditional tools we have used in the past are schooling, information about ethical behavior, the signal need to become well read and familiar with the pleasures and pitfalls of modern society. Many more requirements for creating a fertile environment for this often passionate endeavor. But until recently, there has never been anything considered or indicated about protecting them from our gadgets.

Today, there are literally thousands of products, a large number imported which, although they may be regulated, are not monitored. A recent article in a prominent medical journal reports a teenager bought a laser pointer to pop balloons from a distance and burn holes in paper. Wanting to create a "laser show" — he faced the mirror and zapped laser beams in several directions. Some of the beams reflected into his eyes and vision in both eyes blurred immediately. Two weeks passed and his eyesight problems continued. Ophthalmic assessment revealed that his eyesight had deteriorated so badly in his left eye that he could only count fingers on a hand at a distance of no more than 3 feet. His right eye had 20/50 acuity.

...there are literally thousands of products, a large number imported which, although they may be regulated, are not monitored.

An examination of the interior of the eye revealed several "tiny round scars in the right eye". The clinician diagnosed bilateral retinal laser injury to both eyes caused by laser beams. Four months later the boy's eyesight remained severely damaged. The Consumer Product Safety Commission mandates that laser pointers sold to the public have a maximum power of 5mw, which is not considered harmful for human eyesight. The handheld laser device the boy purchased on the internet was 150mW; 75 times more powerful. Independent studies have confirmed that laser devices with a potential of up to 700 mw can be bought by anyone on the internet, presented as "laser pointers" similar to those used by lecturers. Such extremely powerful devices can cause serious and immediate eye injury. They are advertised as toys, even though they can cause blindness. Teenagers find them fascinating. There are even laser swords and other fun toys with powerful lasers installed inside them.

And so, we once again are called to increased vigilance for threats to our health from the vast number of products now available from sources with no thought about their safety. And because their potential for good or bad has not been assessed, we have no idea what dangers lurk therein. The proliferation a variety of products; of communication devices — cell phones, tablets, browsers, I-pads, digital books, not to mention diet supplements, sweeteners, over-the counter medicines — an avalanche of products from all over the world, many without a thought of the unintended consequences of being used together or in too great a quantity.

We now live in a new world with a far more diverse spectrum of processes, products, relationships, and frequently our present means assessing their benefits and drawbacks require ever more thoughtful study.

Commemoration of the Tragedy of the Brig St. John

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, Division 9, Plymouth, will host its annual Commemoration of the Tragedy of the Brig St. John on Sunday, Oct. 3, at St. Anthony Church, 129 South Main St., Cohasset. The event will commence with Mass in the church at 1 p.m., followed by a reception and short speaking event in the Parish Center, featuring Catherine B. Shannon, professor emerita from Westfield State College, which will then be followed by a wreath-laying ceremony at Cohasset Central Cemetery.

This year represents the 161st anniversary of the sinking of the Brig St. John on Grampus Ledge in Cohasset Harbor. The ship was bound for Boston from Ireland in October 1849 and encountered a tremendous storm, which blew her off course to the deadly Grampus Ledge. Nearly 100 Irish men, women and children perished.

This commemoration remembers not only the victims of this tragedy, but also the bravery and compassion of the citizens of Cohasset who tried to rescue as many as possible and who helped those who were rescued. All are welcome to remember the victims and the heroes of this event.

On the Democratic ballot, sitting state representative Garrett Bradley was the top vote getter with 487 votes. Republican Tim Finnerty, who will face Bradley in the general election, received 572 votes in Cohasset.

Robert Hedlund, Republican candidate for re-election to the state senate, received 667 votes. Hedlund will have competition from an independent candidate, Paul Kearney of Cohasset, in the general election.

Kasperowicz 'disappointed'

When reached on Wednesday morning Kasperowicz was already back in his office (he is a certified public accountant) trying to get back into the swing of things.

"It's very disappointing, even hurtful," he said. "You put in a lot of effort over the last year and its essentially inconsequential."

Kasperowicz received 240 votes in Cohasset, earning him second place to Joe Malone. But, he did not have the same support throughout the 10th Congressional District and ended up with 4 percent of the vote (2,101 votes).

Kasperowicz said he enjoyed being out on the campaign trail and was thankful for all the support he received.

"It hurts that what I was trying to say really didn't register with voters," Kasperowicz said. On the campaign trail he talked about being a fiscal conservative, focusing on economic growth and prosperity, and bringing some citizen sense to health care reform.

He said he was glad a conservative republican took the primary and hoped Perry prevails in the November election.

"I'm still a Republican, I'm still going to provide assistance to other candidates," Kasperowicz said, but this race and his candidacy was a "one-time deal."

"I was very committed to trying to do something, but that's passed. Now I'll just help others," Kasperowicz said. He began his campaign from the ground up and admitted he did not have the footholds and ground support of the other candidates.

"I think we did as much as we could do. I thought we could run a nice, old-fashioned campaign in the John Adams tradition where the candidate is a citizen first," Kasperowicz said. "That doesn't work when you're up against very capable and experienced politicians."

Republican Town Committee chair Kevin O'Donnell, too, was disappointed in Kasperowicz's number of votes.

"We had a great candidate in Ray Kasperowicz, but Ray's message did not get out in the Malone/Perry wrestling match about ancient history," O'Donnell said.

We Auto Know
by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman

TIME TO CLEAR THE AIR!

First introduced in the 1970s (on the Rambler), cabin air filters have since become a fixture in the modern automobile. In the beginning, it was recommended that they be replaced every 2 years/30,000 miles. However, it is now widely recognized that cabin air filters should be replaced every year, or even sooner. Much of a filter's useful life expectancy depends on where the vehicle is driven; dusty conditions, for example, necessitate earlier replacement. Replacing these filters can range in degree of difficulty from "easy" to "a real pain." Some are readily accessible at the fresh-air intake under the hood, while others are placed between the blower motor and evaporator core. The latter positioning requires the services of an auto technician.

Of course, even if your filter is in an easy-to-reach location, you probably want to make sure that an expert does the installation. A poorly installed filter can have some smelly consequences! At ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT, our ASE-certified technicians will be happy to change your filter and provide the other preventative services that will extend the life of your car. Yearly maintenance will save you time and hassle (not to mention a stinky cabin) down the road. Call 781-925-3200 for an appointment today. Our address is 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

HINT: There are two basic types of cabin air filters: the particle-trapping type, some with an electrostatically charged layer that attracts and holds smaller particles, and those with a charcoal layer that absorbs odors.

Home Instead SENIOR CARE®

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

WHEN IT'S TIME

Most family caregivers realize at some point that they need outside assistance with their at-home senior loved one. Circumstances can change, and the senior's needs may also change, even overnight. Subject to the nature of those changes, a home healthcare aide can provide invaluable assistance to concerned family members and friends who are unable to be there to assist the senior with everyday activities. Personal care, household help, transportation assistance and companionship all can be provided by a qualified home healthcare aide. An important part of a home healthcare agency's services include evaluating the needs and preferences of the senior receiving care to ensure that a compatible match is made between the client and the aide.

We offer a wide menu of services to best fit your needs and the needs of your loved one. We can provide everything from occasional respite care, to letting you get out of the house, to full-time live-in care for when your loved one needs more than you can give. Painting of the Beautiful Chocolate Girl by Swiss artist, J. Liotard (1743).

Gift from the gods, drink of royalty

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

In 1743, charmed by the lovely maid who brought him his morning chocolate, he not only painted her, but forever immortalized her.

Chocolate, the gift from the gods in Mexico, later the drink of royalty. Like the ooze of dark sweet icing across a countertop, chocolate spread over Europe, celebrated in song, popularized in paintings. In France, portraits of two of Louis XV's most celebrated mistresses, Madame de Pompadour and Madame DuBarry, featured chocolate. At the time, court gossips accused DuBarry of urging her lovers to drink chocolate to whip up their passion. Pompadour, suspected of frigidity, supposedly drank chocolate to increase her own ardor.

Perhaps the most celebrated of chocolate paintings immediately recognizable today is La Belle Chocolatiere by Swiss artist J. Liotard. In 1743, charmed by the lovely maid who brought him his morning chocolate, he not only painted her, but forever immortalized her. In 1883, several years after admiring the portrait in a Dresden (Germany) museum, the president of the Walter Baker Chocolate Company in Dorchester, registered the image as a U.S. trademark. The oldest American chocolate company still retains The Beautiful Chocolate Girl, now one of the country's oldest product trademarks.

Doctors continued to disagree over the merits of the wildly popular drink. Some condemned it as a dangerous laxative. Others enthusiastically prescribed it as a treatment for syphilis (yet another import from the New World). One English health "expert" boasted that as a result of steady consumption of chocolate, his wife "was brought to bed of twins, three times." The great Swedish naturalist Linnaeus, with a nod to Quetzalcoatl, classified it with the Greek botanical name Theobroma (food of the gods) and called it "a most delicious, healthy and nourishing drink."

In 1832 Austrian Prince Metternich requested a "dense and masculine dessert." Happy to oblige, his chef Franz Sacher produced a rich chocolate cake layered with apricot jelly and covered with chocolate fondant icing. Sacher torte remains to this day one of the world's great classic desserts. Shops in Turin, Italy, were the first to serve chocolate mousse, while in Vienna, customers enjoyed chocolate topped with clouds of whipped cream. The English, pragmatic as always, mixed the beverage with milk (sometimes with wine) and opened chocolate houses for the masses.

Later known as the Father of British chocolate, John Cadbury in 1824 offered coffee, tea, and chocolate in his new shop in Birmingham, England. A devout Quaker, he believed that alcohol was a major cause of poverty and social problems. Drinking chocolate, he asserted, was a healthy alternative. Another of his progressive beliefs, considered odd at the time, was that fair treatment of workers would increase productivity.

Fast forward about 50 years to Milton Hershey, an American fourth grade dropout at age 14, a millionaire caramel candy manufacturer at 41. He also believed that workers treated well were better workers. In 1905 his factory in Hershey, Pa., produced the first milk chocolate bar, which sold for only a nickel, a price most everyone could afford. Convinced that workers treated well were better workers, he provided comfortable homes and even an amusement park (which opened in 1907) for his employees. By the way, one story tells that Hershey kisses got their name from the soft smacking sound of the machinery in motion.

Today, it's ironic that most of the world's cacao beans, which originated in Mexico, are grown in Africa, while a majority of coffee plants, which originated as an African crop, are cultivated in Latin America. Another irony: African plantations now provide almost 70 percent of the world's cacao, compared with less than 2 percent from Mexico.

Chocolate continues controversial: it's fattening, raises levels of bad cholesterol, encourages acne and tooth decay. More recent studies show, however, that some of the more than 300 known chemicals (including caffeine) in chocolate stimulate areas of the brain into feeling pleasure and may even lower the risk of heart disease. Apparently, dark chocolate is "better" than light. Choose wisely before consuming with pleasure, and take heart: so far as we know, there has never been a documented case of death by chocolate. In fact, yet another recent Harvard University study found that people who consumed a few chunks of chocolate a month lived longer than those who swore off all sweet snacks. I enthusiastically support that finding!

We custom build every window, so while in your home, we meticulously measure to ensure your new windows will have the tightest fit. Why is that so critical? Our PerfectMeasure Method™ requires us to invest more training and time but ensures an exact fit for your home's maximum energy-efficiency.

Our installation crews aren't infuriating; they're impressive.
A lot of people haven't had the best home improvement experiences, but our Certified Installers are respectful of both your time and your home. Each member of our installation teams averages 10+ years of window installation experience and finish their jobs either on time—or ahead of schedule—96.2% of the time.

Our Fibrex® material is twice as rigid and stable as vinyl.
Fibrex material combines wood fibers with a thermoplastic polymer and will never chip, rot, corrode, peel† or give you headaches. When fog forms between your window panes, that's a definite sign of energy loss. Fibrex is so strong, it prevents glass movement that can lead to fogging. It's how you boost your home's energy efficiency for years—long after other windows can fail.

Tips on rebuilding your 401K

Worried about how one's 401(k) account shriveled in the 2008-2009 stock market meltdown? People can do something about it.

Cohasset author and personal finance expert Paul Katzeff will discuss strategies for beefing up a retirement account – and he will do it in plain English – when he appears at Barnes & Noble in Hingham's Derby Mall at 3 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 25.

Comeback strategies are the subject of Katzeff's newly published book, "Getting Started in Rebuilding Your 401(k) Account." This is Katzeff's third book about how to make the most of a 401(k) account, even in difficult economic times. His books avoid Wall Street jargon. Instead, they are written in an easy-to-read style.

"I write for real people on Main Street," Katzeff said. "I write for 25-year-olds who are starting their first job. I write for 55-year-olds who are wondering how they will finance retirement. My books are aimed at everyone from homemakers to dentists, single moms, single dads, brain surgeons and plumbers. I write for all the people who are busy with jobs, homes and families."

Paul Katzeff will appear at Barnes & Noble in Hingham's Derby Mall at 3 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 25.

Katzeff's latest book about rebuilding 401(k) accounts includes sections designed for people who are good at running their own portfolio. "But the bulk of the book is for people who have little if any experience with investing or with 401(k) accounts," Katzeff said.

The plunging stock market in 2008 and 2009 wiped out a lot of value in 401(k) accounts. Katzeff said, "It scared people. Now the question is what's the best way to fight back?"

During the market crash, many people sold all of the mutual funds in their 401(k) accounts and put the proceeds into cash. Katzeff will discuss the pros and cons of that strategy and others. His topics will include:

- Ways to rebuild your account after the market tumbles.
- How to invest during the next market decline.
- Choosing a target-date mutual fund that custom-tailors its investments to your retirement date.
- Dodging the danger of shifting from stock mutual funds to bond funds or cash.
- When to use a Roth 401(k) instead of a traditional 401(k).
- Ways for self-employed entrepreneurs to use special solo 401(k) plans.
- Deciding how much you can withdraw each year without running out of money.
- Taking advantage of most plans' equivalent of a free pay raise.

Katzeff will talk about 401(k) recovery strategies. He is also schedule to conduct a question-and-answer session and sign books.

The Cohasset author-journalist has written other books on investments and finance. He is a personal finance writer and editor for Investor's Business Daily. He is former Boston correspondent for Money magazine.

This group lead the way for the training and successful completion of the pilot training course for 996 men between 1941 and 1946. Overcoming discrimination and prejudice, these men had an outstanding fighting record in World War II.

Guest speaker Jack Bryant was a member of this elite unit. He will bring his experience and that of his comrades to life with a talk and a film. Boys soccer ties Norwell

The Cohasset boys soccer team got a goal from Nick Brown with an assist by Jonah Adkins on Tuesday as the Skippers battled to a 1-1 tie against Norwell.

The Skippers have a big week ahead with games against East Bridgewater, Mashpee and Abington on the schedule.

"It was a good game, but a frustrating one," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said.

Adkins has had a strong start, with a goal in Cohasset's opener to go with an assist on Tuesday.

Cohasset's Drew Cobin shows his frustration after overhitting a good scoring opportunity that would have given the Skippers the lead in the second half of their 1-1 draw with Norwell on Tuesday.

Skippers hope to command Harbormen

Hingham expected to be tough test today

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset football team opened their season in style with a 45-6 win over Quincy on Friday night, and after enjoying the win for a moment, set their sights on the next test.

The Skippers will face Hingham in a 4 p.m. matinee on Friday afternoon at home.

Jeff Cavanaro tossed a pair of touchdown passes and ran for a third, and Thomas Flibotte, taking over for the graduated Dana Valentine as Cohasset's featured back, ran for two scores in the victory.

"It was a great game Friday night," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "There was a lot of intensity on all three sides (offense, defense, special teams). We made some mistakes, but nothing that really hurt us. We executed as well as we could for a season opener, especially after only playing two scrimmages. We enjoyed it for 48 hours then it was back to work."

The Skippers beat the Harbormen in Hingham behind a 240-yard game by Valentine, and in the process garnered attention from more than just the locals.

"All of a sudden there were more phone calls," said Afanasiw, who has definitely made a name in the area with last year's playoff appearance and a baseball state championship in the spring. "After that game we caught the attention of other coaches and the press."

This season, Afanasiw isn't sure what to expect from Hingham, who beat Christ the King and Syracuse-bound quarterback Terrel Hunt, 41-36 on the road in Queens, N.Y.

"It's been difficult to prep," Afanasiw said. "We didn't send anyone to New York to scout, so we do go in blind. We know they're a good team."

To win, Afanasiw said the key will be execution.

"We have to execute," he said. "We have to use our speed and technique and take the fight to them. They'll have 40 or 50 pounds per person on the line. Our biggest is 210. They have 290. We have to execute near perfect."

Perfect start

Field hockey starts undefeated

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

After the first four games of the season, the Cohasset field hockey team has shown they might be a special group.

After a 3-0 win over a good Scituate team on Wednesday night in Cohasset, the Skippers checked in at 4-0 and have not allowed a goal.

Wednesday night, Olivia Murphy led the charge with two goals, while Kelsey Erler scored the third with an assist from Kayla Orner.

Erler also had an assist.

"We got it all together tonight," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "Scituate could have turned it around. They are a worthy opponent."

Along with Murphy, the key to this one was defense and goalie Whitney Jaffe, who has been brilliant in the net.

Jaffe had three saves, all tough ones, and has made 16 saves in the four games.

"Whitney started last year the same way," Giuliano said. "Then she got hurt. She's made a couple of critical stops in every game. She's played very well and she's had protection by her midfielders and defense."

Giuliano is really pleased with the way her team has been shaping up.

"They have tremendous heart and desire," she said. "If there's a job to be done they'll get it done. We have a lot of talent, but there's more than just talent working here. We have a team that's all headed in the same place. My captains have done a great job bringing everyone together."

Murphy scored twice in that game and Caitlin DeAngelis, Angela Cipolla, Amber Sylvia and Natalie Dignam all scored one.

The junior varsity has also been playing well, beating Scituate's JV 3-0 Wednesday.

Camryn Caron, Christina Tedeschi and Lexa Grasz all scored for Cohasset in the win.

"The JV looks strong," Giuliano said. "A lot of that is due to the work of Beth Gilman and the Youth Program. Their season looks good."

Cohasset plays at Harwich on Friday afternoon.

adapt to what the Harbormen do.

"We're a run oriented team, but we have enough depth that if they put eight or nine in the box we can spread out and throw the ball. Jeff Cavanaro is an excellent quarterback," he said. "If they play us straight up we can mix and match."

After last year's game, Afanasiw is expecting a war.

"I'm sure they've had this game circled since the end of last season," he said. "Why wouldn't they. They're a bigger school, a couple of divisions up and they're neighbors. I'm sure they took it personally and want to rectify it."

Afanasiw likes this kind of game for a few reasons.

"I prefer to play up," he said. "You get the best out of the kids that way. If you're going to challenge them, you should challenge them all the way. Hingham is that type of challenge. They're a well established program, one of the best around. They've won league titles and Super Bowls. They're always a seven, eight or nine win team.

"This kind of game in the larger scale is meaningless. It's not a league game, but there's a great atmosphere. The intensity is high. It helps when we get into our league schedule against teams like Mashpee and Abington and now Rockland."

The coach's biggest hope is an important one.

"My biggest concern isn't winning or losing," Afanasiw said. "It's to stay healthy. That's why we can't play 11 games like this. This is a good measuring stick."

When they walk on the field, the Skippers will be ready.

"The kids know what Hingham can do," he said. "They know those kids walked into New York and put up 40 points. They won't underestimate this team. They're well focused."

Kickoff is at 4 p.m. on Friday in Cohasset, with the early start due to the sunset start of the Jewish holiday Yom Kippur.

Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings

Week One

The first week of high school soccer kicked off for most area teams and already we have some huge changes. Two boys teams fall off the chart, one moves up without even playing a game, and another makes a giant leap. For the girls, the top four remain the same, but the last two spots look a little different, particularly with the entrance of new team this week. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Sept. 12.

Boys

1. Hingham – The Harbormen sat idle last week, opening the season Monday (Sept. 13), so to begin the season, the Hingham boys remain in first place.

2. Marshfield – Before the season even began, Marshfield Head Coach Scott Sorensen had a good feeling about this fall. A 2-1 win over Bridgewater-Raynham to open the season gives him and the team even more confidence.

3. Hanover – The Indians, although idle last week, move up one spot by virtue of Duxbury losing and falling out of the top six.

4. Norwell – The Clippers jump two spots after their 1-0 win over East Bridgewater. Getting some assistance from Canton's win over Duxbury and Rockland's poor performance in week one also helped Norwell climb the ladder.

5. Silver Lake – One of two new entries in the boys table, Silver Lake opened the season with a convincing 2-0 win over a strong Pembroke team. The Lakers then beat Middleboro and have now outscored their opponents, 5-1, in two games.

6. Cohasset – The Skippers break into the top six for the first time this fall. They opened the season with a 3-0 win over Harwich, a team no one could touch in recent years.

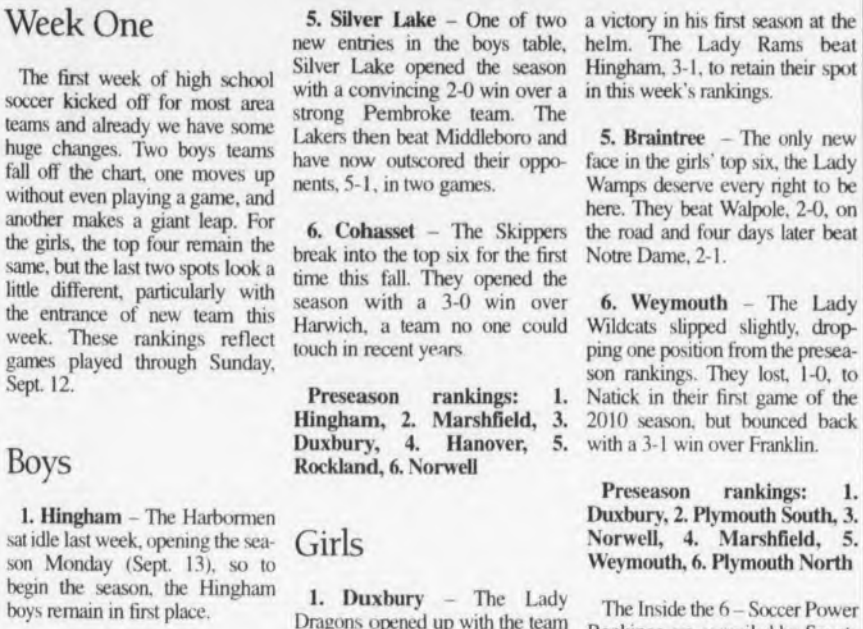
Preseason rankings: 1. Hingham, 2. Marshfield, 3. Duxbury, 4. Hanover, 5. Rockland, 6. Norwell

Girls

1. Duxbury – The Lady Dragons opened up with the team that knocked them out of the postseason last fall – Canton. Saturday, Duxbury got its revenge and came away with a 3-1 victory at home.

2. Plymouth South – A 3-1 win over Taunton to start its fall campaign solidifies Plymouth South's second-place ranking.

3. Norwell – The goal-scoring machine from a year ago, the Norwell Clippers, did what they do best to start this season. The Lady Clippers pounded the back of the net four times in a 4-2 win over East Bridgewater.



4. Marshfield – The Marshfield girls welcomed new Head Coach Dominic Centorino by giving him a victory in his first season at the helm. The Lady Rams beat Hingham, 3-1, to retain their spot in this week's rankings.

5. Braintree – The only new face in the girls' top six, the Lady Wamps deserve every right to be here. They beat Walpole, 2-0, on the road and four days later beat Notre Dame, 2-1.

6. Weymouth – The Lady Wildcats slipped slightly, dropping one position from the preseason rankings. They lost, 1-0, to Natick in their first game of the 2010 season, but bounced back with a 3-1 win over Franklin.

Preseason rankings: 1. Duxbury, 2. Plymouth South, 3. Norwell, 4. Marshfield, 5. Weymouth, 6. Plymouth North

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are compiled by Sports Editor Ryan Wood and are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, goals scored, and goals conceded. This preseason list is based on a combination of last year's finish, how the key losses will affect each team, and the potential impact the returning players may have on the field. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@cnc.com.

Cross Country High Five

Boys Top 5 (Week 3):

(Last week's ranking in parentheses)
1. Pembroke (1)
2. Marshfield (2)
3. Duxbury (4)
4. Weymouth (3)
5. Hingham (5)

Girls Top 5 (Week 3):
(Last week's ranking in parentheses)
1. Weymouth (1)
2. Notre Dame (2)
3. Pembroke (3)
4. Marshfield (NR)
5. Hingham (5)

This Week's High 5 (Week 3):

Ben Bray (Duxbury) - Jon McKinley's win at the Martha's Vineyard Invitational 5K race (16:03) will surely open the most eyes, but Bray's 4th place finish in 16:48 bodes well for the Dragons' chances in Division V this season. In fact, fellow seniors Brandon Meehan and Bill Jewell set up Duxbury as potentially very deep and formidable, assuming they develop a solid 5th runner to shore up their pack. It was Bray's run that kept the Dragons in the hunt for the team title, although Martha's Vineyard edged them 77-83.

Kevin Thomas (Marshfield) - While the state knows what Joel Hubbard can do, the Rams' Thomas is poised to be right on his heels all season, as shown by the duo's tie for first in the team's 21-40 opening victory at Dennis-Yarmouth. With an ACL title in their sights, this twosome looks particularly dangerous, averaging 5:10 miles on the short 2.7 mile course.

Norwell Boys (Norwell) - Norwell Boys (Norwell)- At the Clipper Relays Meet, a 3 x 2 mile relay format in Newburyport's Maudsley State Park, the Norwell Clippers' "A" team of Evan Cannatta, Owen Wiggins, and Tom Viafides hung in there with some of the state's top teams to a 21st place finish in 33:01 (out od 200 teams). Chuck Martin's team looks rock solid for an All State trip out of the new Division VI, and going toe-to-toe with the Lowell's and Methuen's of the world in early season action will only help that cause.

Jocelyn Hubbard (Marshfield) - Leading for the way for the Rams in a losing effort against Dennis-Yarmouth, the junior is taking her prowess from the track to the courses of the South Shore this fall. Hubbard's 3rd place 800 meter finish at DIII's last spring gives her deadly speed as a harrier, and she showed that with a 17:57 time on D-Y's 2.7 mile course, averaging a solid 6:40 per mile pace.

Notre Dame Girls (NDA) - Perhaps the Martha's Vineyard Invitational girls race should be renamed the NDA Invite, as for the 2nd year in a row, the Cougars absolutely dominated the field. Led by Junior Kelsey Whitaker's 19:52 individual title, NDA went on to take seven of the top 19 places (not to mention 6 of the top 8 JV slots). There's no shortage of talent when kids like Kelsey Steeves (20:28), Weymouth sophomore Mollie O'Leary (20:41), Sophia Love (21:10), and Jessica Bouzan (21:49) turn invites into dual meets.

Meet to Watch (Week 3):
Weymouth at Newton North (Wednesday, September 22nd) At Newton's Cold Springs Park, both the boys' and girls' Bay State Carey Division races will heat up. Weymouth's boys will look to beat the Tigers for only the 2nd time this decade, and are led by senior captain Steve Sollowin, a favorite for a top 5 finish at DI All States, as well as newcomer sophomore Nolan Parsley, senior captain Steve Connolly, and Connor McLaughlin. The Wildcat girls will have new harrier Jill Corcoran toeing the line against North standout Margo Gillis, and Corcoran will have help from Bridget Jaklitsch, Molly Barker, and Julie Tevenan, as well as captains Andrea Hicks and Tammy Nguyen. This meet will go a long way toward sorting out Bay State supremacy on both sides.

An annual tutorial on writing youth sports

A Mariner 'How to' guide for parents

By Doug Hastings
BURLINGTON UNION

Every year it is time for a friendly answer to the question, "How do I submit a story on my son or daughter's youth sports team?"

The answer is easy, you submit it to Will Wassersug at the sports department.

E-mail is easiest (wwassers@cnc.com), faxing works (781-837-4543) and so does the good ol' US Postal Service (Sports Department, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050). Heck, even a friendly drive-by is still acceptable.

Now that we've covered that aspect of it, here's the tough part.

Writing the story.

With youth football about to start, youth hockey right around the corner and basketball games about to tip off, I'd say most folks that submit information to the newspaper do it for one of two reasons...

1 - They've been "volunteered."

2 - Their son or daughter's team is good and, heck, people should know about it.

In either case, if writing isn't something you do on a regular basis, the thought of sitting down and writing a story about your son's 5-2 win on the soccer field can be quite daunting.

That's where our help comes in.

The next few paragraphs will be our annual guide to writing about the little guys and gals, a few simple tips to putting together a story so it's fun and easy for all of us. I have used the names of Community Newspaper Company sports editors and contributors to protect the privacy of others.

Tip No. 1 - Don't save the score until the end. It's not a mystery novel and people won't be reading every word anxiously anticipating the surprise ending. Get it out there right away, ("Billerica won 5-2 last Friday") then provide the details.

Tip No. 2 - Avoid using "us" and "we" in stories. I'm fairly certain that you don't skate or run around for the team you're writing about. If you do, get back to your homework and let your mom or dad write the newspaper story.

Tip No. 3 - No nicknames. No matter how hard you try, no matter what strategies you use, nicknames will never, ever make it into the paper. So save Steve "The Terminator" Tobey and Mike "The Hammer" Liuzza for the team newsletter. I'm not a party-pooper, it's just the way it is in the world of newspapers. And no, the kids don't like it as much as you think they do.

Tip No. 4 - Short and sweet is the way to go. In football, don't describe any drives that result in no scoring and don't tell us who won the coin toss. The phrase "The team went three and out"? Don't do it. If it didn't make news, it won't make the newspaper. Same goes for hockey, near-misses and shots that hit the post aren't important enough to mention.

Tip No. 5 - No abbreviations. It's not 18 pts., it's 18 points. Yds. are not yards and gls. are not goals. It's first down, not 1st down and it's never 8 to 3 or even 3-8, always go with 8-3, winning team first. A TD is only two capital letters until you tell people what it is. Say touchdown. Same goes for QB and PAT. Speaking of touchdowns, we know they're exciting, so exclamation points are not needed – anywhere.

Tip No. 6 - Avoid private jokes. They're probably funny to everyone involved with the team, but they're not to anyone else. If Mr. Goodman spilled coffee in the stands during the second period, don't write about it here. If Mr. Liuzza woke up late and had "bed head" in the stands, don't write about it here. If Mrs. Tobey drove to the wrong arena and missed her son's first goal? Save it for the team banquet.

Tip No. 7 - I know the ultimate goal is to mention as many kids as possible, I try to mention as many names as I can in most of my stories too, but for the sake of time and space, there is an easier way than describing one play that each kid was involved in. If you have a bunch of kids to mention that won't get into the scoring summary, simply say "also playing well were Mike Liuzza, Steve Tobey, Chris Klingenberg and Doug Hastings." If it's 10 names, so be it. If it's 20, go for it.

Tip No. 8 - Your kids are good, I'd never debate that, but please avoid comparing the little tykes to professional athletes.

Little Mikey doesn't skate like Sidney Crosby, Sidney Crosby would skate circles around your son.

The following is an actual account from a youth hockey story a few years back. Keep in mind, this was game involving 7-year-old players.

Really?

Comparisons to famous or professional athletes will be filed with nicknames.

Tip No. 9 - Personal comments are not needed. If you say the referees were terrible, you look like a sore loser. If you put things in capital letters, it doesn't provide emphasis, it provides more work for your sports editor as I change all of the letters back to lower case.

Other things to avoid...

"The kids played their hearts out."

"There's no stopping this squad."

"Coach Liuzza is so proud of this team that continues to improve in every facet of the game. They really understand what it is like to be a team."

"Just like the Patriots, this team won because of a total team effort."

Use the locker room to pump up the troops, not the newspaper.

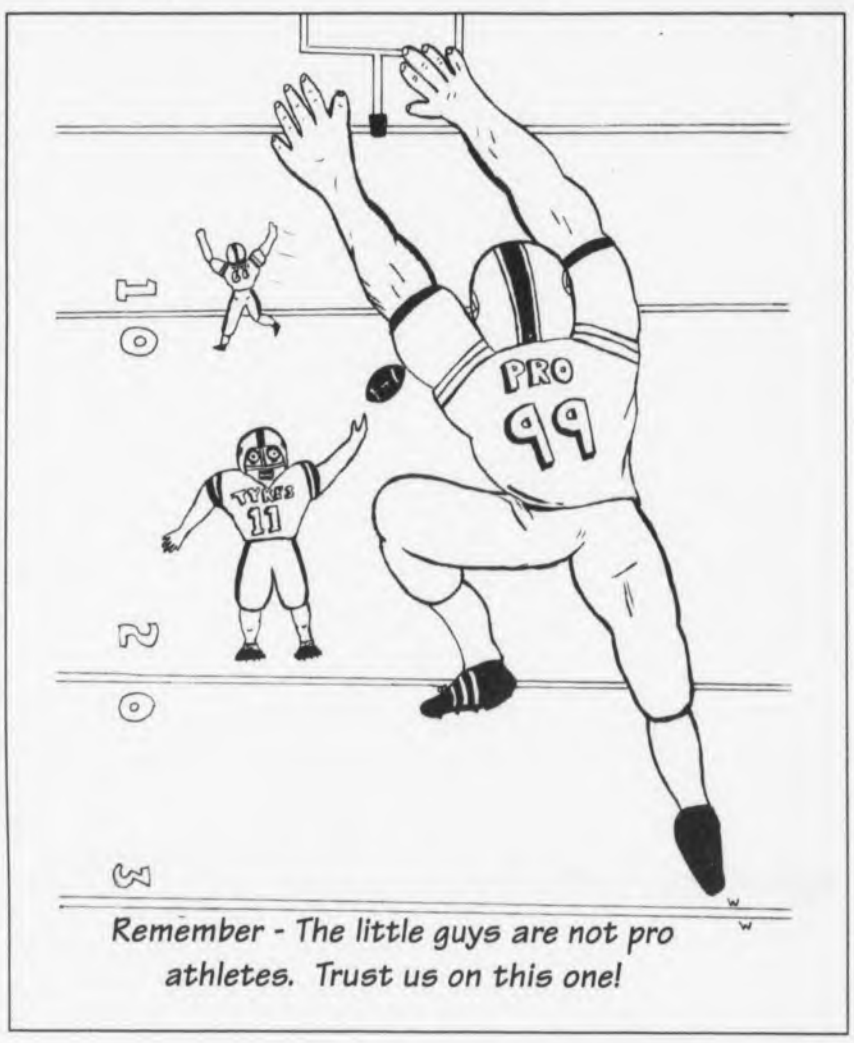
Tip No. 10 - Goals are goals, nobody put any biscuits in any baskets. Nobody brought the football to "the house." It's the end zone and it's a touchdown.

Just so we're all on the same page, here is a mock story of the CNC hockey team's 5-4 win over the Yankees.

"The CNC Tigers beat the Yankees on Saturday, 5-4.

Mark Goodman led the way for the Tigers with two goals and two assists while other goal scorers included Mike Liuzza, Steve Tobey and Doug Hastings.

Several other players earned assists including Bryan Brothers, Jimmy Haines and Jason Keith.



The game was tied at four in the third period until Liuzza finished off a pass by Brothers with just 20 seconds left to play. Defensively, the Tigers were led by Scott Olszewski, Scott Martellucci and Mark Nichols.

Also showing good hustle was Joe Halpern and Paul Falewicz."

If nobody writes about your team at the moment, give it a whirl.

If you have plans to do a little writing, please accept our thanks for your efforts. You probably don't get paid to do it and sitting down at a keyboard after a long day of work or a weekend in the sun certainly isn't easy, but kids love seeing their names in the paper... nicknames or not.

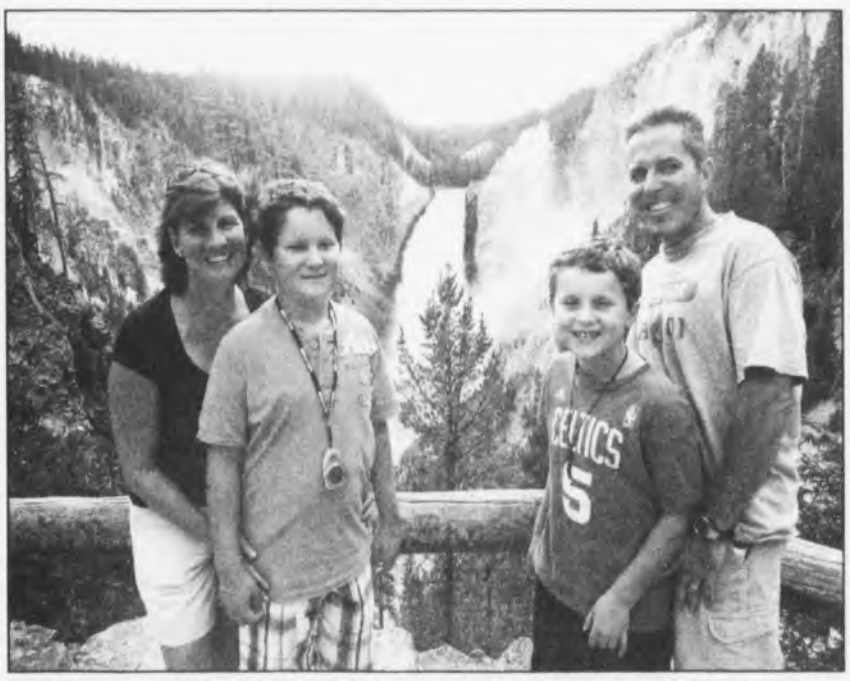
Eva Creel and Emma Campbell, third graders at Vinal Elementary School in Norwell, beat the summer heat by enjoying tubing behind the family boat. The Creel family of Norwell traveled to Biloxi, Mississippi, in July and visited some family landmarks.

What you did on your summer vacation

We asked and you delivered in a BIG way, submitting more than 50 terrific summer vacation photos from near and far. By capturing and sharing your amazing images you made us feel like we were there with you and your family. From the beaches of Maine to the mountaintops of Alaska, and everywhere in between, the photographs on this page represent just a small sample of the many photos we received from readers over the summer months.

Online, you will find four different photo galleries titled "Your Summer Vacation Photos" of all the photographs submitted as part of our Summer Vacation Photos reader callout. Be sure to check them out at your town's Wicked Local website.



Sean MacInnis, 2, of Abington, relaxes during the summer in Brant Rock, Marshfield.

Tom and Sandi Wright of Marshfield decided to do a "Staycation" at beautiful Ocean Bluff. Their dogs (one eyed Otis the pug and Cocker Spaniel Dusty) have different tastes in wine. While Otis is a manly red type Dusty is a much more demure pinot grigio drinker.

The Duff family of Hanover visited 22 states on a recent road trip and one of the places we all agreed was the coolest was the Arch in St. Louis, Mo. The family went to the top and got to look down at the city from 630 feet up! In this picture, John Duff, 8, stands under the towering Arch.

Nancy, Thomas, Joe and Doug Clinton of Hanover at the Lower Falls, Yellowstone National Park, during their summer vacation.

Andy and Linda Krueger of Cohasset enjoy the sun and snow after landing in a small ski-plane on a glacier about 2/3 of the way up Mt. McKinley in Alaska's Denali National Park. The couple was on a three-week tour of Alaska, the Yukon, and British Columbia.

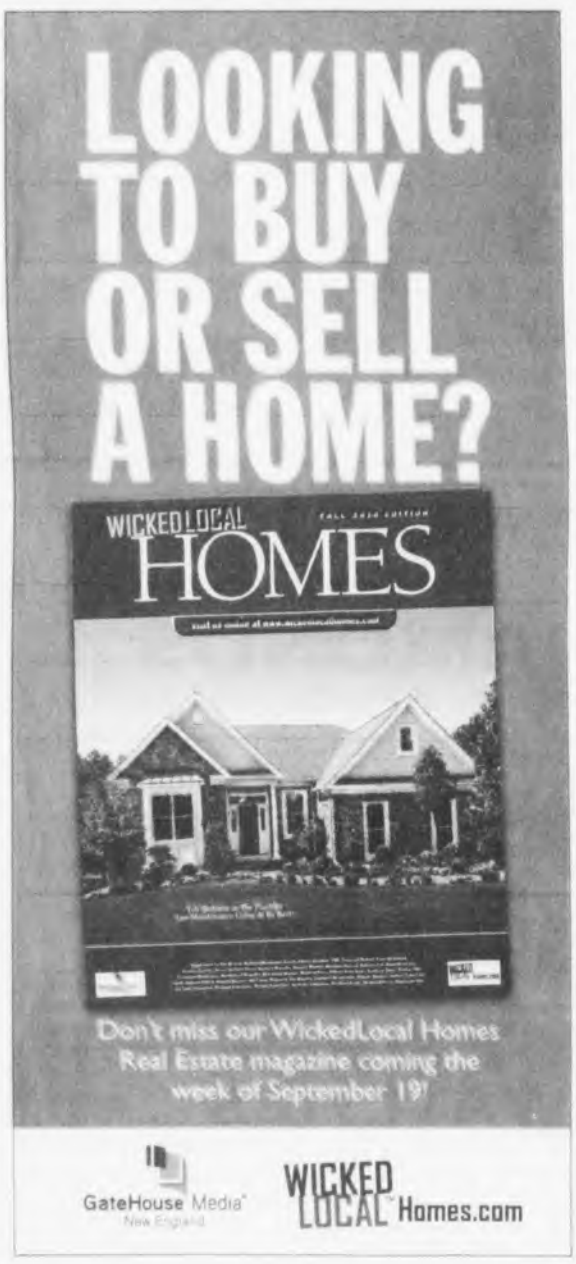
Guided autobiography group at Glastonbury Abbey

Writing the Stories of our Lives is an eight-week guided autobiography group that offers the opportunity to write about and share life stories. It will take place from 9:30 to 11:45 a.m., on Tuesdays, Sept. 28 through Nov. 30, at Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center, 16 Hull St., Hingham. Suggest fee for the eight-session program is $100. All ages are welcome.



Each weekly session a particular life theme – such as family, life's work, spiritual life and values – will be introduced and discussed. During the week participants, guided by focusing questions, will write about this theme in their own lives. At the next session participants will share two pages of their writing with the group.

The purpose of sharing in small groups is not to critique each other's writing but to help one edit and clarify one's own story and to receive supportive feedback from the group. What is shared in the group is confidential to the group. Small discussion groups will ensure everyone has a chance to share and receive feedback.

The group will be facilitated by Ann Diamond, a licensed psychologist in private practice in Hingham with special interests in adult development, spirituality and life narrative.

Cars never looked so good

Concours attracts 37 super automobiles

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Classic Car Concours motored through the center of Cohasset Village as part of the 3rd Annual Cohasset Day and literally stopped traffic — foot traffic — as people enjoyed the parade of 37 gorgeous automobiles as they made their way from Brook Street to the Town Common. The Concours was double the size of the 2009 complement of cars. The classic, antique, sports and racing cars came from 15 cities and towns with the majority of cars from Cohasset. Cars ranged in age from 1934 to 1997 — from the 4 cylinder MG PA owned by Cohasset's David Barrett to the vastly powerful race car engine of the Ferrari 355 Challenge owned by Cohasset's John Tirrell.

Every car came with its own story from the one of a kind parade leader, the 1938 Delahaye 135 M, which was found in a cob-webbed garage in India to a London showroom and eventually found a home in Swampscott, Mass. The fire engine red Ferrari 348 TS, was driven by Paul Wuori, an original member of the '60's era McLaren Formula 1 racing team. The owner of the 1957 Jaguar XK 140 has owned his work of automobile "art" for 39 years. And one very nostalgic story is the 1954 Jaguar C4 received as a graduation present by the Scituate owner. The 1954 Aston Martin was just back from the Lime Rock, Conn. racetrack. Each car was as different as its history.

Thank you to everyone who made the event a success, from the car owners to the hundreds who cast votes for their personal favorites. It was a parade to remember.

Take steps toward better family health

LIVING WELL

JOAN F. WRIGHT

Contrary to belief that high cholesterol is an "old person's" problem, recommendations are that people age 20 and older should have their cholesterol tested every five years, and younger if there is a family history of heart disease.

Editor's note: Living Well is a new monthly column provided by Joan F. Wright on behalf of the NVNA & Hospice, which serves Cohasset. The monthly subjects of the column will coincide with National Health Observances as outlined by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The column will appear monthly in the Cohasset Mariner..

While September is typically "back to school" month, many consider it the "get back in shape" or "back to routines" month. New Year's pledges long since faded, September is often the month to start anew or refocus on goals. The U.S. Surgeon General's goal to promote family involvement in physical activity prompts a Family Health and Fitness Day set for Sept. 25. Celebrating it can be as simple as the family going out together for a bike ride or a walk. It's a step in the right direction of better family health.

Setting a good example and the tone for physical activity for the younger members of the family has become increasingly important. The Surgeon General's report states that the majority of Americans, especially children from 12 to 21, are not exercising nearly enough. Add this to one's family medical history, which might include heart disease or diabetes, and there can be real reasons for concern.

Thus, it's no surprise that September is also National Cholesterol Education Month. Contrary to belief that high cholesterol is an "old person's" problem, recommendations are that people age 20 and older should have their cholesterol tested every five years, and younger if there is a family history of heart disease. There has been a recent volley of studies reported in the Journal of Pediatrics about whether or not cholesterol testing should become routine for all children. Concerns about testing children should be discussed with their pediatrician.

So what does cholesterol testing tell us? A total cholesterol score of less than 200 is the goal. If the total score is 200 to 239 it's borderline high; anything over 240 is high. Too much cholesterol in the blood builds up on the arteries causing them to harden. This can eventually lead to a blockage of blood flow to the heart, resulting in heart disease and potentially, a heart attack. While the total cholesterol number should be low, the HDL number should be high. HDL is known as the "good" cholesterol and fights against heart disease. An HDL level below 40 is considered a risk factor for heart disease. If tests show that one's HDL is 40 or below and/or a total cholesterol count is above 200, it is recommended that a lipoprotein profile be done.

What affects our cholesterol rates? Sometimes genetics is the culprit. But often diet, weight and lack of physical activity is the cause. Yet they can also turn the problem around. Reducing fat and cholesterol in one's diet, maintaining a healthy weight, and increasing physical activity can all contribute to lowering one's cholesterol. Thirty minutes of physical activity on most, if not all days is recommended as it can lower bad cholesterol (LDL) and raise the good cholesterol (HDL).

It may seem daunting, but 30 minutes of physical activity can be a walk along the waterfront, in the town forest, or around the mall a few times. And doing it with family is an added bonus for everyone!

Next up: October is National Physical Therapy month.

NephCure Walk at Wompatuck State Park Oct. 17

Many families on the South Shore, including the Broderick family of Cohasset, have been affected by these diseases.

NephCure Foundation, the only nonprofit organization committed exclusively to support research seeking a cause for two potentially devastating kidney diseases, Nephrotic Syndrome (NS) and (FSGS), improve treatment and find a cure, is sponsoring the NephCure Walk at noon, on Sunday, Oct. 17, at Wompatuck State Park, Hingham.

Last year, area families weathered a nor'easter and came out to raise more than $35,000 to fund research at Children's Hospital in Boston, Beth Israel Deaconess and Massachusetts General Hospital. Many families on the South Shore, including the Broderick family of Cohasset, have been affected by these diseases. There are no FDA approved drugs for these chronic kidney diseases and no cure.

To learn more about the NephCure Foundation or to sign up to walk or volunteer at this year's Walk, join others from 7 to 8 p.m., on Wednesday, Aug. 25, at Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For more information about the NephCure Foundation visit online at Nephcure.org or call Kathleen Broderick at 781-383-6339.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 27, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although practical situations continue to dominate this week, there's time for the Lamb to indulge in the fun things in life — like maybe taking a special someone out for a great evening.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week favors relationships. Take time to renew old ones, and make time to go where new friends can be found. On a more practical note, expect news about a business deal.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You should be seeing some progress on that new workplace situation. Meanwhile, family matters might demand more attention, and you'll want to set aside time to deal with them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A relationship suddenly might present some challenges you never expected. After talking things out, you might want to consider taking some time to assess what you've learned.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A disappointing response to a request might dampen the Lion's spirits. But you might want to ask the reasons behind it. What you learn can be of great importance in a future undertaking.

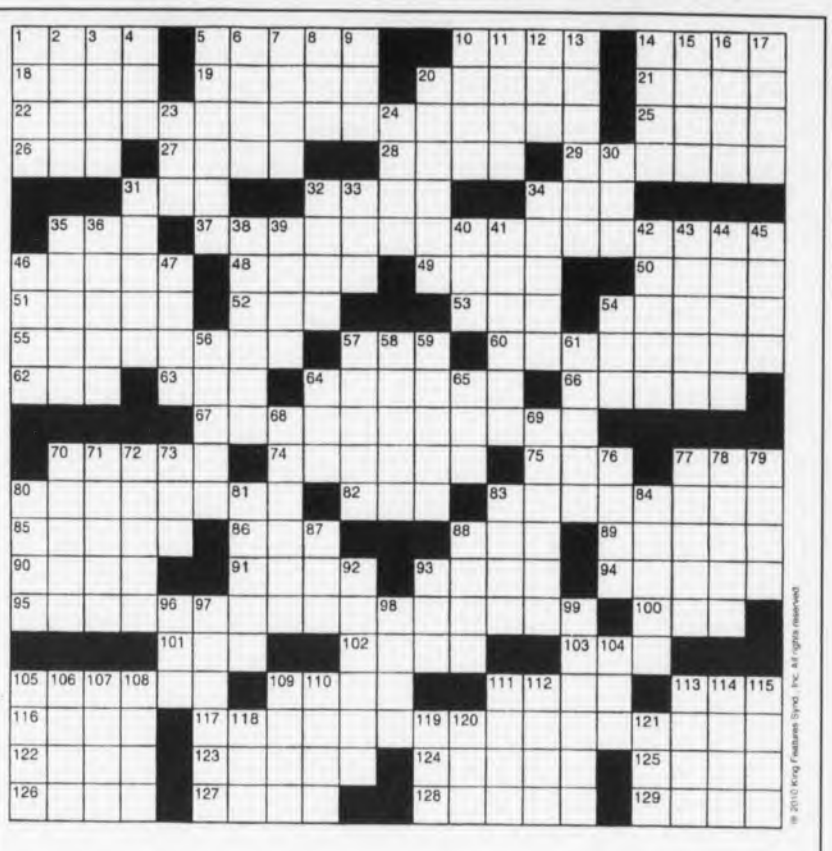
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A once-volatile situation should be settled by now, giving you a chance to refocus on a project you've been planning for. Look for an interested party to rally to your support.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business matter that unexpectedly turns into a personal situation could create complications. Best to resolve the matter now before too much harm can be done.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Emotions can run high when they involve personal matters that no one really wants to talk about. But this could be a good time to create the means to a workable outcome.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A positive response to a workplace request could lead the way to other long-sought changes. Congratulations. A personal situation also takes a welcome turn.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Patience pays off, as that once-overwhelming work situation continues to become easier to handle on a one-by-one basis. Look for positive news from a colleague.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It might be a good idea to take more time to reassess your next move in working out a complex situation. You could benefit from a new perspective on the matter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might want to consider making time to discuss a change of plans with everyone concerned. Be prepared to explain your actions. Also be prepared to listen to alternatives.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

CRAIG BAILEY/PERSPECTIVE PHOTO

Moon (Barlow Adamson) and Birdboot (William Gardiner of Weymouth), two mediocre theatre critics, have gone to review yet another murder mystery, set in the parlour of "charming but isolated" Muldoon Manor. When the fog rolls in, it becomes clear that more than one person has ulterior motives for being at the show. Reality and theatricality become intertwined - then indistinguishable - as doubt falls on whether or not a play, or the perfect murder, might be in progress.

Gardiner gives 'Birdfoot' wings

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Playwright Tom Stoppard wrote "The Real Inspector Hound" in the early 1960s as a take-off on Agatha Christie's parlor-style murder mysteries, even paying dubious homage to the ending of Christie's "The Mouse Trap" with his play's title. Part parody, part farce, Stoppard's one-actor was intended to be performed with another short one-act play. Publick Theatre Artistic Director Diego Arciniegas is currently helming a two-act production of the play for his Boston company, with a cast that includes William Gardiner of Weymouth Landing as Birdfoot, one of the two theater critics who finds himself a part of the drama he has been sent to review. The Wisconsin-born actor relocated to the South Shore while still in his teens, graduating from Hull High School in 1979. He is currently pursuing a master's in theater education at Boston University.

In addition to his graduate studies and his day job as drama instructor at Boston University Academy, Gardiner has been seen as an actor at Boston Theatre Works, Jewish Theatre of New England, Stoneham Theatre and North Shore Music Theatre. Next March, he will direct "Crimes of the Heart" for Duxbury's Bay Players. Last week, Gardiner took a call from Town Commons to talk about his current project.

Town Commons: Describe "The Real Inspector Hound"?

Bill Gardiner: I would call it a spoof of an Agatha Christie murder mystery done in Tom Stoppard's own unique way, written when "The Mouse Trap" was at the height of its popularity. Stoppard wrote it as a one-act piece meant to go along with another play. Diego decided it deserved to be done on its own, allowing people to use the intermission to process what they just saw in the first act. I think Diego was right, too, because this way some of the funniest comedy bits have time to breathe and really be appreciated. We're turning an Agatha Christie whodunit on its head, almost as if Monty Python had decided to do Christie, although probably much smarter because Stoppard is such a brilliant writer.

TC: What's your take on Birdfoot?

BG: He's a lot of fun to play, for sure, but not a man I would emulate. He is very, very full of himself. I want the audience to identify with him as someone they recognize and to enjoy him. It is a comedy, of course, so I want the audience to laugh when they realize they know someone a lot like Birdfoot.

TC: Your character is often described as lecherous among other things. Since he's a theater critic, are you tempted to make him unlikeable?

BG: I think Birdfoot would describe himself as a serial monogamist. He loves young actresses and he loves being involved with the theater. You want to be careful to respect the piece as written, of course, because it is Tom Stoppard, but it is tempting to make fun of theater critics.

TC: Have you acted in other Stoppard plays?

BG: Several years ago, I played the psychiatrist in a production of "Every Good Boy Deserves Favour," a play by Stoppard that features an orchestral score by Andre Previn. There are six actors in the play, but also a 45-piece orchestra, which is on-stage as one of the characters. Needless to say, since it requires such a large orchestra, that one isn't produced very often. I've also done "Arcadia," which is one of the dozen or so shows I've done with the Publick over the years. I loved performing in their old outdoor space, but I also love working at the Boston Center for the Arts, too. It is awfully nice to have real dressing rooms and indoor plumbing.

The Publick Theatre will present Tom Stoppard's "The Real Inspector Hound" at the BCA Plaza Theatre, 539 Tremont St., Boston, through Sept. 25. For tickets and information, call 617-933-8600 or go online at bostontheatrescene.com.

OLD COHASSET INDUSTRY

Local lobsterman shares his day

Out on the water with Paul Figueiredo

By Nancy White

STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Fourth generation lobsterman Paul Figueiredo navigates the Janice Marie, the oldest working lobster boat in Cohasset, back through the harbor after checking his traps.

It's 7a.m. on a Friday morning. Cohasset Harbor is peaceful and there's not a soul in sight.

The water is as calm as a baby sleeping and gives no indication that there is a hurricane traveling up the eastern seaboard. Up above the sun is playing peek-a-boo with help from a puffy cloud cover.

But give it a few minutes and a portion of Government Island comes alive. Two pick-up trucks arrive with four men who start unloading crates and joking with each other. Lured by the scent of fish seagulls swoop in to see what's going on.

It is the start of a day on the water for Cohasset's lobstermen. They have been a part of Cohasset's seaside industry for more than a century and remain the town's living tie to its long history of maritime industry.

While the 20 lobster boats bobbing in Cohasset Harbor makes for a picturesque photograph and hark back to a history nearly extinct, the work of lobstering is neither a pretty picture nor a leisurely day on the water.

Among the lobstermen that morning in early September is Paul Figueiredo, 53, a fourth-generation Cohasset lobsterman. His lobster boat, Janice Marie, is the oldest working boat in the harbor. The wooden boat, one of only a few remaining in the harbor, was built in Scituate by Figueiredo's uncle Donald and grandfather Louis. It was built in 1959 and launched into the harbor in 1960.

It wasn't too long after that that Figueiredo was out on the boat learning the business of lobstering.

"I've been on lobster boats for as I long as I can remember. I really don't know when I started," Figueiredo said. His father, Bob, 80, who still gets out on his boat Margie most days, started him in the business by putting him to work banding lobster claws.

As he got older he worked as his uncle Donald's sternman as a teenager, eventually buying his uncle's boat and business while in his 20's.

As with any job there are the good and bad parts, the challenges and the perks. Figueiredo said lobstering was not what he might have chosen for himself, but something he was he was born into.

Pilgrim Bank moving next door

Needs special permit from planning board

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Change to one of the focal points of the village is imminent. Pilgrim Bank, the owners of the Cohasset Hardware building, is making a move. The bank offices, which have been on South Main Street since 1916, will move next door and occupy the three floors of the Cohasset Hardware building.

Frank Campbell, president and CEO of Pilgrim Bank, came before the Planning Board on Wednesday night to give an informal presentation on the project.

As soon as next month, Pilgrim Bank will formally apply for a special permit from the planning board under the village zoning bylaw. It will be only second project to apply under the re-vamped bylaw and the first reconstruction.

While plans are still being finalized Pilgrim will re-vamp the 6,400 square feet of space to suit the bank's needs. The current building, which shares a wall with the hardware store building, is 3,300 square feet. The building will incorporate an elevator and complete handicap access. The façade of the building will change, as will the interior.

"We want to revitalize the hardware store building," Campbell said.

The current Pilgrim Bank space in the village will be leased out to a tenant.

Initially when the bank purchased the building in December, Campbell said while plans were not set in stone for the building he did not intend to move the bank's operation to the hardware building. After further consideration those plans changed.

"The footprint (of the hardware building) fills the need we have right now. We'll use all three floors for the bank," Campbell said. The current Pilgrim Bank space will be leased out to a tenant.

Planning board associate member Bill Hannon requested Pilgrim make an effort to find a vibrant tenant for the storefront, "we don't need another real estate office."

"At night the village dies. Keep (the space) and lease it out, but find something that will draw people to the village after 6p.m. We need some kind of

Filling the gap

Professional interim town manager sought

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen began setting the course to fill departing Town Manager Bill Griffin's shoes. In the coming months the selectmen will select both an interim town manager and a permanent town manager.

In the short term, the Selectmen determined a professional interim town manager would be the best route for the town to take.

The interim will fill the role for about six months, depending on when the permanent town manager is able to come on board. One of the primary criteria for the interim manager will be budget savvy.

"The interim will largely be responsible for drawing up the budget. They need to be strong in that area," said Selectman Paul Carlson.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said she did not want someone just to do the day-to-day responsibilities of the town manager.

"We want somebody with previous experience. Somebody who is willing to be an active participant and willing to come in and work hard," Quigley said.

Griffin said he has already received several inquiries about the interim town manager position. He said there are many people who have made it their career to be interim town managers. It's likely the person will work three days a week, including some night meetings, Griffin said.

"The interim will largely be responsible for drawing up the budget. They need to be strong in that area."

A per diem charge for a professional town manager could be in the $750 range, Griffin said.

The posting for the interim town manager position will be in the newspaper this weekend, as well as posted on the Massachusetts Municipal Association's website.

The Selectmen intend to narrow down the candidates at their meeting on Monday, Oct. 13 (which may be in a executive session) and interview the finalists (in open session) on Monday, Oct. 20. The Selectmen aim to have someone on board as close to Griffin's departure date (Oct. 30) as possible.

There was consensus the selectmen want an interim town manager that does not intend to seek the permanent position.

POLICE BEAT

Out-of-towner in bicycle accident at rail crossing

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 65-year-old Waltham man called 911 after he fell off his bicycle at the North Main Street grade crossing on Sunday (Sept. 19) at abut 4:14 p.m. Police said the man did not following the signage to avoid going across the tracks and his front tire became trapped. The man went over the handle bars and had a hip injury. He was also bleeding from the legs and elbows. He was transported to the hospital; the train was stopped for a few minutes, police sais.

Accidents

• At 11:35 a.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 14) a Scituate Highway Department dump truck, operated by at 48-year-old Marshfield man, traveling north on North Main Street approached the railroad grade crossing as the lights went on. By the time the truck could stop it was in the middle of the crossing and the gates came down on top of the truck, police said. The operator backed up and snapped the gate that was caught on top of the truck. Police called the MBTA, which replaced the gate; the train was stopped for a few minutes.

• At 6:58 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 14) a 30-year-old Cohasset man came to the station to report that his 2004 Ford pickup had been hit while parked in the Shaw's lot, police said. The incident occurred the day before but the resident did not notice the damage until he was back in his own driveway. The driver's side door and mirror were damaged. Police said it appears the motorist, who did the damage, misjudged the angle in the parking lot and scraped the side of the truck. The incident was not caught on surveillance video.

• At 11:11 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 14) a 32-year-old Braintree woman in a 1998 Mercedes reported hitting a deer on Sohier Street by the Deer Hill School. Police had to put the young deer down because its legs were broken; they moved it to the side of the road to be picked up by the DPW. There was minor damage to the Mercedes, police said.

The school crossing guard reported a dead deer behind a tree the next morning at 6:49 a.m. It was the same deer; the DPW comes on duty at 7 a.m., police said.

French friend

A caller from the Red Lion Inn last week reported that she was concerned about a friend of hers, who had flown into Philadelphia from France, and had been detained on immigration offenses in Philadelphia. The caller was looking for advice. Police checked with ICE (Immigration and Customs Enforcement) that confirmed the individual had been sent back to France. No other information was provided.

Followed

A concerned father called police after his 17-year-old daughter, who works at Shaw's and was walking home last Tuesday (Sept. 14), was followed by a man in a white, full-sized, four-door car. The girl said the man drove passed her four or five times and made her feel uncomfortable. Police sent out an administrative message to area towns about the incident.

Yelling

A concerned caller reported to police at 12:25 p.m. on Wednesday (Sept. 15) that a man in a black pickup truck was yelling and screaming at a female passenger. Police put out a BOLO for the 1999 Ford pickup, which was "low rider" and very distinctive. The truck was stopped on King Street by Sunrise. Police said the 48-year-old Hingham man and a 37-year-old Hull woman had been having a heated verbal argument but there had been no physical violence. Police advised the couple of their rights and they were sent on their way.

Larceny

A 53-year-old Hull Street woman reported that about $850 worth of items had been stolen from her home including flatware and a sterling silver flask. The report came in at 10:40 p.m. on Wednesday (Sept. 15). Police said there was no forced entry. The incident is under investigation.

Dog chorus

A barking dog on Forest Avenue left outside created a chorus of barking dogs in the middle of the night on Friday (Sept. 17). Police received several calls from the Linden Drive and Spindrift Lane area. The animal control officer is following up with the dog owner, police said.

Interviews for superintendent search firm

On Saturday, Sept. 25 the school committee will meet and interview three of the four interested consultants. The interviews are scheduled for 10a.m., 11:30a.m. and 1p.m. A fourth consultant will be interviewed on Monday, Sept. 27 at 7p.m. It's expected the School Committee will discuss which firm they want to hire following in the final interview Monday night.

Both the interviews and deliberation of which firm to hire will be posted public meetings and will be televised on public access cable.

School Committee vice chairman Alfred Slanetz said he wanted to be sure, going forward, that the decisions involving the search for the superintendent were universal. Slanetz is not able to attend the Saturday interviews.

The other members agreed, but several said finding a date that worked for all five school committee members and four consulting firms was a challenge.

School Committee member Paul Schubert said he was less concerned about the search firm that he was about the superintendent candidates.

"I just want the process to be inclusive (of all sectors of the community). It's a very, very important decision," Slanetz said.

"The most important thing for us is to have the teacher in front of the classroom," Superintendent Denise Walsh said.

School Committee member Jeanne Astino asked if any qualified candidates has responded to the program supervisor advertised positions.

Walsh said she had received three resumes, but it did not look like any of them had the "breadth and depth we were looking for.

Astino suggested the position be left open for this year.

"You may be right. Given (the applicants) we have right now I did not feel ready to start a search," Walsh said.

The principal and assistant principal will take over the supervision and evaluation of the departments' staff as well as responsibilities for preparing the budget.

Biology teacher hired

A biology teacher was recently hired to fill the teaching vacancy left by the departure of June Talvitie-Siple, program supervisor for the science, math, engineering and technology departments, at the end of August.

The new teacher, Shannon Gerrish, was hired in a 0.66 position to teach two classes each semester this year. It is considered a long-term substitute position.

Hull and Cohasset to work together

The Hull School Committee still would like to look at the possibility of regionalizing with Cohasset Public Schools, but is willing to look at other ways to work together.

The Hull School Committee voted unanimously to form a study committee to explore opportunities for purchasing, equipment, services, personnel and utilities. Cohasset school committee passed the same motion.

There was a short discussion about whether the two school committees were on the same page. Hull had made a change to Cohasset's motion, which included a qualifier, "but not full regionalization of the two school districts."

"As long as they understand we are not regionalizing," said member Jeanne Astino.

School committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz suggested the Hull-Cohasset focus group get started as soon as possible, "some of these things could have budget impact next year."

Quigley said she preferred not to use someone in-house because of the workload involved in doing their own job and taking on the additional town manager responsibilities. Finance Director Michael Buckley was the interim manager five years ago during the search.

"I think it is unfair to as someone to take on two such important jobs," Quigley said.

Search for permanent town manager

With many of the details set for how to find an interim town manager, the Selectmen also discussed the search for a permanent municipal head.

Selectman Fred Koed, who has been on the board during two other town manager selectmen processes, said a consulting firm gave good advice during the previous searches.

"I got a lot of value out of the professional services," Koed said. A consulting firm would help guide the search process, sift through resumes, interview candidates and recruit potential candidates.

The cost for a professional consulting service can be between $8,000 and $12,000, Town Manager Bill Griffin said.

Griffin advised the Selectmen to post the position in several outlets in October and into November.

While resumes trickle in the Selectmen will establish from community input what the townspeople are looking for a in their next town leader.

To review the candidates, a committee will be formed of people with various backgrounds and expertise, as well as town board representatives.

"There is a lot of untapped talent in Cohasset," Quigley said, adding she'd like to see some new residents get involved.

In relation to the ultimate town manager candidate, Quigley said she'd like to be open to someone from the private sector coming on board.

"I look at the town and I see we are a $35-million corporation," Quigley said. "They might be able to introduce some more business modeling to the town."

While Koed said he would keep an open mind, he admitted he would feel more comfortable with someone with municipal experience.

Selectman Paul Carlson said he would begin to draft up the job posting/job qualifications for the permanent town manager position.

attraction to add street traffic," Hannon said.

Moore agreed, "as space goes that's could be very desirable."

Planning board chairman Al Moore made note of the bank's track record. When they current South Main offices underwent a renovation a few years ago it was the only approval he could recall that was presented and approved in the same night.

"It was amazing – they just had all their ducks in a row," Moore said.

The Cohasset Hardware building has been vacant since the hardware store closed its doors in May 2007.

Harbor revitalization

Planning board discusses future of the area

"There is certainly a lot of interest in the harbor, but there is also a lot of things that don't fit, that don't work."
— Clark Brewer, Planning Board

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

What's possible in the harbor?

What would the townspeople like to see on the waterfront?

What can be done to increase synergy between the village and the harbor?

These big questions – and more – were discussed at the planning board meeting Wednesday night. The board held an informal discussion on the harbor village revitalization.

"Zoning at the harbor is a complex issue," Planning Board chairman Al Moore said. The small area has four different zoning districts: residential, downtown business, waterfront business, and industrial. "It doesn't make any sense."

Waterfront property comes with a lot of strings and it's unclear whether any changes to the zoning locally could actually effect change. Federal law and the Army Corps of Engineers supersedes any local zoning, Moore said. But, he believed if a harbor master plan was developed in partnership with the Army Corps change could happen.

Much of the discussion centered on the disjointedness of the harbor within itself and from the town's business center in the village.

"There is certainly a lot of interest in the harbor, but there is also a lot of things that don't fit, that don't work," said planning board member Clark Brewer.

The discussion is made even more relevant because several of the harbor's key parcels are currently on the real estate market. The Mill River Marina, Atlantica, the Olde Salt House, Cohasset Harbor Inn and "The Oaks" waterfront mansion were put on the market in May for $55 million.

"I'm a believer in not sitting here waiting to see what will happen. I've always thought it's better to have a hand in seeing what happens," said planning board member Jean Healey Dippold.

Moore said while the town may not own the property they could try to make it easier for developers to do something that would benefit the town as a whole.

Planning board member Stuart Ivimey said there are some people in this town that want to keep Cohasset and the harbor as a quiet and sleepy. "But I think we can create some greater access through a park that people would not be opposed to," Ivimey said.

Underlying all the possibilities of development and change was the challenge of parking in both the village and the harbor areas.

Bill Hannon, the planning board associate member, suggested a summer trolley system be established to connect the various points of interest in Cohasset – the commuter rail, the village, the harbor and Sandy Beach.

Darilynn Evans, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and owner of the village shop Darilynn's, said accessibility and facilities are challenges in Cohasset. The village lacks a public restroom, there are few places to sit, there is no signage directing people to the harbor and there's no public transportation to bring you direct to Cohasset Village or the harbor.

"We can market Cohasset all we want, but there's no way to get to the village (without a car)," Evans said, adding efforts have to be made to make the village more charming and inviting. "We can't just stop at new sidewalks."

On the bright side for tourism and business, Cohasset Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons reported there has been a significant up tick in visitors coming on the water. Transient boaters spent 255 nights in Cohasset Harbor this summer, more than double the amount of nights of last year.

"We never had to turn people away," Gibbons said. The transient boaters are charged $35 per night bringing in about $9000 of revenue for the town.

More than that is the boaters do spend in the local economy when they are here, Gibbons said. Many of them dine at the Olde Salt House, or head into the village to take a look around.

But, what holds the harbor back is it has no facilities for boaters – no showers, no fuel dock, no laundry facilities.

Planning Board member Charles Samuelson said there are better boater facilities and easier boating harbors to get in and out of to the north and south (Hingham Shipyard, Scituate Harbor).

"The town missed the opportunity to buy the land around the harbor many times," Gibbons said.

The Planning Board will check with town counsel to see what might be involved in creating a harbor master plan and tweaking the zoning bylaws to encourage efforts to make the village and the harbor more accessible and economically viable.

Cohasset High is 17th in the state

Boston Magazine gives school top marks

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset has been on a steady rise to the top 20 public schools in Massachusetts, as ranked by Boston Magazine. The September issue names Cohasset High School the 17th Best Public School in the state.

The annual listing is based on multiple criteria including student-to-teacher ratio, per-pupil spending, MCAS scores and SAT scores.

"This is a snapshot, and it doesn't show a thing unless you show growth," Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said at the School Committee meeting last week.

Walsh noted Cohasset High has moved steadily up in the rankings over the last six years. In 2004, CHS ranked 69; in 2008, number 33; and in 2009, number 21. In 2010, the ranking rose to the top 20, number 17.

"It is nice to see hard work recognized," Walsh said. In addition, she credited the block scheduling as a factor in the students and high school's success.

"We're just beginning to see all the fruits of our labor. My caution is to not let it slide back," Walsh said.

The rankings are based on data gathered from consulting school officials and websites, as well as the Massachusetts Department of Education.

Determining factors of the school rankings includes MCAS scores, SAT scores, per-pupil spending, student-to-teacher ratio, graduation rate, percent of students who continue into college, as well as amount of sports teams and clubs. George Recck, director of the Math Resource Center at Babson College, calculated mean scores for each data category and then ranked schools based on their distance from the average.

"This is excellent. Five years ago we set a goal to be one of the top 10 schools in the state and we're there in some measures and we're getting there in others," said Alfred Slanetz, school committee vice chair.

School Committee chair Helene Lieb noted that Cohasset Schools were getting there at a lower price point as well. Only one of the 16 higher ranked schools had a lower per-pupil spending number.

Cohasset High was the highest ranked South Shore high school. Duxbury was the closest ranked at number 30. Norwell and Hingham were ranked 33 and 34, respectively; Hull was ranked 41, and Hanover, number 44.

Cohasset Middle-High School principal Joel Antolini said the ranking was great news.

"We're tried to establish a cultural focus on learning and it has produced results," Antolini said. "It has a lot to do with the students; they raise the bar for themselves."

Guided autobiography group to meet at Glastonbury Abbey

Writing the Stories of our Lives is an eight-week guided autobiography group that offers the opportunity to write about and share life stories. It will take place from 9:30 to 11:45 a.m., on Tuesdays, Sept. 28 through Nov. 30, at Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center, 16 Hull St., Hingham. Suggest fee for the eight-session program is $100. All ages are welcome.

Each weekly session a particular life theme – such as family, life's work, spiritual life and values – will be introduced and discussed. During the week participants, guided by focusing questions, will write about this theme in their own lives. At the next session participants will share two pages of their writing with the group.

The purpose of sharing in small groups is not to critique each other's writing but to help one edit and clarify one's own story and to receive supportive feedback from the group.

The group will be facilitated by Ann Diamond, a licensed psychologist in private practice in Hingham with special interests in adult development, spirituality and life narrative.

For information, call Diamond at 781-740-4740.

Sandy Beach Happenings

See you next summer!

Sandy Beach Happenings are provided by the Sandy Beach Association.

This is our last Sandy Beach Happenings article for the season.

Once again, the Sandy Beach Association Board of Trustees would like to thank all of our generous contributors for helping to provide for the opening, staffing and general needs of the beach this summer. We were obviously blessed with glorious beach weather and a crowded, busy beach all season long.

We were as dismayed as were all of you to have the end of the summer marred by the water access closings and appreciate your understanding of the forces of nature and Cohasset Board of Health enforcement of Commonwealth of Massachusetts regulations, which created a situation we could not change.

We were obviously blessed with glorious beach weather and a crowded, busy beach all season long.

Although we have already thanked most of you in our ad, there were some who were inadvertently omitted and we would like to correct that publicly.

The following people also contributed: JoAnne Sandblom, Bob & Claire Collins, John Landy, Sam Pease, Guiseppina Downing, Mike Sardina, anonymous, Jim and March Wyatt, The Joslin Family, Mr. and Mrs. Fraker, Meg and Chris Brinzey, Jill and Joseph Carroll, Paula and David Buick, the Crough Family and Steve Pisarra.

We must also thank the people behind the scenes who are always willing to interrupt busy schedules to answer our emergency calls during the season, and who charge less for their labor for us as their contributions.

They are Ross Rosano, who has been grooming Sandy Beach for over 25 years; Vinnie Cogliano, who comes at all hours in an emergency; Jack Livingstone, who is always available for the bathhouse maintenance needs, be they painting the entire building, or fixing a broken door; David Hassan, who crafts the beautiful signs; and David Marks, who expertly manages the placement of the swimming buoys.

We all wish you a good winter. Stay warm until next summer!

Cohasset Food Pantry in need of donations

AROUND TOWN
JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

INDIAN SUMMER

Hello Cohasset and welcome to the first official weekend of the Fall season. I am hoping for a pretty, colorful fall with mild temps and maybe a nice Indian summer in October. We are pretty lucky I have to say with the seasons, scenery and area that we live in. Make sure to get out and enjoy the leaves, apples and all that fall has to offer. I am actually going to start the column off this week with a bit about our Food Pantry here in town as many people have let me know how many are needing and using the pantry and also, how low the supply has been on food and paper goods, etc. Head to your cabinets, take advantage of the "buy 1, get 1 free" offers at the grocery store and think of other ways to encourage your family and friends to help if you are able.

FOOD PANTRY

The town-wide Food Pantry is in dire need of food and paper items. The pantry is open to all who may need help and the number of people who are in need has grown quite a bit. Believe it or not, the need has quadrupled in the past few years and your help is needed. The following items (no outdated items) are needed: canned veggies/fruits, hearty soups/stews/chowders, corned beef hash, peanut butter, jelly, spaghetti sauce, mac and cheese, condiments, juice concentrates, cereal, paper goods, toiletries, laundry and dish detergent.

Monetary donations are always welcomed and all donations may be brought to the Cohasset Food Pantry, which is located in the rear of St. Anthony's Rectory, on Tuesday mornings between 8:30 and 9:30 am. Thank you so much for your help Cohasset!

YARD SALE

The Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club will be holding a next-to-new yard sale on Saturday, Sept. 25th on Summer Street in Cohasset. The sale will be huge with toys, baby gear, household items, furniture and so much more. The sale will be held from 8-5 and the raindate is Sunday, September 26th. The proceeds will benefit the Scituate and Cohasset food pantries as well as SCNC. Donations are welcomed as well and if you would like to donate, please contact Molly Frame at molly.frame@gmail.com

SPED RIGHTS

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

READING TO SENIORS

Reading may not seem like an exciting activity; however, for many seniors, having someone read to them is comforting. Some seniors have developed medical issues that exclude them from the enjoyment of reading for themselves. Poor eyesight, Alzheimer's disease and other medical conditions can rob them of the ability to read. A home health aide can be a great help by reading to the senior. The sound of a reader's voice can be relaxing, enjoyable and therapeutic. Even if the senior may not be able to communicate or speak, he or she may hear and understand what is being read.

An active mind and lively interests are key to preventing the depression that so often grips seniors. Reading can be just one way to prevent that. Our caregivers are happy to provide a wide range of service, including grooming, bathing, cooking and dressing, as well as reading aloud from books, magazines and the newspaper. Call 781-878-2994 to get your loved one the care that they deserve. We are located at 145 Washington St., Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

P.S. Many seniors find it calming to hear the sound of someone reading to them.

Last year, area families weathered a nor'easter and came out to raise more than $35,000 to fund research at Children's Hospital in Boston, Beth Israel Deaconess and Massachusetts General Hospital. Many families on the South Shore, including the Broderick family of Cohasset, have been affected by these diseases. There are no FDA approved drugs for these chronic kidney diseases and no cure.

Life happens at the library

Next Chapter Grant funds computer and writing workshops

By Marylou Lawrence
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset residents have no excuse now to plead ignorance in their computer or writing skills. Next Chapter is the buzz phrase circulating around the Paul Pratt Memorial Library where library patrons, eager for literacy in basic and intermediate technology, will replace their books with laptops from October 2010 through June 2011; writing workshops in both memoir and fiction will run from January through April.

Library Director Jackie Rafferty and Adult Program Coordinator Gayle Walsh have worked for many months to create the program and recruit instructors. Jackie, who wrote the grants that fund Next Chapter, said, "Although Next Chapter workshops are open to all Cohasset residents, we tailored several of the classes to meet the needs of those individuals who may have missed out on the computer revolution. The baby boomers who were busy raising children and buying them computers can now learn how to use that technology themselves."

The program appears to possess all the requisite elements of success — it's cutting-edge, diverse, and thoughtfully constructed for the needs of a wide audience. The nuts and bolts of the curriculum are geared toward individuals who want to gain both knowledge and confidence in myriad technological applications, whether it be achieving fundamental computer skills, creating effective business content, connecting to social media, or honing troubleshooting savvy. Regardless of participants' personal goals, they are certain to acquire a heightened awareness of their social, professional, and cultural landscapes.

Both Jackie and Gayle are especially pleased with the quality of instructors they have found. Brian Noble of Nobles Camera Shop, media consultants Diane Danielson and Barbara Andrews, and author and Grub Street workshop instructor Lynne Griffin are all respected experts and talented teachers in their fields. Diane has just launched the library's new Face book page and urges everyone to log on and see that life is, indeed, happening at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library!

The first three workshops, taught by Gayle Walsh, address essential skills such as learning to use a mouse, to email, and to navigate the internet. Jenna Blum, author of New York Times and Boston Globe best-sellers, Those Who Save Us and The Stormchasers, will kick off the rest of the Next Chapter program with an Author Talk on at 11 a.m. Friday, Oct. 29. A favorite book club novelist, Jenna was selected by Oprah as one of the top thirty women writers in this country.

The program swings into full gear on Nov. 3 with classes in social media such as Face book and Twitter; business applications such as blogging, PowerPoint, LinkedIn, E-Newsletters, and a study of free on-line tools to enhance business communication and productivity; digital photography and image editing; and much more. See schedule below.

Abbreviated Next Chapter Program

Except where noted all programs are scheduled for 10:30 a.m.

"This program, which is tailored to make learning fun, is adopted by many other libraries and organizations," said Gayle Walsh. "Participants will sign up to complete a set of 11 technology-related tasks within the year 2011. The workshops are designed to teach the skills needed for each task, although one need not attend a workshop to be successful. By the end of the program, each student will have gained a new set of skills suitable for career or personal use."

All classes have limited enrollment, some as few as six students, so interested residents should contact the library right away to reserve a spot 781-383-1348 or register online www.cohassetlibrary.org. Class length varies between one and two hours; the writing workshops, which each run for six weeks, will be two and one half hours long. Visit the library's website which has detailed descriptions of all the classes and instructors or pick up a brochure at the library's circulation desk.

Note that this is the only time the library can offer these Next Chapter programs. Next Chapter is funded by grants from the Social Service League of Cohasset and by a federal Institute of Museum and Library Services grant awarded by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners.

100 years of scouting

Historical Society exhibit highlights local Boy Scouting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For 94 years, Cohasset boys have had the opportunity to get involved with the Boy Scouts of America. From cub scouts to eagle scouts, thousands of boys have incorporated scouting into their childhood.

This year, Boy Scouts of America is celebrating its 100th year of existence and the Cohasset Historical Society is acknowledging the organization's centennial anniversary by exhibiting the local history of boy scouts.

The exhibit, put together by volunteers Rob and Margie Hillman, honors the rich legacy of scouting through local photos and memorabilia.

Much of the memorabilia was found by sifting through the boy scouting "locker" located in the basement of the Deer Hill School. Arthur Lehr, who has been a fixture of Cohasset scouting since Herbert Hoover was president, loaned many items as well.

Cohasset's history with Boy Scouts dates back to 1916. That year the Reverend Fred V. Stanley, the then minister at Second Congregational Church, founded the Cohasset Boy Scout troop. He headed up the Cohasset program until his retirement in 1938.

In 1920, he and six scouts traveled to London to be a part of the US delegation at the 1920 World Boy Scout Jamboree.

The exhibit contains a 1920 photo from the World Jamboree where the seven Cohasset representatives are found. Another photo is on display from a packed banquet room at the former Osgood School commemorating Stanley's retirement from scoutmaster.

Although many of the activities of boy scouting has changed over the decades, the focus on character building, citizenship and the outdoors are still very much present. Scouting once had badges in carpentry and signaling, but those have given way to badges for aviation and salesmanship. Hikes in the White Mountains and whitewater rafting adventures mark more recent local scouting history.

STAFF PHOTO/CHRIS BERNSTEIN

The exhibit includes old Boy Scout handbooks – one dating back to 1910, the first year of boy scouting. There are first aid kits from long ago as well.

The exhibit includes sections on two boy scout camps, Camp Child (now closed) and Camp Squanto, as well as cub scouting.

There is a record, actually purchased from eBay, of the badges earned by Henry Howe, Cohasset's first boy to earn the highest honor in scouting, Eagle Scout.

Since then more than 75 boys have followed in his footsteps and continued with scouting in order to earn the Eagle Scout designation.

In fact, the Hillmans said Troop 28 is thriving.

"The troop is healthy and growing," Rob said, who serves as assistant scoutmaster for the troop. There about active scout 40 participants (ages 11-18) with many more younger boys six to 10 that are involved in cub scouting.

"The town should be seeing many Eagle Scout service projects in the next couple of years," Rob said.

As part of the centennial celebration, Boy Scouts of America have brought back, for one year only, a few of the long since retired merit badges. A group of Cohasset boy scouts will try to earn the semaphore (flag signaling) badge.

Reception for the scouting exhibit

A reception will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 5 from 6 to 9p.m. at the Cohasset Historical Society headquarters to celebrate 100 years of scouting and the exhibit.

"All are welcome, but we'd particularly like to invite scouts, former scouts and their families to share stories and memorabilia," said Margie Hillman, curator of the exhibit.

Admission is free. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

Author Michael Tougias to present 'Overboard!'

Author Michael Tougias will appear at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset on Thursday, Sept. 30, at 7 p.m. to give a slide presentation on his new book "Overboard! A True Bluewater Odyssey of Disaster and Survival." The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Cohasset Library, is free and open to the public.

Michael Tougias, author of Overboard will use slides of the storm, the sinking sailboat, the crew, and the rescue missions to bring this story to life.

"I enjoy doing these programs," says Tougias, "because I like to transport the audience into the heart of the storm so that they ask themselves 'what would I have done.' I think author readings can be a bit slow, but with a slide presentation, the viewer can visually relive the adventure."

A book signing will follow the program, and the presentation is suitable for all ages.

Michael Tougias is the author and co-author of 19 books including "The Finest Hours: The True Story of the Coast Guard's Most Daring Rescue" and "Fatal Forecast: An Incredible True Tale of Disaster and Survival at Sea." Visit www.michaeltougias.com for more information.

Paul Figueiredo ducks underneath the ramp while bringing his dinghy to his boat, the Janice Marie, before heading out for the day. He uses a single oar to scull to the nearby lobsterboat.

The Janice Marie pulls away from Minot Light after Paul Figueiredo laid down a lobster trawl on a recent Friday morning.

Capt. Paul Figueiredo uses a measure tool to determine if the lobster is a keeper. The minimum legal size for a lobster is 3.25 inches measured from the lobster's eye socket to his backbone.

"There aren't many people looking to get into this business," Figueiredo said.

It's not an easy business either if you're looking to make a living. It requires specialized knowledge of the fishing area, working in all kinds of weather, understanding the patterns and habits of lobsters, not to mention strong arms and back. And as costs for fuel and bait go up, the price of lobster isn't adjusting accordingly.

"You have to haul more traps to make ends meet," Figueiredo said.

Most of the full-time lobstermen go out seven days a week from May to November.

"You never know, it really depends on the weather, on if you're catching. You go out everyday you can. When the lobsters are going, we pretty much go out everyday," Figueiredo said. "In the summer it's not so bad. In the fall and winter when its it rough or you're catching a lot of lobster, then it's hard work."

All the lobstermen in the harbor go out in rough weather, but it's probably not one of the selling points of the industry. Figueiredo names storms and high seas as his least favorite part of the job.

"(The job) is more physical the rougher it gets," Figueiredo said. The rough seas also cause worry, and potentially losses, if the gear is tossed around or a buoy breaks loose.

When a Nor'easter is coming the lobstermen have to do what they can to protect the traps they have on the bottom of the ocean. Sometimes that involves moving the traps or depending on the time of year (i.e. winter) taking some out of the water entirely.

And don't get Figueiredo started about when the weatherman is wrong.

"When they're wrong they can cost us a lot of money," Figueiredo said.

On the boat

On the Janice Marie and on the water Figueiredo moves around with familiarity and rhythm. After all he's spent much of his adult life on this boat. He maneuvers the boat from trap to trap, knowing where they are by a map in his head.

Each trawl, which strings together 10 lobster pots, is marked by a yellow buoy with a red top (each lobsterman has a different color combination) at either end. A buoy is plucked from the water, the line looped around the motorized winch and the hauling begins. Within a few seconds the first trap appears. He grabs it and places it on the gunwale. The trap is opened and Figueiredo wastes no time grabbing the lobsters. He looks at the lobsters briefly to determine if they are too small – those ones get a quick flick of the wrist and then fall back to their ocean home. With most of the lobsters he can tell by sight if they are above the regulation size. If not, there is a measure on board to check if the lobster is of legal size.

Legal size is determined by the length between the lobster's eye socket to their backbone, which by law must be 3.25 inches. It can take up to seven years for a lobster to reach a catch-able size, Figueiredo said. The Department of Marine Fisheries also has a maximum size limit of 5 inches, about a five pound lobster.

Meanwhile, the trap needs to be re-baited. The type of baitfish is a personal preference. Figueiredo uses larger pogies – two or three in a pot – but smaller herring fish are used as well.

The trap is then moved to the center of the boat, the next trap is pulled up, and the process repeated. After all 10 traps have been emptied and re-baited, the trawl is set again.

Then, of course, the caught lobsters have to be dealt with. Their front claws are banded with elastics and placed in a barrel filled with salt water.

In Cohasset Harbor, there is a gentlemen's agreement that the trawls are set from southeast to northwest. The purpose is to prevent the crossing of the trawls on the ocean floor. Over the course of the seasons the pots are moved to more advantageous spots: deeper water in the winter, more coastal in the summer.

The traps are pulled in two- or three-day rotation, which is called a set or layover, depending on what is being caught. Right now, the traps and the lobsters are at their peak, with many boats approaching the 800-lobster trap limit.

Most of Cohasset lobstermen's traps are set between Minot Beach in Scituate and Gunrock Beach in Hull.

But, by November, as the weather gets colder, the seas more agitated, and the daily catch diminishes, it becomes difficult to get to all the trap and some will be pulled from the ocean.

Independent mentality

Being on a boat, often alone, for eight or more hours might bother some, but not Figueiredo.

"I've been on a boat by myself most of my life and it doesn't bother me a bit," Figueiredo said. In addition to lobstering, he is licensed to be a 100-ton captain and sometimes during the slow winter months he gets called to help with oil spills.

With all the challenges of being a lobstermen, one has to ask what are the benefits. For Figueiredo it comes down to one standout thing.

"The best part is being my own boss, not having anyone tell me what to do – not that's I'd listen anyway," he quips.

Although Figueiredo has captained his boat alone for much of his working life, more recently he has had company. On the weekends and for the past 10 summers his nephew, Nick Young, has accompanied him.

For the past few years, on and off, Cohasset resident and fellow CHS 1975 graduate Mandy Burgoon has served as his sternman and assistant. For her the allure is similar.

"I'm not a person who likes to sit at a desk all day. And you can't grow up in this town and not want to be by the water," Burgoon said.

Has being around the famous crustacean day in and day out completely turned Figueiredo off from the food many consider a delicacy?

"I will eat it, but I'd much prefer a prime rib," Figueiredo said with a laugh.

Future of lobstering

According to documents on the Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries website, the number of lobstermen in Cohasset has gone down slightly over the past decade. In 1999 there were 34 licensed fisherman and Cohasset was ranked 14th in the state in pounds of lobster caught. That year Cohasset fisherman caught 3 percent of the state's total commercial lobster catch. By 2005 (which was the latest report found on their website), there were 28 licensed fishermen, but Cohasset's state ranking had risen to 12 (according to catch). Despite the loss of fleet size, Cohasset lobsterman still produced about 3 percent of the state's total catch.

Reporter Nancy White carries a handful of lobsters to a container after they had checked a trawl of 10 pots and banded the front claws of the catch.

These statistics speak to what Figueiredo called the biggest change in lobstering since he has been in the business: the amount of lobsterpots allowed to each vessel.

"Growing up the boats had maybe up to 250 traps. Now there are less people doing it and more traps," Figueiredo said.

By federal law, lobstermen are allowed to have 800 pots per licensed boat. According to Figueiredo, the number of pots lobsterboats have to maintain has is one of the biggest changes to the industry over the past few decades.

Despite the changes in regulation and local industry Figueiredo isn't worried about lobstering dying out in Cohasset.

"I think there will always be people who will do it. The numbers of lobstermen in Cohasset goes up and down. I remember years when it seemed like there was a bunch of new guys in it," Figueiredo said.

The start-up expense of buying a boat and equipment, plus the on-going expense of health insurance, not to mention the daily challenges and expenses of a job on the ocean is enough to scare away most, but not all.

Cohasset lobstering has a long history and, like Figueiredo, there is family history and legacy among the profession.

"In Cohasset we have a pretty tight knit group of guys. We try to help each other where we can. I couldn't ask for better guys to fish next to," Figueiredo said.

A link to the past

"Perhaps fifty men make their living at lobster fishing today, and these few form Cohasset's only link with its seagoing past, and help preserve the flavor of a coastal village. They are a hardy lot, and even with high-powered engines taking place of spritsail and sculling oar, their work is not easy."

— "Narrative History of Cohasset, Volume II"

Lobstering is Cohasset's link to its fishing legacy.

According to "The Narrative History of Cohasset, Volume II," by the turn of the century much of Cohasset's extensive fishing operations – Cohasset was a key port for mackerel fishing in the 1800s and was once the fourth most successful fishing port in the state – had disappeared. That is, except for lobster fishing.

The book states that in 1907, 17 lobstermen with 1751 lobster pots caught 78,317 lobsters. Credit is given to the advent of power to fishing boats that helped to revolutionize the industry. Prior to 1900 and for a few years after the lobstermen used small sailing boats and sometimes dories.

When there was no wind the lobstermen propelled the boats by sculling – using a large oar out of the rear of the boat. By moving the oar back and forth they were able to get from pot to pot and in and out of the harbor. Sculling is still employed by several of Cohasset's lobstermen to get from the dock to the their lobster boats.

So, while modern lobstering incorporates depth finders, motorized boats, electric winches and wire traps, not all has changed.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

There ought to be a law

How many of us have said out loud or thought to ourselves: "There ought to be a law."

Well, the good news is there is!

Those of us who have become more and more alarmed about distracted drivers on cell phones and/or texting should be pleased that the Mobile Phone & Texting state law takes effect September 30.

The new law pertains to use of any mobile phone or electronic device by an operator who is under 18 and bans texting while driving for everyone. The law requires adult mobile phone users to have at least one hand on the steering wheel while driving. The new law makes texting while driving, a primary offense, meaning police can pull a motorist over if the officer thinks the operator was texting.

Those familiar with the Junior Operator License law know there is a law on the books that has rules for new, inexperienced drivers including passenger and time restrictions.

We think the Mobile Phone & Texting Law is a really good thing because it bans the use electronic devices altogether for young operators while driving. Violations result in license suspension and fines on a rising scale for first, second and third offenses.

We wish the law went a step further and banned cell phone use while driving for everyone – but addressing young drivers is a really important step.

There is nothing quite like obtaining a driver's license. Most of us remember the day we obtained our learner's permit and later "took the test." We also remember going through the same thing when our children reached the "driving age."

For teens having access to a motor vehicle and being able to drive ranks right up there with making the team, making the honor roll, or getting into college.

As adults and parents we also know the awful feeling when a son or daughter is a new driver and you hand them the keys. While welcoming the "rite of passage" – you fear for their safety.

Parents now have a law to back them up when they warn their teens not to "text and drive" and to stay off the cell phone while driving. We hope that facing a license suspension and fine will be a strong deterrent.

Police Chief Mark DeLuca welcomes the new law. "Young drivers need to be able to operate a motor vehicle without distraction," he said. "Texting or using a cell phone – is just another distraction."

DeLuca said the penalty should be harsh in order to drive the point home with teens. "There needs to be a severe penalty to get results," he said.

As adults we also need to set an example.

Let's all stop using a cell phone while driving – except in an emergency. There is usually no reason why we cannot pull over safely to make the call. If the cell phone rings, we can pull over and call the person back.

As a reminder for Cohasset students about the new law – there is a large LED display board that is owned by the DPW by the school parking lot. It reads:

"New Law Sept. 30, textN N drivN = loss of license"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Improving Little Harbor on both sides of Nichols Road

TO THE EDITOR:

The Notice of Intent for an Operation & Maintenance Plan for Cat Dam was discussed at a public hearing before the Conservation Commission on Thursday, Sept. 23, at 7 p.m. in the Town Hall Auditorium.

The NOI proposed an initial operation plan designed to improve the water quality of Inner Little Harbor. The plan proposes one gate open at all times. The plan would be reviewed annually based on water quality tests. This will positively affect Main Little Harbor. As the NOI states: "The resultant discharge of cooler, more saline water from Inner Little Harbor will improve the ability of Main Little Harbor to attain its goal of SA waters." Class SA is the highest classification of estuarine and marine waters.

Inner Little Harbor has been tested to show that the water fails to meet the Water Quality Standards for temperature, salinity, dissolved oxygen, and turbidity. It has been argued that sewer installation will improve the quality of Inner Little Harbor waters. However, sewers do nothing to increase salinity or lower temperature. They also do nothing to counter the effects of years of deep sediment filled with nutrients. The kind of improvement that's needed comes from having cleaner ocean water enter and exit Inner Little Harbor. As the NOI states: "It should be noted that the sewer installation will do nothing to address the accumulation of nutrient rich sediments, high water temperatures, low salinity and low dissolved oxygen currently contributing to the degraded water quality of Inner Little Harbor."

Please let the Conservation Commission know your support of the proposed improvement.

Small town yes, business no

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset should be managed like a business.

In this difficult economic time, it may sound like a good idea but let's look at the rationale behind this selectwoman's comment. Would it have made a difference in the Water Department fiasco? Of course not. Only the people who were warned this was happening could have stopped that and didn't.

Will it make for better services? Doubtful. Only people who truly care about the town and do their jobs with humanity can make the services better. And as one of those employees, I always try my best to help any resident before during or after my regular hours. Will a business type government allow for this? Probably not. Perhaps replacing people with automated services is behind this idea. Great in Alaska, not so much in Cohasset.

I know there are some serious financial issues in our town that need to be dealt with, but it needs to be done with common sense. Not by changing the character of the town. In a town of 7,800 people you don't need high-priced leaders. Just the kind that listen when an issue is brought to them.

Politics, trips, visits and memoirs

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

On Aug. 18, Cohasset seniors had the pleasure of a visit by Massachusetts state senator Michael W. Morrissey. He is currently running for the position of Norfolk County District Attorney. As a lawyer he has been trying cases for 25 years and was honored for his work with domestic violence. Senator Morrissey gave an overview of the workings of the District Attorney's office.

On Aug. 19, a group rode in the van to the Milepost restaurant in Duxbury where they enjoyed lunch. Then on they went to the colonial home of John Alden, who had come to this land on the ship Mayflower. The kitchen was of special interest with its huge fireplace and built-in brick oven. In the fireplace were displayed many cast-iron utensils used in cooking. The kitchen also contained a large loom on which the women of the family wove fabrics used in the making of clothing. We surely have come a long way since then. Also of interest was a drive to the Old Ordinary in Hingham. Back in colonial times when people traveled by horseback, or horse-drawn vehicle, an ordinary was a home where a traveler could stop for a meal and a drink. Daniel Webster was known to have stopped in Hingham when traveling back and forth to Boston.

Hingham was well known far and wide for its Hingham buckets. A gentleman who joined us on the tour was a 10th generation descendant of a cooper who made these buckets.

Early in September Rosmarie Engel-Conn read another of her memoirs of WW II. This one concerned rationing of certain products in her native Germany, particularly food. Their list of items was very much like that of the United States at that time. They existed mainly on a diet of potatoes, which many people grew on their land. It was interesting to hear of her mother's ingenuity in preparing potatoes in different ways to make them tastier to her and her three children. Rationing in Germany started in 1939 and lasted some time after the war was over. Rosmarie mentioned how very thin everyone was by then. She tells an amusing story of her father bringing home the first box of chocolate they had seen in years!

Another of our speakers was Stephen Bobo. He related the history of the Marblehead heel tapper. This was sailing vessel built in 1740. It was used in fishing mostly for cod and mackerel. The cod was distributed to Cohasset and other towns along the shore. When the ship loaded up with mackerel, it sailed to the Caribbean where it was sold as food for slaves. Mr. Bobo has a model of the ship, which he had restored on display.

The following week Connie Cronin of the South Shore Hospital VN home care and Nancy West of the hospital's physical therapy department visited the Center. Nancy passed out literature on

Bad reviews for Treat's Pond video

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

More on Treats Pond — Last week we spoke about the preparations that were underway at Treats Pond to use a robotic camera to scan the interior of the 600-foot-long pipe that connects the pond to the ocean. When the tides are right and the outfall flapper has been dug out this pipe allows the water from Treats Pond to exit to the ocean. Early in the morning last Thursday, as they had done for several days, the DPW went to the outfall and dug a pathway through the beach so water could drain out of the pond and the connecting pipe. At each tide cycle the trench dug in the beach partially fills back in, so it needs to be reestablished by digging the new sand from the channel. This needed to be done for several days so that the water level in Treats Pond could be made as low as possible. You can see from the photo the rather large piles of sand that had to be removed in the beach area to allow the water to flow.

About 10:30 AM a contractor arrived on the scene with their robotic camera equipment. There was a four wheeled self-propelled robot with a camera mounted on it. The water flowing through the pipe was now considerably lower in the pipe. But, there was still about two to three inches of flowing water riding on about 3 to 4 inches of sand that had accumulated in the bottom of the pipe at the end where it connected to the pond.

The robotic camera was connected to a truck-mounted control center that contained video monitoring screens. The general idea is that as the robot travels through the pipe the video of what the camera sees can be seen on the monitor along with a record of the distance the robot has traveled.

As the camera travels through the pipe a cable carrying the robot's power and the video signals follows behind the robot. The operator in the truck has a joystick that is used to maneuver the robot just like a video game.

One of the photos shows a typical monitor view of what the camera sees. The light colored arc seen on the upper part of the screen is a joint in the pipe. (They occur every four feet along the pipe's length.) The upper portion of the photo is the upper portion of the pipe. The light colored rippled surface shown in the bottom of the screen is the water flowing trough the pipe.

So, let's cut to the chase. What happened and what did the camera show? Well it ended up being a bit of a disappointment. The robot traveled about 13 to 16 feet into the pipe where it bogged down in the sand and refused to move further. Repeated attempts were made to back up the robot and run it as fast as possible to get further, but no dice. The robot's wheels just spun in the sand. The upshot is that we have a good video of the first few feet of a 600-foot-long pipe. So, we didn't really learn much from this endeavor and it's back to the drawing board.

The robot traveled about 13 to 16 feet into the pipe where it bogged down in the sand and refused to move further.

Jacobs Meadow Project & Stuff — We have selected a contractor for the project to replace the outfall channel from Jacobs Meadow adjacent to the American Legion building. In fact, by the time you read this we will have had an initial meeting with the contractor to kick off the project. We'll let you know more about the plans as they progress.

However, there are two other projects that are going to happen in the same general area as our project. One of these is a related project, the other not related. The project that is related is the replacement of the sewer service line from the sewer main to several properties near the American Legion building. These are a part of the current Sewer Department project of replacing old pipes to keep high ground water out of the sewer system. Since this replacement is in the same area that we will be using for the Jacobs Meadow work, it is important that it be completed before we can start. Also, the main sewer line that these services connect to is under the outfall channel and will be replaced by our contractor before we rebuild the channel.

The not related project is the repair of a leaky gas line. National Grid will be doing some repair work on their gas main in the area between the American Legion building and the Cohasset Harbor Resort. Earlier this past week the various utilities with buried lines in the area were marking them out so that National Grid could begin their digging. The roadway is covered with the usual hieroglyphics denoting the location of all of the area utility pipes. So, a very quiet area is about to have a bit of hustle and bustle. We'll keep you up to date as things progress.

FOR THE RECORD

GREGORY MATHIS

Point and shoot.

And when you have a shot you really like, send it along to us.

Many have taken us up on that request over the past couple of months, resulting in readers sharing their summer vacation photos with us as well as photos of their children going back to school.

We call the program "Reader Callouts" and we're asking readers to submit photos of various events or topics that we come up with based on the time of year or what might be happening. As your community newspaper, your photos are always welcome; this campaign just gives it a little more focus (pun intended!) and a theme for readers to think about as they're snapping photos.

While summer vacations and back to school have been by far the most widespread and successful Reader Callouts in many of our towns, we've also tried Mother's Day and Father's Day callouts in some of our communities, as well as our very first callout seeking cute pet pictures which was the cat's meow in many of our communities along the Route 24 corridor.

We're still in the process of rolling out the program in all 28 of our newspapers and 36 websites in our footprint, so if you haven't seen a call for your photos yet you soon will.

Log on to http://blogs.wickedlocal.com/fortherecord to share your thoughts on what we should be doing for future Reader Callouts.

The idea is we collect photos from our readers and put them into photo galleries on our Wicked Local sites. As we get more photos, we add more photo galleries. Once the period for that particular reader callout is over, we'll take a look at what we have for photos and decide how we want to use those photos in print in the individual newspapers.

The success of the reader callouts – online and in print – depends on you. The more our readers submit, the better chance we have for multiple photo galleries online, as well as a better and perhaps bigger display in our newspapers.

We're wrapping up our back-to-school callout now and we're looking to come up with some ideas that will resonate with readers and inspire them to reach for their digital cameras.

Calling for pet photos is a safe bet because people love taking pictures of their furry friends or already have a collection of shots to choose from. With Halloween coming up, we're considering asking readers to send us photos of their Halloween costumes. Thanksgiving and Christmas could also yield some great reader submitted photos.

As we get this program up and running, let us know what you're taking pictures of or what might make a good theme for our next reader callout. We welcome your suggestions and your submissions.

Currently we ask our readers to e-mail their photo submissions to an editor, but in the coming months, we'll be offering new and useful tools on our websites to streamline the submission process and will allow our online readers to submit photos to our websites in a few easy clicks.

Watch your Wicked Local website and weekly newspaper for the next reader callout, and hit us with your best shots!

HEALTH NOTES

Water intake plays many roles

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Water and Moisture — Why and how does water play a part in keeping you healthy or making you sick? A book, appropriately entitled Water, tells how civilizations from the beginning of time assembled around sources of fresh water, principally for crop growth, but also for clean drinking water.

No substance is more essential to health than clean water. We've all heard the statement that the body is made up of two-thirds water and maybe wondered how we should feel about that. The rest is made up of carbon-based stuff. Water is key to life. Humans can survive more than a month without food, but only a few days without water. Water is found inside and outside cells and circulates in the blood. Our body consists of about 60-65 percent of water; for a 150-pound person, representing about 90 to 98 pounds of water.

The many important roles water plays in the body include:

Transportation — Water transports glucose, oxygen and fat to working muscles.

Water also transports waste products, such as carbon dioxide and lactic acid away from working muscles.

Body temperature regulation — The body wants to keep a constant temperature of approximately 98.6° F or 37°C. If the body temperature increases to >106°F or 41°C, cells will die. Working muscles generate heat. In fact, the body can generate 20 times more heat when working, than when at rest. To prevent overheating, the body regulates temperature by sweating. Water absorbs heat from the working muscles and dissipates this heat to circulating blood and ultimately through the skin. Sweat evaporates from the skin, which cools it, thus cooling down the blood and the rest of the body.

Urine — Water transports and eliminates waste-products in the urine. Darker urine indicates a greater concentration of waste products and less water — indicating dehydration. Vitamin/mineral supplementation can result in dark urine. Since supplements of individual vitamins or minerals (i.e. Vitamin C, selenium or chromium) may contain more than the body can absorb, they are excreted in the urine.

Healthy easting — In any dieting, consideration covers recommendations about healthy diets, but also what we drink: Water comes from more than just fluids, it is a major component of many foods. Eating and drinking are the major means for adding the things to our bodies to sustain them. Generally we're careful what we eat and drink. We filter the water we drink and taste it, but sometimes make less healthy eating options and eat undesirable substances. Some prepackaged foods may have more sugar, salt and fat and other less desirable additives. Care and a bit of thought is necessary to reduce the possibility of ingesting less healthy foods as well as including enough water.

About that 20 percent of our water needs are met through food, not fluids. Desirable foods contain high water content add volume but minimal calories to the diet. Thus, these foods high in water are known to promote a feeling of fullness. Fruits and vegetables are two food groups that have generally high water content. Even meat, bread, and dairy products contain some water.

Fruits and vegetables high in water include: citrus fruits, grapes, apples, papaya, strawberries, apricots, cherries , bell peppers , lettuce, tomato, cucumber, squash, celery, broccoli, cauliflower, spinach, carrots

The daily recommended fluid intake is 10 to 14 glasses (8 oz) depending on your age and sex. Females and younger people are at the lower end of the range while males are at the upper end of the range. Foods contribute 20 percent of the fluids so actual fluid recommendations are 8 - 13 glasses daily. Focus on fruits and vary your veggies to help with fluid intake.

Of course, water's also pleasant to look at, sitting in a lake or harbor.

Take part in superintendent search firm interviews

The Cohasset School Committee will hold two special meetings this month. The purpose of these meetings is to hear presentations from four executive search firms being considered to assist in hiring the town's next Superintendent of Schools. These meetings will be on Saturday, Sept. 25, starting at 10 a.m. and Monday, Sept. 27, at 7 p.m.

On Saturday, Sept. 25, there will be presentations from three firms with the first at 10 a.m. (New England School Development Council), the second at 11:30 a.m. (Future Management Systems, Inc.) and the last presentation of the day at 1 p.m. (Mass Association of School Committees). The Monday evening meeting is scheduled at 7 p.m. and a presentation will be made by representatives of Educators' Collaborative. These meetings are open to the public (and will be televised on the educational channel – channel 22 on Comcast) and will take place in the Community Room outside the Business office at Cohasset High School.

Once a search firm is identified, a timeline will be developed and members of the community will have the opportunity to participate in the process of hiring Cohasset's next Superintendent of Schools.

Personal vendettas should be put aside

COMMENTARY

ADRIENNE MACCARTHY

A School Committee member must put the schools first and politics, personal feelings and vendettas aside.

First, I would like to thank your reporter for the article in last weeks Mariner, covering the critical remarks of a parent at the Sept. 15th. school committee meeting. The article was concise and gave a well-rounded perspective to your readers. However, as I watched this event unfold at home, I could not believe the utterly unethical and unprofessional behavior of the Chair of the Cohasset School Committee as well as a majority of its members. It was clear that the Chair knew the content of the letter, which she allowed to be read, and was intent on allowing the character and reputation of the Superintendent to be defamed in public. It is my belief, she has put the Town of Cohasset at risk with these blatant behaviors.

The Chair of the School Committee as well as Mrs. Astino need to read their own Policy Manual; for instance, policy BCA (Ethics); BDB and BDD (Duties of Chair/Superintendent); after all Budgets and Policies are what they are bound, by the law, to oversee. Better yet, they may want to brush up on the Massachusetts Open Meeting Law especially the #1 purpose for which an elected board may vote to hold an executive session — it is to discuss the reputation, character, etc..; according to M.G.L. "This purpose is to protect the rights and reputation of individuals." As a former School Committee member and chair, it was always incumbent upon me to respect and protect the rights and reputation of those who worked for us, as difficult as it may have been at times. It has been increasingly apparent that a majority of the current School Committee does not see this as an important part of their role. A majority of them seem to be carrying out the wants and wishes of persons who have personal vendettas for one reason or another with the Superintendent. This is not why they were elected — I hope!

A School Committee member must put the schools first and politics, personal feelings and vendettas aside.

Parents, be mindful, this is the School Committee who is going to choose your next Superintendent. Make sure you know what type of candidate they are looking for; better yet, ask to serve on the selection committee! Each school PSO needs be represented as well as a few members from the CEF. The last selection committee found us who we needed to move our small, stagnant district forward.

And, according to recent statistics and multiple measures, Cohasset Public Schools are performing BETTER than ever. We have been moving this district forward operationally and academically for 6 plus years; hopefully, we're not looking to go back to the "good old days"(pre-2004) — a time when we didn't use a chart of accounts, we had inadequate professional development for our staff, uncertified teachers and administrators, etc.; to name just a few things which were found when we start peeling apart the layers which made up Cohasset Public Schools at that time.

It was hard and sometimes stressful work to get where we are today. However, whether you like the Superintendent or not, she has led us to where we are. It was her instructional and financial leadership that uncovered the many areas where we were underperforming. And, it has been her recommendations to the School Committee along with sound fiscal policies that remedy those shortcomings and kept us afloat during one of the most devastating economic down turns in recent history.

To me, the headline we should have read was: "Cohasset School's once ranked 69th in 2004, now ranked 17th in the state for 2010!"

Let's see if politics, personal feeling as well as vendettas, can be put aside and get to the business at hand. All indicators show the next fiscal year of 2012 will need undivided attention!

'A speech by any sitting President should not be censored'

COMMENTARY

JACKIE AND DOUG FITTS

Why was it so difficult to understand the policy guidelines that delineate which types of content merit invitation to a parental opt out?

As parents of a Cohasset High School student, did we correctly hear the high school's robo-call of the necessity of a note for students allowing them to "opt in" to view President Obama's speech to U.S. students, or "opt out" to be sheltered from his words? We listened twice to the call, and are quite sure the message was the necessary permission in order to hear the speech.

I attended the 9/15 School Committee meeting to clarify what I heard. However, I still don't know if we understood the call. Why does President Obama's message once again fell into the "better warn the parents" category? Why was it so difficult to understand the policy guidelines that delineate which types of content merit invitation to a parental opt out?

At the meeting, this issue was overtaken by a School Committee member's put down of a parent who came to speak her mind, and an even more vehement put-down of the current chair by an ex-School Committee member, voted off the committee last year. This individual burst in at meeting's end to lecture the dangers of allowing public input at all.

The dysfunction continued after an articulately read and impassioned letter from a parent expressing the frustration of many people over the speech issue recurring, and criticizing the lack of leadership responsible for it. This same School Committee member responded by not only telling the parent that the issue was unimportant — so unimportant compared, for example, to a possible upcoming budget crisis, or the Boston Magazine rating of our schools — but also labeled her as uncivil, disrespectful, and destructive, adding angrily that she and her input would prevent good candidates from applying for the upcoming superintendent position.

Another member requested the chair in the future have public comment submitted prior to the meeting for approval before it could be read in public.

Based on the precedent the committee has twice let be set with the President's speech, they are likely to be faced with demands for early-warning opt-outs of other content parents don't want their kids to hear. I hope they're better prepared when a parent arrives, for instance, to say "You offered an opt out to the President's speech, we want to opt out of X." (Name X! evolution, religion, health ed topics, etc.) The committee should direct the administration about the type of content for which they will invite opt/outs, and the type that the school will plainly stand behind.

A speech by any sitting President should not be censored.

I'm thankful that new school committee member Linda Snowdale addressed the parent's message by validating her feelings, acknowledging the confusion, and apologizing that it wasn't better handled. That's the kind of leadership we hopefully will have more of after the next election. There are many superintendent candidates trained in collaborative leadership who would be comfortable with a community where parents, many of whom could send their children to private schools send their children to Cohasset Middle/High School, and care enough about the school to get involved.

Until then — especially if the committee stifles public input — why attend School Committee meetings at all?

Too much confusion, and not enough clarity

COMMENTARY

HOWIE ALTHOLZ

Parents, who turn out to express concerns about their children's education, should not be relentlessly challenged, debated and harassed over every point they make.

Why is Barack Obama's back to school speech about hard work, responsibility still making news in Cohasset? The overflow crowd of students who lined up to hear it lays bare last year's myth of the need to protect kids from it. Once again a mess, with opt ins, opt outs… kids having to leave/makeup class. The School Committee recently took it up with outgoing Superintendent Walsh who claimed to know nothing about it… laying all confusion at Principal Antolini's feet.

One parent who attended, Jodi Tolman was subjected to despicable treatment by School Committee member Slanetz and Superintendent Walsh. I viewed the meeting on TV and found nothing objectionable, in substance or tone, nor inaccurate, by Ms. Tolman. The real disrespect was shown by Mr. Slanetz and Ms. Walsh.

Ms. Tolman's view on the soon-to-be former Superintendent, is widely held in the community, and has even been expressed by a significant part of the school staff itself. Moreover it was clearly borne out by the results of last year's School Committee election, where finding a new Superintendent was a centerpiece of all the winning candidates campaigns.

Thanks to the hard work of teachers in a difficult and demoralized environment, our school statistics hold their own among comparable communities. And we should be grateful. But this administration's tactic of stuffing the schools with overpaid, disengaged bureaucrats, who could care less about the community or students — while teachers, paraprofessionals, aids and other front line workers get short shrift — is no path to anything good.

Parents, who turn out to express concerns about their children's education, should not be relentlessly challenged, debated and harassed over every point they make. Mr. Slanetz's history of this behavior is disrespectful to the community, the Committee itself, and the Chair, with his continual disregard of requests to end discussion.

Committee member Shubert's suggestion that the Committee pre-screen potential public comments, is absurd. That comes close to the concept of Prior Restraint, and when practiced by public officials, has continually been held unconstitutional. Again, that sort of exclusionary thinking and process were overwhelmingly shown the door at the polls last year.

While there may be no absolute requirement for public comment time, there is no prohibition against it... it is within the discretion of the Committee, to be managed by the Chair. Most committees respect the wisdom of public comments for good reasons: Citizen comment and criticism is a corner stone of democracy; it allows citizens an outlet to share concerns; and, you just might learn something.

Despite Ms. Walsh's display of (self) righteous indignation at getting called on the carpet by a concerned mother, and her entreaties about 'respect', one should recall only a few months ago, when essentially her entire staff turned out to tell the community that her administration was sorely lacking in that very area, as well as collaboration, communication and numerous other important values.

Ms. Walsh was given an opportunity to go out with dignity, instead it ended in controversy and conflict, with the town subjected to the 'almost resignation', on the eve of her performance review... then a retraction, kind of... finally forcing the School Committee to send her packing by declining to renew her contract.

Ms Tolman's suggestion to consider an early separation is not unusual. In the business world when an employee is asked not to return, particularly when there is acrimony, they often do leave early, or subject to close oversight. Remember, this is the most expensive public employee contract in town. Negotiating an early end to a contract which has been non-renewed, also has the added benefit to include, 'a release of claims' against the town, so as to protect Cohasset from the possibility of some future expensive lawsuit by a, 'suddenly unhappy' former employee.

As to Alfred's point about attracting good candidates, there are plenty of candidates chomping at bit for this plum job. Candidates with true commitment and integrity appreciate an engaged community with the backbone to stand up for teachers, and kids... who reject authoritarian leadership... and with the support of at least 3 out of 5 on the School Committee members, that's a job with seeking.

Since the meeting veered off course, there were never answers to the initial questions as to how the Superintendent could be so disengaged in this process despite communications from the State and the subject being raised in advance at the School Committee meeting? How could she claim not to know about the 'opt out', when it was on the High School website, and in the connect-ed message, etc.? How there could be no coordination or communication about this event especially in light of last year's experience, and why did Mr. Antolini do what he did, once again applying this 'special standard of review', opt-ins, opt outs, only to presentations by President Barack Obama.

In the United Sates, we do relish our free speech, even up to and including burning the American flag... you'd think one should be able to criticize a local superintendent of schools. Verbally abusing the mother of local school children is no way to defend the actions or inaction of a public official.

ELECTION 2010

Are you under taxed?

By Tim Finnerty
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Beacon Hill has raised our taxes 8 times in 4 years. Unfortunately, they have forgotten that every tax increase causes the loss of thousands of jobs. The 25 percent increase in the sales tax cost our friends and neighbors an estimated 15,000 jobs. Current tax policy has created a high tax state with high unemployment. It is time for a change.

We can recover thousands of lost jobs by returning the sales tax to 5 percent. New Hampshire has a 0 percent sales tax and a 5.8 percent unemployment rate. Massachusetts has 6.25 percent sales tax and a 9 percent unemployment rate. Which would you prefer? Isn't it better to collect income tax revenue from new jobs than to collect higher sales taxes from our unemployed neighbors?

Ten years ago the people of Massachusetts voted to reduce the income tax to 5 percent. The state legislature ignored the vote. Instead of cutting taxes and spending the legislature increased taxes and spending. High unemployment, high taxes and enormous debt are not the elements of a winning formula for economic growth. This year we have a choice. We can continue to follow the policies that have caused businesses in our area to close or move out of state, or we can vote for new leaders who will respect the voice of the people and create new jobs.

Republican Bill Farretta announced his candidacy for Norfolk County Sheriff.

Farretta running for Norfolk Co. Sheriff

Longtime Weymouth resident and Republican Bill Farretta announced his candidacy for Norfolk County Sheriff. For the last 21-years Bill has been a Correctional Officer at the Norfolk County Jail. Bill also served in the U.S. Army and Army National Guard where he received an Honorable Discharge.

"I am a Law Enforcement Professional, not a Politician" Farretta explained. "I know what works and what doesn't work at the jail and can make the necessary changes to ensure that Norfolk County families have the safest, secure and cost-efficient jail."

Farretta supports the House bill to have inmates pay $5 a day to defray their cost for incarceration.

Farretta has campaigned throughout Norfolk County, which has 28 towns and cities. Farretta recently attended and was a sponsor of Cohasset Day and the Cohasset Republican Town Committee Picnic. "We are campaigning hard in every town to earn everybody's vote. It was great to meet so many voters and make new friends in Cohasset." Farretta said.

The Farretta campaign can be found on Facebook or at www.FarrettaforSheriff.com or call 781-335-3546 for more information.

The End of Summer Picnic was graciously hosted by Michele and Michael Hubley and was enjoyed by all. Straw cowboy hats were handed out to those who came bareheaded. We were entertained by Mabel Biagini and her accordion. She and I graduated from Quincy High, and we belted out a rendition of our school football fight song. A long table was set up along the center of the Hubley's beautiful barn, and we were treated to a delicious meal of chicken, sliders, pigs in blankets and cole slaw, plus baked beans. There were cupcakes for dessert and would you believe, s'mores? Those who wished could make their own. It reminded me of Girl Scout days.

There were two contests. One was a prize for guessing the weight of a huge 125-pound pumpkin raised in Mike's garden. Shirley DeAngelis was the lucky winner. Peter Tolman won the horse-drop contest. It was a great day and quite a change from the usual picnics at the harbor.

Another week, another Border War

Skippers secure Harbor(men), prepare for Sailors

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset football team likes defending its border so to speak.

The Skippers have had good success in winning games against the towns that border Cohasset. A year ago they downed both Hingham and Scituate, but lost to Hull on Thanksgiving Day.

They would like to make it a clean sweep this year and got off to a good start with a 43-21 win over Hingham.

The next "border" test will be on Friday against Scituate, which won its first game of the season with a 28-14 win over Plymouth South. Wes Hawkins ran for two touchdowns and Tyler Park threw for one for Scituate in the win.

The Skippers would love to get off to the same start that they got off to against Hingham. The Harbormen turned the ball over on their first two possessions. It gave Cohasset a pair of short fields to work with and they took advantage of it in jumping out to a 15-0 lead and rolling from there.

"There was a lot of build for this game," said Cohasset coach Peter Afanasiw. "The kids take this game seriously. It is meaningless in the big picture. It is a border war like we have with Scituate and Hull. To get off to that kind of start takes the pressure off. It really helped to loosen us up."

"We did not play very well," said Hingham coach Paul

During the fourth quarter of the Cohasset football team's overwhelming victory against Hingham on Friday, the stadium's attention turned to the parking lot as a police siren blared and an announcement was made that the field hockey team was headed into the parking lot with an escort after beating Harwich on the road 1-0.

"That was Beth Gilman," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "The seniors were her first team that she coached (at the youth level). She's been wishing for us to beat Harwich. Ron (Athletic director Ron Ford) said it was the first time we've beaten them. When Beth found out she called the police. They met us at the Scituate line. It was nice to come in at a football game. The girls deserved it. It was fun."

Olivia Murphy scored Cohasset's goal at Harwich with an assist from Kelsey Erler.

Cohasset wasn't finished with the winning, though.

Tuesday night they extended their season-opening win streak to six with a 3-0 win over Mashpee.

Kayla Orner scored the game's first goal with help from Natalie Dignam and Amber Silvia added the second with an assist from Caitlin DeAngelis.

BOYS SOCCER

Defense rocks

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

On the way to a 4-0-1 start, it's been the defense that's made the big plays all season on both sides.

"I was a defender when I played, so I know that it begins and ends with defense," Willis said. "The three guys I have back there have been having terrific seasons. Travers Craven is the anchor in the middle. He is the man. He's been playing great. I have a freshman, Joe Buckley, playing and he's probably the biggest kid on the team. Normally I'd be worried about playing a freshman, but Joe has been solid. Travers and Sam (goalie Sam Richardson) have really helped him out. They communicate well. John McGoldrick has also been outstanding. He set up the game-winner against Mashpee (Wednesday afternoon, a 2-1 Cohasset win). He brought the defense up 25 yards, the slid a perfect pass to Anders Goetz. Anders scored."

Goetz's goal came with about eight minutes left to play, not long after Mashpee tied the game 1-1.

While Cohasset is off to a great start, the team isn't planning to rest on early laurels.

"The girls are excited," Giuliano said. "They're cautiously optimistic. We're just going to work hard, stay within ourselves and do our best. We're having a great time and taking things one game at a time."

What makes this so much fun for the team is the fact that just a few years back, Cohasset was a two-win team with an up-and-coming JV and youth program behind it.

Those groups have been paying dividends and the team's senior captains have done a great job meshing everyone together as a team.

Guiliano said her squad has a tough road ahead.

"There's always room for improvement," she said. "You always want to work for that. Right now nobody is exactly sure what's in the league. We hadn't seen Mashpee, so we went in blind. We couldn't even find their record (editor's note – we couldn't either). It's a little harder to prep the girls like that, or it can be easier to concentrate on your own game."

Cohasset's game against Hull scheduled for yesterday was postponed to Wednesday, which gives the girls a tough week ahead with games at East Bridgewater (Tuesday), at Hull (Wednesday) and a home game against Norwell on Friday.

"East Bridgewater is a formidable opponent," Guiliano said. "As is Norwell. We know Hull is improving as well. They recently tied a really good team."

"The league title is an obvious goal," Guiliano said. "But our other goal is to make it to post season play. We need to have at least a .500 record. We've played one third of the season and we have 12 points. We need eight more to accomplish that goal. There's a long way to go, anything can happen. We just need to go one game at a time and have fun."

first goal, and is tied for the team lead in points.

Through five games, Richardson has only allowed two goals, and has made game-saving stops against East Bridgewater and Hull.

Cohasset beat East Bridgewater 1-0 on Monday.

The Skippers scored their only goal on a header by Jonah Adkins.

"We got a great goal from Jonah," Willis said. "We did well to get the win there. East Bridgewater is a really tough place to play."

Like Cohasset's other coaches who are off to strong starts, Willis is cautiously optimistic.

"We've only played five games," he said. "We have 13 more. We're happy where we are, except that frustrating tie against Norwell. We know we have to get better. If we keep playing close games like these, sooner or later it will bite us."

Cohasset has a challenging schedule ahead with a home game against Abington today, a non-league battle at Scituate on Monday, at Norwell on Wednesday and at Rockland on Friday.

Leafs not falling

Men's South Coast Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The Maple Leafs have been the talk of the Men's South Coast Hockey League in the early part of the season.

The Leafs, who went undefeated in winning the Winter 2010 session have not lost since they were in the Fall 2009 championship game. They ran their undefeated streak to 20 over the past couple of seasons as Mike Bartlett of Pembroke scored three times, twice in the third period in their 4-2 win over the Black Hawks in Classics Div. game.

Hank Mosca of Pembroke and Vin Joyce both scored for the Black Hawks in the second period to tie the game, 2-2.

In another Classics Div. game, Marshfield's Glen Harnisch had a goal and an assist in the Canadiens' 4-2 win over the Rangers.

Kirk Souza, Tom Lema and Tim McCrystal both of Marshfield scored a goal each for the Canadiens.

Dan Ryan of Hanover and Marshfield's Joe Craig scored the goals for the Rangers.

Kevin Barnard and John Guilderson scored 12 seconds apart in the final seven minutes as the Red Wings pulled out a 4-1 Classics Div. victory over the Bruins. Mark Tedeschi of Hingham and Ron DiCecca of Marshfield added the other goals for the Red Wings.

Hanover's Peter Fallon scored the goal for the Bruins.

Kevin Coyne of Marshfield scored two goals and assisted on another, while Joe Murray of Norwell had a goal and an assist to lead the Stingers to a 3-0 Legends Div. win. Pembroke's Mark Frano posted the shutout.

Duxbury's Brian Murphy scored two goals, Norwell's James Ward, Tony Creonte, Dennis Yates and Ray Degaust scored a goal each as the Toros rolled to a 6-2 win over the Sharks in a Legends Div. matchup.

In the other Legends Div. game, Mike Ryan scored two goals and assisted on another as the Fighting Saints scored six straight goals for a 7-2 win over the Crusaders.

Todd Roach, Bill Spillane, Tom Murphy, Jon Graham and Jim McNeil also scored for the Fighting Saints, while Steve O'Mara and Mike Simon scored for the Crusaders.

Youth field hockey teams garner victories

Despite a disappointing loss to Dover during the first game of the season, the 7th and 8th grade Cohasset field hockey teams now have two wins under their belts.

On Wednesday, the 8th grade team traveled to Scituate to take on the Sailors' 9th grade team. The girls played with passion and determination and came out on top with a score of 3-0.

The three goals were scored by Caty Gilman, Kristin Timothy and Jenna O'Brien, respectively.

On Thursday, a determined 7th grade team fought for the win against a tough Franklin team, and managed to succeed with a score of 2-0.

The goals were scored by Julia Stanganelli and Corey Golden.

Killinger. "They took advantage of every mistake that we made. They are a good team and they are going to do very well."

The Skippers proved that they have some weapons to do well in the highly competitive South Shore League.

They have the balance offensively to come at you with the running of Thomas Flibotte and the passing of Jeff Cavanaro. The two had a hand in Cohasset's first five touchdowns in the game.

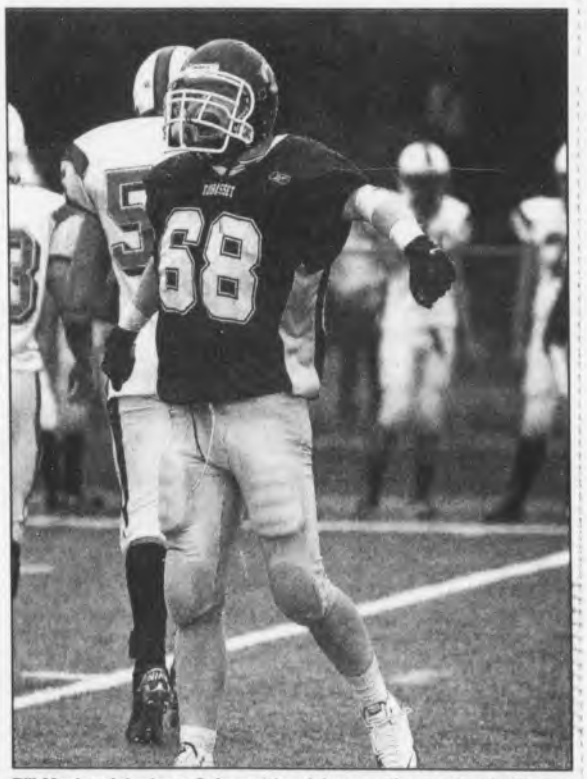
Flibotte provided the running attack with 16 carries for 127 yard, while Cavanaro threw three touchdown passes, two in the first quarter and had two short second quarter touchdown runs as the Skippers built a 29-0 halftime lead and pushed it up to 43-7 after three quarters.

Cavanro threw two touchdown passes to Jack Carrier and one to Robbie Mahoney in the first three quarters. Carrier's first touchdown catch was long the backline of the end zone on Cohasset's first possession and it came after Hingham had accepted a holding penalty on third down that pushed the Skippers back to the Harbormen 16.

"I saw Thomas break dozen of tackles," said Afanisaw. "He is an All-american lacrosse player, but he has a bright future as a football player if he wants to go that route. He has done a great job, people thought we might lack a little bit with out Dana (Valentine), but we knew what we had coming back. He is fast runner, but he has to learn not to run as upright. If he wants to survive 10 games or more, he has to lower the shoulder pads a little bit."

"Jeff has matured in each year that we have seen him. He is limiting the mistakes every game. Jeff puts a lot of pressure in the way that he sprints out and with his speed in how he gets to the edge. We got some kids that can put some pressure on defensive backs they have got good hands and run good routes and they are very secure with the ball when they do get it."

The defense was rebuilt, but has been tough in the first two games.



They were able to come up two quick turnovers in the first quarters that led to scores and had one of their own in the third quarter. Justin Yeager came in untouched and sacked Hingham quarterback Harry Rein and knocked the ball loose. Bill Mack picked up the ball and scooted 18 yards into the end zone for the final Cohasset touchdown of the game.

"Our biggest question coming in were going to be our offensive and defensive lines," said Afanisaw. "We had two returning on offense and one on defense. The one (Sean McKenna) we had on defense we moved to linebacker. It was a big question, but with system that we employ that the line goes one way. It allows them to get that much more attention in practice and perfect what they need to do."

"We changed up our scheme as well, we went from a five-man front to a four-man front to take the pressure off of them."

Hingham was able to move the ball into Cohasset territory once in the first half. They reached as far as the Skippers 21, but Kyle Livingstone came up with a 10 yard quarterback on four down to stop the Harbormen possession.

The Skippers appear that they have a lot of pieces of the game to throw at Scituate in another chapter of the border war for Cohasset.

Bill Mack celebrates a Cohasset touchdown as time expires in the first half. Mack later scored his own after recovering a fumble late in the game.

Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings Week Two

In the second week of action, teams are settling in and starting to jump into league play. This makes it a little more interesting. Some of the results are deceiving as each league has its share of weak teams. So, a 6-0 win over a bottom of the table team doesn't exactly mean all that much. For the boys in week two, the same teams remain in the top six, but only two teams retain their week one ranking. For the second week in a row on the girls' side, we have a new team breaking the top six. Also, one team jumps a spot, while another falls off the chart. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Sept. 19.

BOYS

1. Marshfield – The Rams are on a roll to start the season with back-to-back commanding victories last week (5-1 over Dennis-Yarmouth and 3-0 over Plymouth North), both against teams that always play Marshfield tough.

2. Hingham – The Harbormen drop a spot despite drawing with No. 10 Sandwich. Had Marshfield not continued its torrid streak, Hingham would've retained the number one ranking for the second week in a row and third overall (including preseason).

3. Hanover – With two shutouts to end the week, coupled with a 4-1 win over Middleboro, the Indians remain one of the teams to beat in the Patriot League.

4. Silver Lake – No team wants to come out of a game with a tie, but when you pull even with Duxbury and Hingham, those are two huge points. The Lakers also dropped the hammer on North Quincy in a 5-0 win. Their performance this week pushed them up to their highest-ever Inside the 6 ranking and bumped Norwell down one position.

5. Norwell – The Clippers remained unbeaten, picking up a 2-0 win over Mashpee and tying Cohasset, 1-1. They fall this week by virtue of Silver Lake's sudden rise.

6. Cohasset – A win over Hull was expected, and the Skippers blanked the Pirates, 4-0. Their most impressive performance last week came in a 1-1 tie against Norwell.

Week one rankings: 1. Hingham, 2. Marshfield, 3. Hanover, 4. Norwell, 5. Silver Lake, 6. Cohasset

GIRLS

1. Duxbury – The Lady Dragons went two up against Silver Lake and held that lead to come out with a 2-0 victory to start the week. Four days later, the girls met the best team in the state, Whitman-Hanson, and despite the 1-0 loss, played their best soccer of the year.

2. Plymouth South – This year is going as planned for the Lady Panthers, who remained unbeaten after coming away with a 1-1 draw against Sandwich and a 3-0 victory over Nauset.

3. Norwell – The Lady Clippers are still looking to bounce Plymouth South out of that number two spot. In week two, they certainly proved they're a goal-scoring machine, stringing together two 7-1 wins.

4. Marshfield – Keeping the top four intact for the second straight week, the Lady Rams claimed this spot once again after a decisive 6-0 victory over Dennis-Yarmouth and a 2-1 win over Plymouth North.

5. Weymouth – The Lady Wildcats leap one position this week. They couldn't have asked for better results either. The girls beat No. 14 Dedham, 2-0, and shut out Newton North, 1-0.

6. Pembroke – Welcome the Lady Titans to the Inside the 6 rankings for the first time this season. This team has its eyes on the Patriot League title, and it made a strong case for it last week after a 4-0 win over Quincy and a 2-1 win over Hanover.

Week one rankings: 1. Duxbury, 2. Plymouth South, 3. Norwell, 4. Marshfield, 5. Braintree, 6. Weymouth

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, goals scored, and goals conceded. This preseason list is based on a combination of last year's finish, how the key losses will affect each team, and the potential impact the returning players may have on the field. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@cnc.com.

This Week's High 5 (Week 4):

Jason Angell (Duxbury) How improved is this kid? After winning the Martha's Vineyard Invitational Varsity race in 16:03, this article assumed a typo and reported star Jonathon McKinley the winner instead. Apologies to Angell, and count me among the true believers now. His 16:23 time on Hingham's 5K course gives him two wins in less than a week, and, more importantly, helped secure a 24-31 victory over their Patriot League rivals in the process. Duxbury can't let up though, as MSTCA #1 ranked Pembroke looms on the horizon on Tuesday.

Nolan Parsley (Weymouth) How's this for a first cross country race? Knowing a 1-2 finish would be too much to overcome, Parsley stayed on the heels of one of the favorites to win an All State title, Steve Sollowin, in defeating a strong Walpole squad at Braintree. Parsley traversed the 3-mile BHS course in 16:01, putting him in line for a top 5 Bay State Conference finish later in the season. All of this from a former soccer player looking to stay in shape for the upcoming track seasons.

Heather Connick (Pembroke) After a winter and spring season riddled with injuries, Connick proved she's back in contention for a DII All State individual win with an easy win at home in 20:11 over the tough, hilly 2.96 mile course. Connick led the team to a sweep over Randolph and Scituate, although a wrong turn from Scituate's Katie Sheehan contributed to the lopsided score.

Sarah Hastings (Braintree) The sophomore had a strong week, leading Braintree in a Saturday meet with Stoughton, and then again as their top finisher in a league tri-meet with Weymouth and Walpole. 20:52 for 3 miles this early in the season makes Hastings the Wamps best harrier since Erynn Sweeney, who graduated in 2008 and is competing at Assumption now.

Lauren Bittrich (Duxbury) Although it wasn't enough to overcome a tough Hingham team, Bittrich emerged as one of the region's best female harriers with a dominant individual win over the Harborwomen. Bittrich's time of 20:14 over the 5K course is eye-opening for a first race of the season, and she is another in a long-line of local girls poised for breakout seasons.

Bonus: Joel Hubbard & Kevin Thomas (Marshfield)- Both have already graced these pages, but I'd be remiss not to make mention of the fact that these two stallions shattered Max Darrah's (DY '10) record at their 2.9 mile home course in 15:05 each. This might just be the state's best 1-2 punch.

Meet to Watch (Week 4):

Duxbury/ Silver Lake/ Middleboro at Pembroke (Tuesday, September 21)- Although when most CNC papers go to press this will have already happened, it didn't seem like much of a meet on either side until Duxbury's strong showing over Hingham, demonstrating a seemingly impenetrable top 3 in Angell, McKinley, and Ben Bray. Pembroke would still seem a heavy favorite, with seniors Ryan Kelly and Brendan Adams and junior JoJo Vercollone and Wes Gallagher too much to handle. But Greg Zopatti's Pembroke teams are meticulously late-breakers with only November on their minds, so an upset is not impossible.

SCHOOLS

Welcome back, students and faculty!

LIFE AT CHS

NATALIE DIGNAM

Last week students were also able to view Presidents Obama's "Back to School" speech, although many agreed that it was their decision as to whether or not they wanted to see the speech and parental consent was unnecessary.

Welcome back CHS! And welcome back class of 2011! Summer was too short, as always, and now were back walking those familiar halls. The first few weeks of school have been hectic with a noticeable absence of teachers and schedule issues. Although most problems have been sorted out, a few biology students spent the first week discussing "Lord of the Flies" instead of mitosis.

In any case, CHS welcomes all our new staff, including Mrs. Raymond, who teaches the extremely popular Latin I course. Other additions include Ms. Gerrish, teaching biology, Mrs. Demas, teaching English, and Mrs. Humphrey, teaching AP calculus.

While some students are still unsatisfied with their academic schedules, most can agree that the new break after block 1 is change for the worse. Although the change was made to prevent students from becoming hungry in the morning, both students and teachers agree that the old break better suits this purpose.

In other news, volunteers are needed for the annual "Discover the Woods Day" at Holly Hill Farm on Oct. 3rd. Contact Mr. Buckley if you are interested in helping or need some community service hours for NHS (juniors!). Also, the student council is looking for ideas for spirit week and homecoming, so drop your suggestions in the box at lunch.

Last week students were also able to view Presidents Obama's "Back to School" speech, although many agreed that it was their decision as to whether or not they wanted to see the speech and parental consent was unnecessary. However, some thought that the speech served no practical purpose, merely taking up class time. Still, the "Back to School" speech brings motivation to students and, hopefully, helps them recognize that they are part of a larger world in which they have the ability to make a difference.

And finally, the musical this year will be… The Wiz! Students are unsure of how they will pull of this one, their main concern being the diverse nature of the play, but the show always comes together in the end and the previous musical, West Side Story, faced similar problems and was an outstanding success.

Once again, welcome back CHS and welcome back seniors!

Natalie Dignam is a senior at Cohasset High. Her column, Life at CHS, runs weekly during the school year.

CHS students receive AP Scholar Awards

Forty-one students at Cohasset High School last year have earned AP Scholar Awards in recognition of their exceptional achievement on AP Exams.

The College Board's Advanced Placement Program provides willing and academically prepared students with the opportunity to take rigorous college-level courses while still in high school, and to earn college credit, advanced placement, or both for successful performance on the AP Exams. About 18 percent of the 1.8 million students worldwide who took AP Exams performed at a sufficiently high level to also earn an AP Scholar Award.

At Cohasset High School, 10 students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award by earning an average score of at least 3.5 on all AP Exams taken, and scores of 3 or higher on five or more of these exams. These students are Melissa Campedelli, Paige Collins, Christine Coner, Elizabeth Crawford, Tyler Durant, Cameron Lucitt, Terrence MacCormack, Ian Porter, Megan Richardson and Dominique Rioux.

Twelve students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning an average score of at least 3.25 on all AP Exams taken, and scores of 3 or higher on four or more of these exams. These students are Jamie Canavan, William Choi, Margaux Donze, Isabelle Franklin, Samuel Green, Christopher Hayes, Ashley Howard, Austin Meyers, Jay Michael Monaco, Lucy Noble, Graham Stevenson and Emily Toomey.

Nineteen students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Exams with scores of 3 or higher. The AP Scholars are Madeline Altholtz, Emily Bertovich, Logan Breslow, Hannah Burgess, Andrew Burnett, Meaghan Costello, William Craven, Natalie Dignam, James Earle, Andrew Fewsmith, Michael Filby, Rachel Fredey, Meredith Kelly, Jennifer Magruder, Charlotte Malone, Sarah Mavilia, Kevin O'Connell, Johanna Regan and William Wise.

Through more than 30 different college-level courses and exams, AP provides willing and academically prepared students with the opportunity to earn college credit or advanced placement and stand out in the college admissions process. Each exam is developed by a committee of college and university faculty and AP teachers, ensuring that our exams are aligned with the same high standards expected by college faculty at some of the nation's leading liberal arts and research institutions. More than 3,800 colleges and universities annually receive AP scores. Most four-year colleges in the United States provide credit and/or advanced placement for qualifying exam scores. Research consistently shows that AP students who score a 3 or higher on AP Exams (based on a scale from 1 to 5, with 5 being the highest) typically experience greater academic success in college and have higher college graduation rates than students who do not participate in AP.

The College Board is a not-for-profit membership organization whose mission is to connect students to college success and opportunity. Founded in 1900, the College Board is composed of more than 5,700 schools, colleges, universities, and other educational organizations. Each year, the College Board serves seven million students and their parents, 23,000 high schools, and 3,800 colleges through major programs and services in college readiness, college admission, guidance, assessment, financial aid and enrollment. Among its widely recognized programs are the SAT, the PSAT/NMSQT, the Advanced Placement Program (AP), SpringBoard, and ACCUPLACER. The College Board is committed to the principles of excellence and equity, and that commitment is embodied in all of its programs, services, activities, and concerns.

SCHOOL NOTES

PSO gift and wrap fundraiser to start

The following was provided by the PSO.

The PSO is busy scheduling speakers, science demonstrations, cultural programs, and a whole host of other types of programming that will take place throughout the school year at the Joseph Osgood, Deer Hill and Middle High Schools. They are organizing special events such as Picture Day, School Open Houses, and Curriculum Coffees for each grade, Anti-Bullying programs, the Read-a-thon, Math and Science Night and many other yearly events. All of the PSO's efforts are geared toward supporting the Cohasset Public Schools' Commitment to Excellence. As the Schools continue to work towards accomplishing the goals of its current Strategic Plan, the PSO works to assist in any way called upon.

Of course, none of these programs or grants supplied by the PSO would be possible without the generous support of our community, family and friends. And so, it is time again for our Fall Fundraiser.

The PSO has a new partner for our fall Gift and Wrap Sale, Genevieve's of West Springfield. Genevieve's is part of the McLaughlin Paper Company and has a long, successful tradition participating in school fundraisers. Many items are available including trendy, colorful wraps, Stonewall Kitchen products, innovative and fun kitchen and home gifts, personalized items like key chains and pens, bulbs, gourmet chocolates, and more.

Details of the sale can be found on the School Website, www.cohassetk12.org.

We hope that our school families and our community will participate and buy from the wonderful catalogs or from the company website , www.genevieves.com. Fifty percent of all sales go to the PSO which uses 100 percent of the profits to support the Schools and fund important Capital Improvements, such as the Osgood Stem Lab, the Deer Hill Digital Projection System and the Middle High Engineering Lab (co-funded with the CEF) .

Tips on rebuilding your 401K

COURTESY PHOTO

Cohasset author and personal finance expert Paul Katzeff.

Paul Katzeff will appear at Barnes & Noble at Derby Street Shoppes at 3 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 25.

Worried about how one's 401(k) account shriveled in the 2008-2009 stock market meltdown? People can do something about it.

Cohasset author and personal finance expert Paul Katzeff will discuss strategies for beefing up a retirement account – and he will do it in plain English – when he appears at Barnes & Noble at the Derby Street Shoppes at 3 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 25.

Comeback strategies are the subject of Katzeff's newly published book, "Getting Started in Rebuilding Your 401(k) Account." This is Katzeff's third book about how to make the most of a 401(k) account, even in difficult economic times. His books avoid Wall Street jargon. Instead, they are written in an easy-to-read style.

Katzeff's latest book about rebuilding 401(k) accounts includes sections designed for people who are good at running their own portfolio. "But the bulk of the book is for people who have little if any experience with investing or with 401(k) accounts," Katzeff said.

During the market crash, many people sold all of the mutual funds in their 401(k) accounts and put the proceeds into cash. Katzeff will discuss the pros and cons of that strategy and others. His topics will include:

- Ways to rebuild your account after the market tumbles.
- How to invest during the next market decline.
- Choosing a target-date mutual fund that custom-tailors its investments to your retirement date.
- Dodging the danger of shifting from stock mutual funds to bond funds or cash.
- When to use a Roth 401(k) instead of a traditional 401(k).
- Ways for self-employed entrepreneurs to use special solo 401(k) plans.
- Deciding how much you can withdraw each year without running out of money.
- Taking advantage of most plans' equivalent of a free pay raise.

Katzeff will talk about 401(k) recovery strategies. He is also schedule to conduct a question-and-answer session and sign books.

The Cohasset author-journalist has written other books on investments and finance. He is a personal finance writer and editor for Investor's Business Daily. He is former Boston correspondent for Money magazine.

Beyond the music lesson

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Su D'Ambrosio

At South Shore Conservatory, we are always striving to make our students' experience an exceptional one. With this in mind, last spring we conducted a survey of private lesson students and families, to gather information about their experience with us. We were interested in assessing where we were doing well and where we needed to improve. We were very happy to find out that most who responded rated their experience as "very good" or "excellent".

Our next task was to try to figure out what makes the difference between a "very good" experience and an "excellent" one. What we discovered was that one of the biggest factors was whether or not the students were participating in any music activities, with us or elsewhere, beyond their lesson. Over 90 percent of the students who described their experience as excellent were coming to workshops and recitals, taking theory classes, joining chamber music or other ensembles and participating in a variety of activities at their school or church.

This comes as no surprise for many reasons. Learning to play an instrument or to sing can be one of the most complex things that we ask young people to do. Therefore, the more time you spend with your instrument each week the better you get, the better you sound and the more fun you have! In addition, where a private lesson is more of a solitary experience, participating in chamber music, large ensembles such as Bay Youth Symphony (BaYS) or Pure Treble Children's Chorus or school music programs provides young musicians a shared musical experience and helps foster friendships. My daughter Maria, when asked what she liked most about BaYS said, "BaYS is a really groovy experience that not only taps into my musical potential but enables me to build strong friendships through my music."

Students who take private lessons at the Conservatory receive more than just that one-on-one lesson. Their tuition opens the door to value added benefits such as free weekly performance workshops, monthly recitals, discounts on ensembles, all of which help students set goals and give their lessons focus and a clear outcome. Musicianship classes, which are offered at a ridiculously low rate for private students, help them understand their music on a deeper level.

In the coming week we will be starting a number of group classes designed to enhance a young musician's music experience. Saturday Stage Club offers students 10-18 musical theatre fundamentals such as monologues, and auditioning techniques. Fiddling Fun helps string students improve their technique and tone while playing fun music such as American fiddle tunes. Piano Improv, and our TEMPO Popular Performing Arts Program are great opportunities for students to stretch their skills and technique in a new direction. Jazz for Classical Musicians, a class for adult students, teaches chord progressions, basic phrasing and patterns drawn from Jazz pieces, the language of jazz and how to apply it to the student's instrument. All of these are guaranteed to contribute to a truly "excellent" experience!

For more information on these and other Conservatory programs, visit www.sscmusic.org. Assunta "Su" D'Ambrosio is the Conservatory's Director of Programs and Curriculum. Known as "Miss Su" by SSC's preschool, Pre-K and kindergarten students, she is the classroom music specialist and teaches Drum and Sing!. She lives in Plymouth with her husband, Bob, and her two daughters, Maria and Rosa.

Americana in good measure

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

Roy Harris

Classical music that's rich, warm, inspirational – and filled with American themes — will dominate the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra's Opening Night concert on Saturday, Oct. 16. Its sounds will fill the beautiful Duxbury Performing Arts Center, which in itself offers another reason to attend.

The music starts at 7:30 p.m., after the ASO's music director, Jin Kim, delivers one of his patented pre-concert talks at 7 p.m., offering thoughts about what makes this program special.

ASO's music director, Jin Kim, will deliver one of his patented pre-concert talks at 7 p.m., offering thoughts about what makes this program special.

It will certainly begin with a bang: the rousing "Roman Carnival Overture" of Hector Berlioz. Something of an aural thrill ride through the Italian capital, the piece will feature an enchanting English horn solo by the ASO's Mie Shiraishi. From then on, the South Shore's professional orchestra will settle into the realm of familiar, gorgeous Americana.

The charming "Appalachian Spring Suite" by Aaron Copland certainly captures the feel, drawing on the "Simple Gifts" Quaker theme, for one. Copland's music originally was for the dance, and the lilting strains still make audiences want to sway along. Having once met Aaron Copland – running into him on a college campus and shaking his hand – I have a special attachment to his work. But so do other ASO fans. Two years ago, the orchestra performed Copland's "Lincoln Portrait," with Anthony Everett of Cohasset, the co-host of TV's "Chronicle" program, reading a narration with Abraham Lincoln's words.

In the focus for this concert's second half will be Antonin Dvorak's lush, remarkable Symphony No. 9, "From the New World": so recognizable, with its "Going Home" theme, and yet unveiling new levels with each hearing. It's one of Dvorak's marvels. And Maestro Kim plans to "re-introduce" listeners to its wonders with a special on-stage explanatory session with ASO musicians, just before the entire orchestra performs it. Here again, Mie Shiraishi is a featured soloist.

Ever wonder just why the Czech composer titled it "From the New World?" Well, that will be part of the discussion: just another reason to make an evening of it with this Saturday, Oct. 16, concert.

But then, what you hear from Jin Kim and the ASO on Oct. 16 will only be part of the excitement. For so many musicians, ASO supporters, and a band of volunteers who help the performance flow so smoothly — a group calling itself Fanfare! — the real adventure will be the inauguration of the new, but long-awaited 2010-2011 season, full of promise, as well as great music.

The Duxbury Performing Arts Center is at 130 St. George Street. Tickets are $35 for adults and $30 for seniors, with $10 admission for those 18 and under. For more information, see the ASO website at:

www.atlanticsymphony.org

Or contact ASO Executive Director Ronald Vigue at 781-331-3600.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
OCT. 4, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A workplace change doesn't seem to have turned out quite as you'd hoped. Never mind: Just treat yourself to a healthy dollop of that Aries self-confidence, and you'll soon view things differently.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Some of the support you might have hoped for in a difficult situation might not be there. But you have the strength to rely on your own capabilities if you must. Good luck.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A disagreement with a longtime friend can be painful, but it also can be a learning lesson. Insist on a full and complete airing of views. You'll both come away the better for it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A stalled relationship can be restarted with some give and take on both sides. And while it could take more time than you expect, don't rush it. Be patient, and let it happen naturally.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An opportunity to move a long-stalled project from concept to construction might be opening up for the Big Cat. Meanwhile, be prepared to spend more time dealing with family matters.

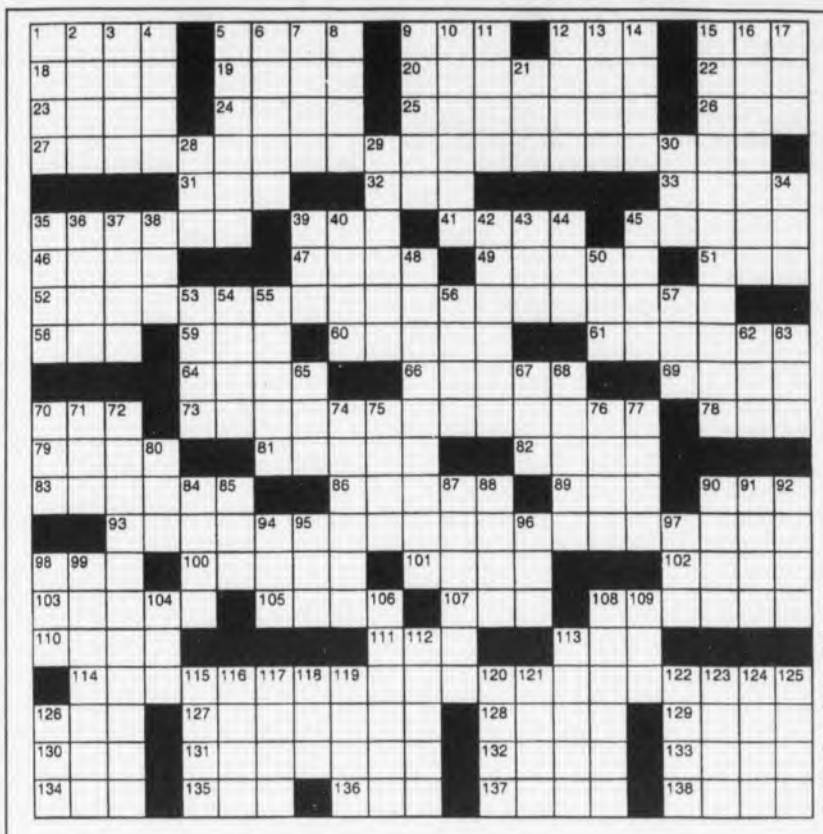
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Use your Virgo organizational skills to line up support to help you deal with a sticky workplace problem. A personal matter also might be helped with friendly intervention.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Trying to resolve a workplace problem with a longtime associate can be difficult. Consider bringing in an impartial third party to help you both reach a mutually acceptable solution.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to assess your current career situation. Consider whether you have a chance to move up where you are now, or if you should look elsewhere.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) With education being a dominant part of this week's aspect, one of the things you might want to think about is taking courses to enhance your career opportunities.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might have a problem trying to stay focused on a matter you'd rather not deal with. But the sooner you do, the sooner it will be resolved and out of the way.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An unforeseen complication creates a difficult problem. But things get resolved once you use your ability to turn negative situations into positive experiences.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The Pisces penchant for doing the right thing at the right time helps you deal with a particularly troublesome situation. Consider your best option, and act accordingly.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Second Congregational welcomes families to church school

Back to school is on every family's mind, and Second Congregational Church would like to invite South Shore families with children aged pre-K through high school to visit the church from 10 to 11 a.m., on Sundays in the coming weeks to experience first-hand why programs may be a good fit for personal and spiritual growth.

The Christian Education program at Second Congregational Church has three groups: Elementary Program for pre-K through grade five; Youth Group for grades six through nine; High School Confirmation class and Appalachia Service Project.

The Elementary Program uses crafts, songs, books, games, art and cooking to educate, and includes Old Testament and New Testament stories that help children understand how to integrate Jesus' philosophy of life into their own through sharing, service and leadership. Through activities, the students support charities such as the Cohasset Food Pantry, Cradles-to-Crayons, Rosie's Place, Lakotakidz, and Partners in Health. The Youth Group and High School programs also offer young people in the congregation ambitious outreach projects that offer a concrete way to make a difference in the world.

To learn more about Second Congregational Church's Sunday School and Youth programs, contact Lisa Cooper at scc@2ndcc.org.

Movie review

Ben Affleck goes to 'Town'

Film Review
AL ALEXANDER

The Town (A-)

As they'd say in Boston, "The Town" is wicked pissah. Easily one of the best films of the year, it succeeds in its quest to appeal to everyone from townies to "toonies" in telling a familiar cops-and-robbers tale in remarkably inventive ways.

What you take from it, though, is a new appreciation for Ben Affleck's dexterity as a filmmaker and actor. He lifts both facets of his career to unprecedented levels of excellence in adapting Canton novelist Chuck Hogan's "Prince of Thieves" into a thoroughly engrossing yarn, full of intense action, great acting and vibrant characters.

Above all, it's a twofold romance between a man and woman, and a man and the city he grew up in. Affleck is at the center of both, most obviously as the handsome, charismatic bank robber, Doug MacRay, who — darn the luck — falls for the one woman who could land him and his crew in the same federal penitentiary as his bitter, angry father (Chris Cooper, in the year's most riveting cameo). But it's Affleck's love for the Hub, and its many landmarks and traditions, that sets the heart racing.

Like his scripts for "Gone Baby Gone" and "Good Will Hunting," Affleck takes you to the grittiest, most dangerous parts of the city, where arguments are settled with fists and guns, and suckers never get an even break.

Affleck and director of photography Robert Elswit ("There Will Be Blood") paint a robust portrait of a city whose many pleasures and faults can be encapsulated in one of its most blue-collar neighborhoods, Charlestown.

According to the opening titles, the densely populated square mile surrounding the Bunker Hill Monument is home to more bank robberies per capita than anywhere in the nation.

That's where Doug and his gang cleverly carry out a handful of daring heists, with Jon Hamm and Titus Welliver's doggedly determined FBI agents in hot pursuit.

But Affleck also smartly takes the time to show us the ins and outs of Charlestown's criminal culture, while deftly juxtaposing the neighborhood's physical beauty (especially the scenes along the waterfront) with its seedier underbelly, namely its notorious public housing projects.

And although the film's ending is somewhat ludicrous and the Bahston accents are hit or miss (with Jeremy Renner of "The Hurt Locker" and Blake Lively of "Gossip Girl" representing opposite ends of the "ah"-dropping spectrum), Affleck goes out of his way to inject his movie with heavy doses of realism.

That includes the seemingly implausible romance Doug strikes up with a neighborhood "toonie" (Charlestown vernacular for carpet-bagging yuppies) named Claire, who's played by the beautiful Brit Rebecca Hall.

It's easy to understand why this hardened criminal would suddenly go soft in her presence. She's everything a bank robber dreams about. But because she's the manager of the lending institution Doug and his three masked pals just knocked over, she's also his worst nightmare.

Yet he pursues her, knowing that if and when she discovers he really isn't the sand-and-gravel professional he claims to be, she could rat him out to Hamm's stern but persuasive Special Agent Frawley.

Affleck and his co-scripters, Aaron Stockard and Peter Craig, do a marvelous job of creating a romance that is as passionate as it is tenuous, as you wait nervously for the other shoe to drop. And one of the reasons it's so compelling is the strong chemistry between Affleck and Hall.

The same is true of Affleck and Renner, playing Doug's hair-triggered and dimwitted compadre in crime, Jem. You believe that they would do anything for each other, including serve time, as Jem once did after going to bat for his bud, who may - or may not - be the father of the baby popped out by Jem's younger sister, Krista, played by a tarted-up Lively.

While the story is sustained by the various relationships and the underlying themes of loyalty and legacy, it's Affleck's well-honed gift for directing action that provides the movie with its juice.

That includes three terrifically constructed robbery sequences, including an armored car heist that ends with an exciting chase that would make Peter Yates ("Bullitt") and William Friedkin ("The French Connection") jealous.

But the piece de resistance is a climactic caper involving Fenway Park, or as Pete Postlethwaite's elderly crime boss refers to it, "The Cathedral of Boston." No fair giving anything away, but suffice to say the scene, like the rest of the movie, is guaranteed to knock your Sox off.

Rated R. "The Town" contains violence, adult language, some sexuality and drug use.

Plymouth Phil's 95th season opener showcases Beethoven and Boston

Opening Night of the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra's 95th Season features a special guest performer. Ronald Lowry, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra, joins conductor Steven Karidoyanes and the Phil in the passionate Saint-Saëns Cello Concerto No. 1. The program, entitled "Timeless Pleasures," also includes Beethoven's brilliant Fourth Symphony and Boston composer Michael Gandolfi's fun, attractive and quirky homage to the new millennium, Y2K Compliant. As is the custom for Opening Night, the concert begins with the National Anthem, accompanied by a color guard from Plymouth's American Legion Post 40, led by Sergeant Philip Ryan. This celebratory event takes place in Plymouth's Memorial Hall on Saturday evening, October 2nd. The concert begins at 8 p.m. A pre-concert talk by Conductor Karidoyanes begins at 7 p.m. Tickets are now on sale. Memorial Hall is fully accessible.

Opening night of the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra's 95th season at 8 p.m. Oct. 2 at Plymouth Memorial Hall features a special guest performer Ronald Lowry, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra.

Conductor Karidoyanes says about the Beethoven symphony, "Beethoven's Fourth has all the charm and liveliness of Mozart but with the power and sizzle of Ludwig van! It's also the only Beethoven symphony I have never conducted in a public concert. I can't wait to share it with everyone!" Regarding the featured concert soloist, Karidoyanes adds, "Ron Lowry is a good friend and colleague; a real poet on the cello, too. Not only does he lead the Pops Esplanade cellos, he is also the principal cellist of the Boston Ballet Orchestra. Most likely, every concert-goer in the region has experienced his beautiful performances."

The concert is sponsored, in part, by Tech-Etch and Eye Health Services. The media sponsor is GateHouse Media New England. The 95th Season of the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra is funded in part by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

Individual ticket prices are $50, $45, $35 and $20. Senior, Youth and Group discounts are offered. $5 student "rush" tickets sold at the door one hour before performance, as available.

Advance tickets can be purchased on-line by visiting plymouthphil.org or calling the Phil office at 508-746-8008. Memorial Hall is located on 83 Court Street/Route 3A, Plymouth.

Art Center at Shipyard

Gallery, classes at second location

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A blank canvas is a painter's starting point, full of the possibility of color, life and beauty.

Like the artists they serve, the South Shore Art Center is currently working on it own blank canvas, on a very large scale. In October, they will open their first ever satellite facility in the Hingham Shipyard.

The 2,600-square-foot space in the waterfront shopping center is under going a substantial transformation over the next week and a half in time for the opening on Tuesday, Oct. 12.

"We thought this opportunity would give us a real chance to branch out into the largest neighboring community."

— Jennifer Willms, South Shore Art Center Board of Directors

What is currently a stark box with a concrete floor and unpainted walls will be converted into a space worthy of the art and creativity it will contain. The South Shore Art Center at the Shipyard will have a gallery, space for classes and workshops, and a retail component.

In the spring many local non-profits were contacted and invited to an informational meeting. The Launch at the History and hauntings

Historical Society plans Halloween fun

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Historical Society has put together two days of events that fit the description of "spirited fun" to a T.

In mid-October, the second annual Haunted Happenings event hopes to entice the ghosts, ghouls and fun-loving spirits alike to join together to support the preservation of Cohasset's history.

On Friday, Oct. 15 a prominent home on Cohasset's gold coast is opening its doors for a dinner party. Stoneleigh, a fieldstone mansion on Jerusalem Road, was built in the 1880s, boasts sweeping views of the Atlantic Ocean and is steeped with history and a reminder of a time when Cohasset was a summer playground for wealthy Bostonians (see sidebar).

Haunted Happenings continues on Saturday, Oct. 16 with an evening, hands-on ghost investigation at the Town Hall, Maritime Museum and the Capt. John Wilson House.

"This year is definitely going to be bigger. We want to make this an annual event, so every October people can expect something from the Historical Society that highlights the season and local history," said Pat Martin, who is chair of the event. "This season lends itself to haunting, which, in my opinion, is nothing more than looking back. Hauntings and history go together."

Although the stonework that dominates the home's exterior may look a little intimidating and could pass in a

Thousands put on their pink and gather for the Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk annually. This year's event steps off on Sunday, Oct. 3 at the DCR Memorial Hatch Shell in Boston.

Feet on the street to beat breast cancer

Annual Making Strides walk kicks off in Boston Sunday

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

More than 35,000 men, women and children will be pounding the pavement in Boston Sunday with a common goal of beating breast cancer.

The 18th annual Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk will kick off Sunday morning at 8 a.m. as walkers have a choice between a five-mile and two-mile course along the Charles River Esplanade in Boston.

"I'll be there that day with 35,000 of my greatest friends," said Deborah J. Cornwall, a breast cancer survivor. Cornwall, who lives in Marshfield Hills, is also on the New England board of directors of the American Cancer Society (ACS). She has been a volunteer with the ACS since 1994 – before she got breast cancer – and she is also on the national board of the ACS's Cancer Action Network.

Why we're pink

So what's with the pink newspaper today? Many may remember receiving a pink newspaper around this time last year, but if you didn't receive one or just forgot the reason, here's why.

Every GateHouse Media newspaper in Massachusetts is Painting the Town Pink today in support of the American Cancer Society and its efforts to increase awareness during October, which is Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

In this issue you will find stories about the state of research and treatment for breast cancer, as well as information about Sunday's Making Strides for Breast Cancer fundraising walk in Boston.

Pink is the "official" color for breast cancer awareness, and many of the advertisers in this edition are flying their colors in support of the cause.

We give special thanks to Charles David Salon and Spa in Hanover – our sponsor for this week's pink newspaper kicking off the Paint the Town Pink campaign.

A portion of the advertising revenue and part of the cover price of every pink newspaper sold on newsstands today will be donated by GateHouse Media to the American Cancer Society.

We will be publishing more stories throughout the month to raise awareness and tell the stories of the women and men affected by breast cancer and the survivors and their families who are working to find a cure.

If you have a breast cancer story you would like to share, please send an e-mail to gmathis@cnc.com.

Superintendent search firm chosen

Non-profit group NESDEC gets the job

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The first major step in the School Committee's search for a new superintendent has been completed.

On Monday night the committee chose an executive search consulting firm to help the town through the process of find a new leader for the school system.

The New England School Development Council (NESDEC) is a private, not-for-profit educational organization with over 300 school districts as affiliates. It aids New England school districts in planning, professional development, executive searches and research and development.

"This is the first big step in the search for a new superintendent and I think this firm is going to be a good fit," said School Committee chair Helene Lieb in a phone interview Tuesday.

On Saturday and Monday night the School Committee interviewed four different consulting firms and ultimately made the decision to go with NESDEC on Monday.

"They addressed our concerns and seemed to have a good plan in place for involving the community in the process, which is a priority for us," Lieb said. Their process includes doing focus groups and careful consideration of constituents when selecting a search committee.

"We really want to involve the community in the process — parents, students, faculty, administration, community members should all be involved," Lieb said.

Other search firms interviewed were Future Management Systems, Inc., Mass Association of School Committees and Educators' Collaborative.

Lieb said all the search firms had strong presentations, "it was hard to make that decision."

The search firm will provide candidate profiles, background and help to frame the timeline and details of the search process.

The estimate for the cost of the services is $9,100, which includes a 20 percent discount because Cohasset is an NESDEC affiliate school. The cost for advertising the position and candidate travel is not included in that price.

Cohasset Schools are familiar with NESDEC; they receive enrollment projections for the next 10 years from NESDEC each year.

The contract includes a two-year warranty on whatever superintendent candidate is chosen, meaning if the chosen superintendent leaves within two years, NESDEC will help conduct the search again.

Current Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh is leaving Cohasset in April. This past April, she announced she would not seek a contract renewal after completing this school year, and the school committee subsequently voted not to renew the contract.

The market for superintendents is competitive. Lieb said there are 60 school districts in Massachusetts looking for a superintendent.

The next step in the superintendent search process is to develop a profile of what type of candidate the community is seeking. Lieb said the School Committee would be looking for input from the community to create that profile.

"I'm looking forward to (this process). It's exciting to meet different people and learn a different aspect of the educational field," Lieb said.

The committee aims to have a new superintendent named by March 2011.

E. Bridgewater woman faces drunken driving charge

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 27-year-old East Bridgewater woman, who told police she had been at a wedding, is facing a drunken driving charge following a traffic stop at about 10:06 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 25) on East Street in Hingham just over the town line.

Police received a call from a 51-year-old Cohasset woman in a 2009 Ford Escape who was reporting that a gray 2005 GMC Envoy had crossed the centerline, struck her driver's side mirror and kept going. Police said the vehicle nearly hit hers head-on.

She reversed direction and followed the Envoy that was traveling north on North Main Street; she stayed on the phone with dispatch and reported the Envoy was all over the road and struck another vehicle. Police stopped the car just over the Hingham line and identified the operator. Based on her performance on field sobriety tests and other observations, the East Bridgewater woman was arrested and charge with operating under the influence of alcohol, leaving the scene, and marked lanes violation.

Mailbox

A caller, who was not involved in the mishap, notified police at 1:43 a.m. on Monday (Sept. 20) that there may have been a motor vehicle accident involving a mailbox. Police said a 2002 Honda SUV had backed into a mailbox on Forest Avenue. However, when police arrived, the situation was under control between the operator and homeowner, who were going to settle the matter themselves.

Summonses

• At 9:35 a.m. on Monday (Sept. 20), an officer was running radar on South Main Street by Summer Street when a 2006 Ford pickup truck passed by at a high rate of speed. The officer stopped the truck and identified the operator as a 56-year-old Scituate man. A computer check showed that his license had expired. He is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and speeding. The pickup did not have to be towed as the owner was able to contact a licensed driver who took control of the vehicle.

• At 7:02 a.m. on Saturday (Sept. 25), police stopped a 1997 Nissan Sentra, operated by a 29-year-old Abington woman, on Sohier Street for speeding. The woman, who had been in the United States for 18 months, could only produce a Brazilian license and had no Massachusetts license, police said. She is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and speeding. Her car was towed.

Illegal dumping

A 53-year-old Cohasset man who operates a local garage on South Main Street reported last Monday (Sept. 20) that someone has been dumping beer cans and household trash into his Dumpster on the weekends. He found an envelope with a name. Police contacted the 58-year-old Scituate man on the envelope and warned him to stop the illegal dumping as it is costing the garage-owner money. The Scituate man, who admitted to using the Dumpster, said it would not happen again, police said.

Warrant arrest

An officer on patrol on Hull Street recognized a 22-year-old Cohasset man, who was wanted on warrants for larceny, walking on Hull Street last Tuesday (Sept. 21) at about 11:46 a.m. Police confirmed the warrants out of Quincy District Court and Hingham and placed him under arrest.

Vandalism

An 81-year-old Cohasset man reported to police at 1:31 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 21) that someone broke the front, driver's side window of his 2007 Chevrolet Impala while he was inside a restaurant on King Street. Nothing appeared to have been stolen. Police are not sure how the window was broken and helped the man clean up the glass. The incident is under investigation.

K-9 assistance

Police called for K-9 assistance from Scituate Police following a traffic stop of a 1998 Pontiac Grand-Am, operated by a 49-year-old Marshfield man, at 2:36 p.m. on Wednesday (Sept. 22) at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Pond Street. Police could smell marijuana inside the car. After a search, a small amount of marijuana was found and the operator was issued a $100 civil citation for possession of less than one ounce of the drug.

Harassment

A 41-year-old Cohasset man was arrested for disturbing the peace, threats to commit a crime and criminal harassment after he allegedly harassed a 65-year-old woman living in the same apartment building. The woman called police about what she described as an ongoing problem with the neighbor. Police responded and spoke to the man but a few hours later, the woman called 911 to report he was banging on her door and threatening her. Dispatch could hear the man banging on the door in the background. The man was held overnight at the police station. The alleged victim sought a harassment prevention order that means the neighbor would not be allowed to contact her or bother her in any way, police said.

MV accidents

• At 10:48 a.m., on Thursday (Sept. 23), police responded to a two-car accident on Route 3A at Beechwood Street. Police said a 2001 Chevrolet Malibu, driven by a 71-year-old Cohasset man, was traveling south on 3A when he went through the red light at the intersection hitting a 2007 Saturn Ion, operated by an 84-year-old Cohasset woman, who was traveling east on Beechwood Street. The Ion had the green light, witnesses reported. The Malibu hit the Ion on the front driver's side. A third vehicle, a 2007 Chevrolet Cobalt, operated by a 36-year-old Framingham woman, was hit with a flying bumper that chipped the paint and scuffed the car.

The 72-year-old man driving the Malibu was cited for running the red light; his car was towed. The other two cars were drivable. There were no apparent injuries, police said.

• At 2:43 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 23), police responded to a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway by the entrance to Shaw's Plaza. Police said a 2001 Chrysler 300, operated by a 74-year-old Hull woman, was exiting Shaw's Plaza to head north when she tried to pull out in front of a northbound 2008 Toyota Yarvis operated by a 32-year-old Brockton man, hitting the side of the Toyota. There were no tows and no apparent injuries. The Hull woman was cited for failure to yield.

• At 5:46 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 25), police said a 2009 Honda Accord, operated by a 59-year-old Hull woman, who was headed from King Street to Forest Avenue on the green light, was hit by a 2008 Ford pickup operated by a 71-year-old Cohasset man, who was headed south on North Main Street. The Cohasset man was cited for a red light violation. The pickup was towed; there were no apparent injuries, police said.

Trespassing

Police said a local business reported last week that they believe a former employee may have been trespassing after hours as certain lights were left on and items were moved around. Nothing appears to have been taken but the business wanted to make police aware of the suspicious activity.

Final brush chipping day

Residential brush will be accepted at the DPW parking area from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 2. No trees more than 5 inches in diameter, no stumps, firewood, briars or weeds will be accepted. No contractors.

SMALL WORLD

You know when you hear something that is just a bit of a reminder of how "small" our world that seems so big really is? I found this out with this story that had been sent to me over the summer and I just found it while cleaning up my emails.

Cohasset's Whitney Jaffe, daughter of Chuck and Susan, was in Hawaii in August at the Destination Hawaii Lacrosse Camp, a camp for kids from all over the country, run by four young top-level NCAA Division I coaches. Near the end of the week in Honolulu, the campers had a game with the Hawaii Lacrosse Club. Imagine Whitney, out doing her warm-ups when one of the other players looked and noticed Whitney's Cohasset shorts and asked her if she was really from Cohasset. We know what the answer was and guess what?

The other player was Lauren Rizzotti, a former star on the girls team at Cohasset High, who went on to play four years at St. Michael's in Vermont before graduating in 2009. She's apparently been out in Hawaii for a few months and had just joined the team (and as soon as she asked, she and Whitney both realized that they knew each other ... Lauren was a counselor for Whitney's dad, Chuck at a camp he ran a few summers ago). Whitney was not sure of the score (either 9-9 or 10-9 in favor of the club team — not a surprise since those girls are all out of college), but she was pretty sure that one-third of the scoring came from Cohasset players ... she finished with 3 goals and she thought Lauren had three as well.

I guess instead of thinking about how big our world is, we should maybe look at how "big" Cohasset is and can be once we step outside of the walls that surround our town. Pretty cool story, thank you Chuck for sharing this with us.

ASP FORMS DUE

Cohasset ASP 2011 registrations are due! Please pick up forms in CMHS Office or at 2nd Congregational, St. Stephen's or First Parish Offices. Come on along!

TOP TEAMS

The Cohasset High School Athletic Department would like to invite the entire Cohasset community to an evening of honoring our spring sports State Championship Baseball and Boys Lacrosse Teams prior to kickoff of the Cohasset vs. East Bridgewater Varsity Football Game on Friday, Oct 8 at 6:45 pm Alumni Field. Come be a part of a fitting tribute to the only two teams in CHS history to win state championships on the same night last spring.

SPECIAL LADY

Here is an event that is taking place tomorrow and will be a fun, entertaining and wonderful way to spend some time in honor of a super lady that many of you know. The Shooting Stars Fundraiser is being held for Nancy (Rello) Buchanan and is a cancer benefit for her. This event is being held on Oct. 2nd at the Hilltop Athletic Club, 5 Pottle Street in Kingston.

Nancy is living in Pembroke with many Cohasset ties. Some may know her from her work at Hingham Lumber; others may know her through her housecleaning and the many fundraising efforts that she has been involved with in Cohasset (both as an amazing cook and cake master.). On the day she was diagnosed with her cancer, she was hard at work raising almost $2000 for the Cohasset American Legion Ladies Auxiliary that she is a very active member of. All in all, Nancy is a hard-working, single mom who has always given so much to so many and now could use some positive power herself.

The Bike Run, which begins at 12 noon, and is followed by an event at the hall beginning at 2 pm to closing time. Tickets are $25, which includes the bike run, meal and entertainment. Nancy has given so much of her love, friendship and cheery ways to so many and now, she really could use the help and by supporting this fundraiser, it will be a huge gift for her. The day is not just for bikers so even if you do not ride a motorcycle, the fun for you will start after the ride with a DJ, the super great band, "The Chowda Heads and the funniest lady on the South Shore, Christine Hurley. For information on the bike ride, please email Nick at Nick56r@gmail.com. If you have a donation that you would like to make in the event you cannot attend, please make your check payable to Nancy Buchanan and mail it to: Peggy Wall, 84 Forest Street, Pembroke, MA 02359, call 339-933-2620 or send an email to peggywall2@comcast.net. For all other questions or event information, email Maureen at msharrold1@aol.comor Joni at nonajoni@gmail.com

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all of your news, photos, celebration info and event details no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

Sailing club floats new building

Proposal goes before ZBA next week

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Since being chartered in 1960 the Cohasset Sailing Club has given Cohasset kids the opportunity to learn to sail.

The clubhouse, which has become a landmark on Government Island, has remained the same for decades.

Now, the Cohasset Sailing Club is looking to renovate the clubhouse and an outlying building and bring it in to the 21st century.

An update to the Sailing Club has been in the plans for several years, ever since an assessment of the building was completed that revealed the underpinnings of the clubhouse were in disrepair. As time has gone on more things have been found that need to be replaced or updated.

"It came down to we were really talking about replacing everything but the walls," said Rich Ofsthun, commodore of the Sailing Club.

That's when the club started working with Hoadley Martinez Architects, based in Cohasset Village, to design a new clubhouse.

The resulting plan is to raise the existing one-story building and create a 2-1/2-story structure increasing the gross footage of the building by more than 30 percent. The current building is 1277 square feet and the proposed building is 1785 square feet. The adjacent shed will also be expanded.

The building is owned by the sailing club, but the land it sits on is leased from the town for $1 per year.

Ofsthun said the new space would improve the classroom situation and open the possibility of using the building as a meeting space.

The clubhouse is designed to be a very open building, in the design vein of a typical New England boathouse. As such, architect Susan Hoadley said the building will be a green building and certified as a basic LEED-registered construction. It will be the first non-residential LEED construction in Cohasset, she said.

As one of the LEED components, stormwater runoff will be collected by a series of gutters and used to water the landscaping.

"This building will be rooted in New England design and that in itself is very green," Hoadley said in a phone interview.

The LEED certification was an important goal for the sailing club.

"If we're going to build something next to the ocean it only makes sense to do it in an environmentally sensitive way," Ofsthun said.

For the Cohasset Sailing Club's mission and objectives, the new building could open new possibilities for teaching and learning.

"The design is really functional and helps us complete our mission, which is to teach Cohasset children how to sail," Ofsthun said.

This past summer, the Sailing Club had its largest crop of young sailors — 265, up from 230 the prior year and up from 180 four years ago.

The Sailing Club does have a long way to go before a shovel hits the ground.

The Sailing Club is currently petitioning the Zoning Board of Appeals for a special permit to building in a flood plain and watershed protection district. The first public hearing will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 5 at 7:30p.m.

Last week, the project cleared a hurdle when the planning board voted to recommend to the zoning board approval of the special permit.

The Sailing Club will also undertake a fundraising campaign later this year to finance the renovation of the building.

Question of authority

Bear Hill tank easement reduction questioned

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"It is an impermissible abuse of position and should be a voided contract."
— Virginia Brophy

Since 1889 the Water Department has used a dirt lane off Pleasant Street to access its property on Bear Hill. Before the water tank was built in the mid-1960s, a reservoir sat on top of the hill. The access road ran diagonally located across the property at 100 Pleasant St. for decades with little fan fare.

Earlier this year that easement was altered. It was moved to another part of the property and reduced in size from 30 feet to 12 feet.

At Monday night Selectmen's meeting Cohasset resident Virginia Brophy of 16 Beechwood St. presented a case arguing the water commission had no authority to abandon a portion of that easement.

Brophy's presentation quoted from contracts, state laws, and Town Counsel opinions in an effort to make her case. Brophy, who is an attorney by trade but was acting as a private citizen, said an abandonment of an easement requires a two-thirds vote of Town Meeting.

"There's no question a relocation of the easement would not have been a problem. But, there was a reduction of more than 50 percent – that's an abandonment," Brophy said, adding the Water Commission had no authority to approve the reduction of the easement.

"It is an impermissible abuse of position and should be a voided contract," Brophy said.

Town Counsel Lou Ross of Deutsch Williams disagreed with the characterization of the altered easement as "abandonment." He said the easement was partially abandoned and the water department still had all the same rights to use a portion of the property.

The complicating factor at this point is homes have been built in close proximity to the 12-foot easement resulting in a lessened use of the easement. That's why, in part, the Water Commission is seeking permission to use a swath of town-owned land off Reservoir Road to access the water tank going forward and, more immediately, to allow large trucks to access the water tank area to erect cell antenna on the tank.

Ross said if the water commission was not aware the house would be built so close to the easement, then they could have a claim. But, with the house already built and occupied there is likely no easy solution.

Reservoir Road resident Tom Ogrodnik said the Water Commission acted "very irresponsible or nefarious" in authorizing the reduction of the easement. At the time the easement was reduced the Water Commission knew they were seeking cell providers to go on the water tank and knew large trucks would eventually be needed for regular maintenance of the water tank, Ogrodnik said.

Michael Ronzoni of 50 Reservoir Road expressed concerns about the water department's desire to move the access road to Reservoir Road. He said the pipes under that swath of town-owned land were not designed to withstand regular traffic. Ronzoni said asbestos pipes are underneath that land and could pose health risks, if damaged or damaged already.

There was little discussion regarding the presentation among the Board of Selectmen, but selectmen chair Karen Quigley indicated this would not be the last time the subject was discussed.

Timeline

July 2008: Request for Proposals (RFP) is issued seeking wireless carries interested in placing cell antennas on the Bear Hill water tank.

Nov. 2008: The Water Commission withdraws its Town Meeting article that requested an abandonment of the easement at 100 Pleasant St. where the water department has historically accessed the water tank.

May 2009: An easement relocation plan comes before the Water Commission for 100 Pleasant St.

July 2009: The Water Commission signs an easement agreement that moves and reduces the 100 Pleasant St easement from 30 feet to 12 feet.

Sept. 2009: The Water Commission seeks permission from the Board of Selectmen to move the easement from Pleasant Street to a town-owned swath of land off Reservoir Road. Concerns, especially of safety, from neighbors convince the Selectmen the proposal needs further vetting.

Dec. 2009: The Water Commission inks contract with AT&T.

June 2010: The moved easement at 100 Pleasant St. is recorded at the Registry of Deeds.

Planning Board wants site plan for field complex lights

The Cohasset Sports Complex located on the hill behind Hingham Lumber opened over the summer. The privately owned complex has two full-size turf fields, one inside and one outside. Soccer and lacrosse are intended to be the main sports to utilize the complex.

The owners of the property are currently seeking a variance from the Zoning Board of Appeals to erect the permanent light fixtures, which are not permitted under the town's zoning bylaws.

Under zoning bylaw, 45-foot light poles are allowed by right. Anything higher than 45-feet requires a variance.

The Zoning Board is slated to deliberate on the application on Tuesday, Oct. 5.

As with all zoning board applications, the Planning Board is asked to give a recommendation on the project. Last Wednesday, after a brief review of the project, the Planning Board voted unanimously not to recommend approval of the variance and believed the project needed further vetting in a site-plan review process with the Planning Board.

The sports complex project did not previously undergo a site-plan review process, during which the Planning Board reviews all aspects of the proposed structure/buildings, because there were no "structures" being added to the property.

Planning Board chairman Al Moore said now the large light poles are being proposed and he considered them structures.

"I'd like to take a shot at this as a site plan," Moore said. "I'm worried about the neighbors looking at this night after night after night."

Planning Board member Clark Brewer agreed, "this is a unique situation and it deserves to be vetted."

Two neighbors, who live on Sanctuary Pond, expressed concerns over the light pollution. Jeff Patterson said he would like to see a time limit placed on the use of the lights to ensure they weren't shining all night long. Doug Bryan said there was already light pollution in the area due to nearby commercial buildings.

"The light pollution right now is a problem and (the sports complex lights) could be the tipping point," Bryan said.

The Zoning Board has the ultimate say on the application and could refer it to the Planning Board for a site plan review.

On Thursday, Sept. 23, Friends of HOPE – an affiliate of South Shore Hospital – held a "HOPE with Style" fall fashion show at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy to raise money for programs at the hospital's cancer care center. Businesses from around the South Shore helped out, contributing clothing, jewelry and doing hair and makeup for the models, who were cancer survivors and supporters. Hanover's Lyn Evans Potpourri Designs supplied the clothing for the female models, Milton's Clothing provided the men's attire, Mark Cirone of Cohasset Jewelers supplied the jewelry for the event, and Charles David Salon and Spa in Hanover provided hair and makeup for the models. The MC for the event was Randy Price, WCVB-TV anchor. The event raised more than $15,000 for the South Shore Dana-Farber/ Brigham and Women's Cancer Center at South Shore Hospital

'Surviving cancer changes people'

Focus on living an important aspect of continuing care

By Kevin P. O'Connor
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

For survivors of breast cancer, one of the most frightening moments of the process comes after the diagnosis and the surgery.

It arrives at the end of treatment, when the doctor says the medicine is done and tells the patient to go live.

"The transition into life can be difficult," said Dr. Kenneth Miller, medical director of the Lance Armstrong Foundation with the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. "When you are first diagnosed and entering into treatment, it is a very busy time.

"But a lot of time, when people finish treatment, there is a lot of anxiety. They feel they aren't doing anything.

"There are different seasons of survivorship. This is one of them."

The Lance Armstrong Foundation is part of the Dana-Farber group. It concentrates on the care of the patients after cancer has been identified and subdued.

The foundation works on the recognition in the medical field that treating the malady is just one part of caring for a patient.

Cancer and its treatment has many immediate effect, especially breast cancer.

There is the discomfort of the surgery and the inconvenience for a patient who has to suddenly put the rest of her life on hold.

If there is radiation or chemotherapy, the patient has to deal with powerful fatigue and sometimes nausea. There are the physical changes, too, that must be dealt with. There is scarring or the loss of a breast, weight loss and noticeable changes in a patient's physical appearance.

With chemotherapy a patient must deal with the loss of hair and an intellectual fogginess that accompanies chemotherapy so frequently that it has earned its own name: chemo brain.

"Permanent survivorship has other long-term effects," Dr. Miller said. "No one leaves the experience with a sense of immortality. They feel their body let them down and it could happen again.

"Some people feel more fragile.

"The people who are long-term survivors are changed."

There are discussion groups and programs for cancer survivors who are frightened about life after cancer. But hospital personnel have learned that group activities get more attendion. So there are exercise classes, scrapbooking gatherings, book clubs and knitting circles being run out of hospitals and clinics.

"I believe these programs are successful because they bring folks together over a shared interest, activities that enhance their life," Benoit said. "The underlying common bond is that they all have this cancer experience, which does surface throughout the activity and the group becomes supportive in nature."

The Dana-Farber Institute offers a website with advice on making the transition from patient to long-term survivor. The website is dana-farber.org. It has a chapter on surviving cancer that is accessed through a link in the left hand column.

They have a survivorship toolkit that opens with eight tips for cancer survivors. The first tip is: Take charge of your health.

The site also lists questions you should ask your doctor during follow-up visits and topics that should be discussed, like trouble sleeping, irritability or sexual issues.

Several cancer survivors also appear in videos on the site to tell of the issues they faced coping with life after cancer.

Getting through treatment and moving on with life is an integral part of cancer therapy, Dr. Miller said. If people need help taking that step, the help is available.

"Surviving cancer changes people," he said. "It is good for people to recognize that."

Feet on the street to beat breast cancer

FROM STRIDES, PAGE 1

"The thing is, we're all celebrating at the walk," Cornwall said. "It's always a very upbeat event, even with the remembrance element. We're celebrating early detection, we're celebrating survivorship, and we're all celebrating the fact that we have each other to lean on."

Janet McGrail, Massachusetts vice-president for ACS initiatives, said the walk helps raise awareness to key issues surrounding breast cancer, especially the importance of early detection.

"As the official sponsor of birthdays, the ACS wants women to see the real tangible benefits of taking care of themselves," McGrail stated. "More than 2.5 million breast cancer survivors will celebrate a birthday this year thanks to early detection and improved treatment."

"We're getting passionate about promoting early detection and other education surrounding breast cancer," Cornwall added.

She said the walk also helps educate people about the latest innovations in breast cancer research, tobacco control and other issues.

"The walk also helps Legislators understand the issues from a survivor's point of view," Cornwall said. "We want people in politics to understand, because it will help us get them to vote in directions that will help cancer research."

According to ACS statistics, "An estimated 207,090 new cases of invasive breast cancer are expected to occur among women in 2010, and about 40,230 deaths are expected. In Massachusetts, an estimated 5,320 women will be newly diagnosed with breast cancer in 2010, and an estimated 780 will die of the disease. While mammography is not perfect, getting a high quality mammogram is currently the most effective way to detect cancer early because it can identify breast cancer before physical symptoms develop."

"The earlier you find it, the easier it is to treat," Cornwall said, noting that she was diagnosed with breast cancer in 2001.

"I'm fine now," she said. She said at the time she was diagnosed, she was already involved with the ACS. The Making Strides walk was founded in 1993, but it wasn't until 2006 that Cornwall started getting involved with the event.

"Since the event started in 1993, more than $60 million has been raised (nationally)," Cornwall said of the walk.

Scituate resident Elizabeth Burns has been committed to the walk for years, even before she was diagnosed with stage 3A triple negative breast cancer. And while she's been in remission for little over four years now, she thinks it's important to support ongoing research; one way to make a real impact is through the Making Strides Against Breast Cancer Walk, she said.

COURTESY PHOTO

Thousands of people gather each year for the Making Strides walk in Boston.

"I used to do the walk when I lived down in Manhattan," she said. "Then, four years ago when I was diagnosed with breast cancer, it became even more important to me."

In her first year participating in the walk, Burns raised a little more than $9,000; in her second, she raised $7,000. Her goal for this year is a comparatively modest $5,000.

She plans to walk with a group of 10 other adults and a compliment of babies and strollers.

"We're all just going to meet and walk together," Burns said. "It's a great day to walk with friends — on what will hopefully be a beautiful day — for a great cause."

Cornwall said the amount of people that show up at the walk each year is amazing. And it's not just women – there are lots of men and children walking as well.

"Men get breast cancer too, even though less than 2,000 of them in the country are affected annually," Cornwall said. "Besides that, it's not just people with breast cancer who show up for the walk. It's the caregivers, too. And people who have cared for people with cancer feel like survivors as well. A lot of caregivers take part in the walk."

Regarding why so many people bond during the walk, Cornwall said, "There's nothing like the moment you're told you have cancer. Your first reaction is that you've lost complete control of your life. People can tell you where they were, what they were wearing and what the weather was like when they were told that they had cancer. When you take people who've been through that experience and put them all together, you're talking about emotions that run very deep."

Cornwall said she will be speaking on the day of the walk about the subject of caregiving.

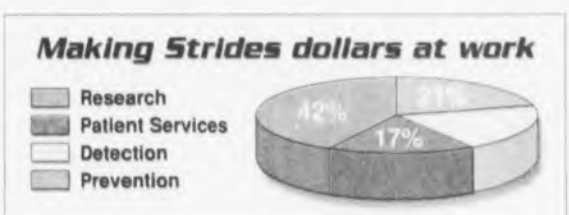
"During the event, there is an amazing feeling of solidarity with everyone there. Complete strangers are giving each other hugs, and crying on each other's shoulders. There are people everywhere wearing pink and making noise. It's truly amazing. It really affects you in the way that you know you're not alone."

Cornwall said she believes "Boston hosts the best walk in the country."

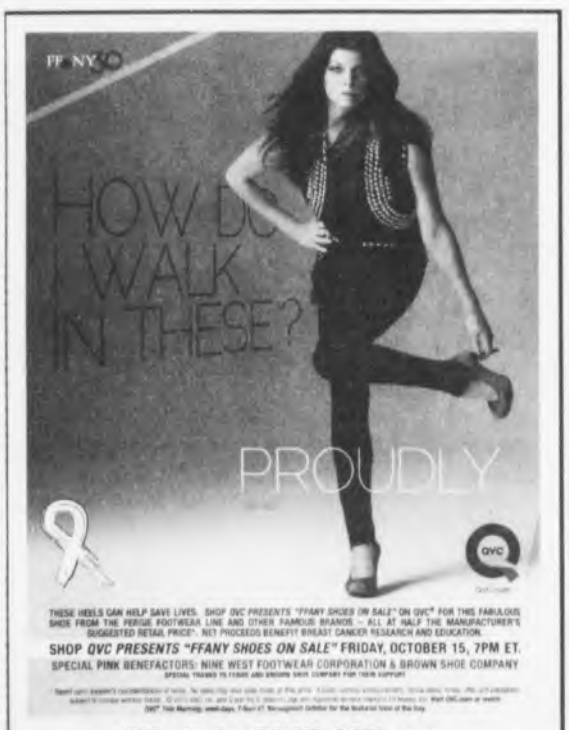
There are 22 other Making Strides walks being held throughout New England this October, including a new one on Cape Cod Oct. 17.

According to a release from the ACS, there will be more than 160 Making Strides walks held throughout the country in October.

"We (the ACS) are the largest private fund source for cancer research in the country," Cornwall said, adding that proceeds from events such as the Making Strides walk go to research, prevention, detection and patient services.



"We really appreciate everyone that takes part in the walk," said Kate McCary, a spokesperson for the ACS. "It's a great way for women to focus on breast health and early detection. And cancer doesn't go away in tough economic times, so this is a great way for people to raise money for the fight against the disease."



"And if your family hasn't been touched by cancer yet, it will be," said Cornwall. "And 75 percent of American households will eventually care for someone with cancer. We all have a stake in making sure this disease ends. Taking part in the Making Strides walk is a way to do that."

Historical Society combines history and hauntings

The Stoneleigh estate is being donated for the evening by homeowners, David and Mary Eisenhaure.

"The house really enjoys a party" according to the homeowners, Martin said.

The dinner party includes passed hors d'oeuvres, buffet dinner, dessert and beer and wine. The menu includes seasonal New England fare.

The event is designed to transport guest back to the 1880s when séances, spiritualism, mediumship and interest in the other world was widespread, Martin said. Costumes and period wear is encouraged.

In the parlor, designed to entertain small groups in an intimate setting, psychic medium Dee White Dove will offer personalized readings to guests.

Martin and a committee of decorators will transform the stone house for the festivities with seasonal decorations. Historical Society director Lynne DeGiacomo and volunteers are pulling artifacts from the collection to represent the historical time period.

"It's going to have a flavor of the past, but also a little bit spooky," Martin said.

On Saturday, those interested in exploring the historical society's museums and Town Hall in a different light are welcome to join Nightfall Paranormal on a ghost investigation.

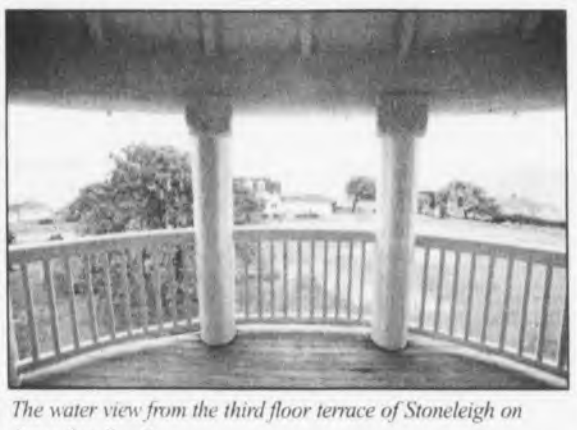
"Last year we talked about ghost investigations, but this year we're going to show people how to use the tools, and hopefully get some readings," said Martin. Ghost seekers use technology (such as infrared cameras, digital audio recording devices, video cameras, and electromagnetic field recorder) to try to capture evidence of paranormal activity.

The Cohasset Town Hall with its old jail cells in the basement was declared "haunted" by a paranormal group from Enfield, Connecticut in 2008.

A ghost story has long been associated with the Maritime Museum. Once Samuel Bates' ship chandlery on Border Street the building was suspected to be haunted by a ghost after the building was moved to its current location on Elm Street in the Village. Not long after the Maritime Museum opened to the public, its curators began to hear pacing footsteps coming from the upstairs office. During a meeting of the Historical Society downstairs in the Maritime Museum, the entire board witnessed the footsteps.

Attendees will meet and divide into small groups at 6p.m. at the Town Hall auditorium and tour all three buildings over the course of the night. Refreshments will be available.

Earlier in the day, the Elm Street museums will be open to the public (ghosts can come and go as they please) and a pumpkin carving contest will be held in the village (location to be determined).



Martin and the historical society are talking with the village merchants to find ways to work together within the event.

"There's really something for everyone this year," Martin said. "We wanted to do something that combined the spirit of the season with history. It all benefits the historical society and this organization is the heart of Cohasset."

The original Stoneleigh summer estate of 100 acres was broken up and sub-divided following World War II into what is now Linden Drive. The house is being donated for the Oct. 15 evening event by homeowners, David and Mary Eisenhaure.

About Stoneleigh

The fieldstone manor on Jerusalem Road has a rich history wrapped up in its stone and mortar. According to documents in the Historical Society's archive, the three main buildings of the estate were built in the 1880s. The estate was known as "The Pool" in the 19th century, but came to be known as "Stoneleigh" in the 20th century. The estate was built by then-owner Grenville Temple Winthrop Braman and was designed by William Ralph Emerson, a cousin of writer Ralph Waldo Emerson..

In the original estate there were several outbuildings, several of which have since been renovated and made into homes.

The estate is intricately connected to Linden Drive. The original Stoneleigh estate encompassed several buildings and 100 acres. The estate included much of what is now Linden Drive and stretched to 303 Forest Ave.

The home's stone walls are three feet thick and are made of rock found in the immediate area.

GIMME SHELTER

Neko needs someone special

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to feature Neko. Neko is a medium hair jet-black male cat. We think he may have been abused prior to coming to the shelter. He has a history of misbehaving, but after having been fostered for some months, has shed some of his bad habits. He has become quite friendly and loving but would be better off without small children. Ideally, whoever adopts him, should be someone who can "read" cat's body language. He does get along with other cats, though might do best as an only.

If you'd like to know more about him or any of our cats, call Shirl at 781-925-3380. Also check out our web site at www.hsar.org. We have a shelter filled to the brim with adoptable cats and kittens. If you're interested in low cost spay neuter, call Mary at 781-925-3121. Volunteer opportunities are available; call Nancy at 782-925-3638. Open hour are Saturday from 2 to 3 p.m. and Mondays 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. or by appointment. We're located at 50 L St. Hull.

The mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO Box 787, Hull, MA. 02045

Hingham Shipyard was opening in June and some unoccupied spaces were available for non-profit groups free of charge. The opportunity seemed like it would fit into the Art Center's mission and objectives.

"The timing was right. We just came off a year of strategic planning where we talked about how we are doing, how we can serve the community and our artists better," said Jennifer Willms, President of the South Shore Art Center Board of Directors.

One of the priorities targeted was expanding the Art Center's visibility outside of Cohasset. Although the Art Center serves communities and people from all over the South Shore, there is still a perception that because it is in Cohasset that is more Cohasset-oriented.

"We thought this opportunity would give us a real chance to branch out into the largest neighboring community," Willms said.

The Art Center is committed to the Shipyard storefront for six months — and they already have a full calendar of events and activities planned.

Two-thirds of the space will be devoted to the art exhibitions and retail. The other third is carved out for classes and the creation of art.

The retail section will include work from local artisans and crafters; most of the vendors will be perennial Arts Festival favorites.

COURTESY PHOTO

The 2,600-square-foot space in the waterfront shopping center is under going a substantial transformation over the next week and a half in time for the opening on Tuesday, Oct. 12.

The first gallery show is "The Hingham Scene." All the work featured in this show will be by South Shore Art Center gallery artists (who get that title through a juried selection process) and will feature Hingham artists and Hingham scenes. About 20 gallery artist's work will be featured.

The artwork will be sold right off the wall to buyers, "we want people to buy what they love and take it home," said Sarah Hannon, director of the South Shore Art Center. As pieces are sold they will be replaced by new artwork, so the gallery will always be changing.

Every Sunday afternoon, the Art Center is inviting a different group or club to come check out the space.

A Holiday Festival is in the works for the first weekend in December, which is something the Art Center has never done. And in January a national caliber gallery exhibit is coming featuring Triiibe, a collaborative performance art troupe of identical triplets, and National Geographic photographer Cary Wolinsky. The art is in part a social and political commentary.

"It's really different for a show and I think that's exciting," Willms said.

The Shipyard space will have several opportunities for classes and workshops for adults and kids.

"We tried not to duplicate the classes we have at the Art Center (in Cohasset), but we wanted to do what we do best," said Diane Kennedy, assistant director of the Art Center.

Their most popular classes year after year are drawing, painting and photography, so classes in each of those mediums are offered.

"We're so excited about this opportunity. Giving another community access to the arts in multiple ways is a tremendous prospect," said Alice Sloan, who will serve as the gallery manager.

"It's a short window, but there are a lot of things happening to celebrate being here," Willms said.

The South Shore Art Center at the Shipyard opens Tuesday, Oct. 12. Hours are Tuesday and Wednesday 10a.m. to 6p.m.; Thursday through Saturday, 10a.m. to 7p.m. and Sunday, 12 noon to 5p.m. The space is located at 18 Shipyard Drive, in the same block as Hingham Beer Works.

To sign up for a class or workshop, visit www.ssac.org, or call 781-383-2787.

Commemoration of the Tragedy of the Brig St. John

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, Division 9, Plymouth, will host its annual Commemoration of the Tragedy of the Brig St. John on Sunday, Oct. 3, at St. Anthony Church, 129 South Main St. with Mass in the church at 1 p.m., followed by a reception and short speaking event in the Parish Center, featuring Catherine B. Shannon, professor emerita from Westfield State College, which will then be followed by a wreath-laying ceremony at Cohasset Central Cemetery.

This year represents the 161st anniversary of the sinking of the Brig St. John. The ship was bound for Boston from Ireland in October 1849 and encountered a tremendous storm, which blew her off course to the deadly Grampus Ledge. Nearly 100 Irish men, women and children perished.

This commemoration remembers not only the victims of this tragedy, but also the bravery and compassion of the citizens of Cohasset who tried to rescue as many as possible and who helped those who were rescued. All are welcome to remember the victims and the heroes of this event.

Treat's Pond easement unclear

Selectmen discuss rights and obligations

"The town's rights and obligations are spelled out in one paragraph using some vague language."
— Town Counsel Lou Ross.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We chased our tails again tonight."

That was the concluding statement by Selectmen chairman Karen Quigley after the hour-long discussion on Treat's Pond Monday night.

The Army Corps of Engineers proposed saltmarsh restoration project was turned down by the Selectmen in August, but this discussion was about the existing easement on Treat's Pond, its drainage pipe and the town's obligations.

The town currently holds a license agreement with a group of homeowners on Sandy Cove, which essentially allows the DPW to dig out the end of the drainage pipe on Sandy Cove. The license is valid for five years.

In addition, the town also holds a conservation easement dating back to 1964, called the Bigelow easement. What rights and obligations are granted in that document was at the crux of discussion Monday night.

"The town's rights and obligations are spelled out in one paragraph using some vague language," said Town Counsel Lou Ross.

Treat's Pond is located on the ocean side of Atlantic Avenue just north of Whitehead Road; a drainage pipe from the pond outfalls on Sandy Cove. The pipe outfall is regularly dug out by the DPW, especially in rainy conditions, to prevent flooding of neighboring properties.

Ross said the only definitive way to determine the town's rights and obligations is to get a ruling from Land Court.

The former property owner Elizabeth Bigelow granted the town an easement to Treat's Pond and its drainage pipe. In its simplest terms, the town was given the right to maintain Treat's Pond as a marsh pond. Treat's Pond itself is private property.

But how the town can go about doing that maintenance in perpetuity — and if that is a legal obligation — remains a question.

"In my mind, without the outfall (on Sandy Cove) I don't see how the town can meet its obligation to conserve the pond because that's its natural outfall," Quigley said. "It's important for us to find out what the reality is."

Selectman Fred Koed said the town could do an eminent domain taking for the drainage pipe and access to it. Town Meeting would have to approve it, and then if challenged by a property owner the Land Court would determine the fair market value for the property.

"That would give us the right to do what we need to fix that pipe," Koed said. "If (Town Meeting) said no, we would know where we stand."

Selectman Paul Carlson said he would not be in favor of a taking without knowing scientifically the pipe will work if rebuilt at Sandy Cove.

Several Sandy Cove residents spoke at the meeting.

The Selectmen did not take any vote on Treat's Pond, or reach any consensus.

Inspection of the drainage pipe

The town recently attempted to send a video camera down the Treat's Pond drainage pipe to determine the state of the pipe. The DPW spent two and a half days emptying the pond to ensure the camera could get a clear view of the pipe. However, Town Manager Bill Griffin said about 13 to 14 feet down into the pipe it was half-filled with water and sand. The camera unit could not propel itself any further. The inspection did not give the town a good idea of the state of the pipe.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said the result was very disappointing.

Text of the Bigelow easement

Below is the full text of the original 1964 Bigelow easement:

"I, Elizabeth P. Bigelow of Concord, Middlesex County, Massachusetts, Grant, Release and Dedicate to the Town of Cohasset the following perpetual easement and restriction over real estate owned by me in said Town of Cohasset, County of Norfolk, described in Certificate of Title No. 18402 dated October 9, 1934 and recorded in Norfolk Registry District Book 93, Page 2, said real estate being described as Lot C in said Certificate and being shown as Lot C on a plan drawn by C. B. Humphrey, Engineer for Court, dated June 24, 1930, No. 3183D and filed in Norfolk Registry District with Certificate No. 14418, Sheets 1 and 2, Vol. 73.

"That portion of said Lot C consisting of a marsh pond known as Treat's Pond, a portion of the boundaries of which are shown on said plan, shall not be filled, dumped upon, drained or otherwise altered from its natural state as a marsh pond, nor shall said pond be excavated or cleared except as may be necessary to remove debris, blow down and over growth or otherwise preserve the natural appearance of said pond, and I grant to the town the right to enter upon the premises from time to time as may be necessary for said purposes, upon notice and on condition that any damage to my property caused by said entry be fully remedied.

"This easement and restriction is given for the promotion and development of the natural resources and open spaces of the said Town for conservation purposes under the Conservation Commission Act...and shall run with the land, subject to encumbrances of record, if any."

Financial snapshot

Selectmen get glimpse of town's finances

Buckley said looking ahead the financial situation is not expected to take a turn for the better.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It should come as little surprise to those in tune with town and state finances – 2010 was not a great year, and 2011 is not looking much better.

The Board of Selectmen heard from Finance Director Michael Buckley last month to hear how the town ended fiscal 2010 in June.

He estimated free cash to be at the lowest levels in years. At an estimated $220,000 it is one-fifth what it was in 2007. Free cash is strictly a Massachusetts term used to help describe a certain type of surplus funds: funds remaining from the operations of the previous fiscal year.

Motor vehicle excise tax is on a downhill slide. Building permit revenue got a boost from a $200,000 Avalon payment, but otherwise was well below past fiscal year revenues.

Buckley said looking ahead the financial situation is not expected to take a turn for the better.

"(Fiscal) 2012 is going to be tougher. We have to do a good job to ensure departments don't run deficits," Buckley said.

In some cases, the costs are unavoidable – older equipment breaks down and needs repair or needed services have increased cost, Buckley said. Public safety departments are dealing with some vacancies, but still need to man the departments sufficiently.

Yet, it wasn't all bad news.

Buckley said the fire department and its ambulance/EMT services brought in close to $400,000 in revenue in fiscal 2010.

The police department exceeded its expected receipts by $12,000 bringing in a total of $37,253 in revenue.

The recreation department was expanding its programs and returning more revenue to the town's general fund. The fiscal 2010 budget called for $70,000 in revenue from the rec department; $92,000 ended up coming in.

The harbormaster department returned $12,000 more than expected to the town as well through its transient boater overnight fees and annual mooring fees.

Buckley said the town is on the right tracks in terms of controlling its debt.

"(The town) is authorizing less and in the last few years there has been mostly dedicated spending from stabilization funds," Buckley said. A capital stabilization fund has aided the town to purchase smaller capital items in cash, without the need for bonding.

"It's not going to happen overnight, but there are some bright spots," Buckley said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the town's budget has increased 1.4 percent over the last three years.

Buckley will be back before the Board of Selectmen every quarter to give an update on the town's financial picture.

Two Citizens' petitions filed

Two citizen's petitions were filed in time to be placed on the Special Town Meeting warrant. One is a zoning bylaw amendment and the other is to place more oversight on the Water Commission spending.

The zoning bylaw amendment is being requested because the Scituate Racquet and Fitness Club, which is located on 3A on the border between Scituate and Cohasset, is looking to construct a indoor pool on their Cohasset land. However, "commercial and membership sports and recreational facilities" is not a permitted use on the land currently.

The Board of Selectmen referred the article to the Planning Board to schedule a public hearing.

The other petition proposes imposing restrictions to limit the Water Commission's charge, control and authority to spend money without the approval and consent of the Board of Selectmen.

Both petitions got well over the required 100 signatures.

If the tires on your vehicle are showing signs of wear only at the center of the tread, it is an indication that they are over-inflated. Conversely, if the tread is showing signs of wear at the tires' outer edges, you are probably driving on under-inflated tires. In either case, it may be necessary to replace your tires which should then be inflated properly for the duration of their lives. On the other hand, if your tires show wear on either the inside or the outside of the tread, it is likely that your vehicle's alignment needs to be checked. In this case, a four-wheel alignment should be performed prior to purchasing replacement tires.
Properly inflated and aligned tires are vital. Not only will they make your driving experience smoother and safer, they can reduce your carbon footprint and increase the life of your car. If you're not certain that your car's tires are performing optimally, you should call ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT today. Our ASE Master-certified technicians will be happy to check your tires and alignment as part of the regular maintenance that every car needs. OPINION

Fun, scary stuff

Cohasset has embarked on a new tradition thanks to the enthusiasm of Pat Martin, who wants all of us to share in Halloween-seasonal fun.

On Friday, Oct. 15 a prominent home on Cohasset's gold coast is opening its doors for a dinner party. Stoneleigh, a fieldstone mansion on Jerusalem Road, was built in the 1880s, boasts sweeping views of the Atlantic Ocean and is steeped with history — a reminder of a time when Cohasset was a summer playground for wealthy Bostonians.

Haunted Happenings continues on Saturday, Oct. 16 with an evening, hands-on ghost investigation at the Town Hall, Maritime Museum and the Capt. John Wilson House.

Be sure to read all the details in the story this week by staff reporter, Nancy White.

We are not sure why we, as a culture, love to be scared! But Halloween gives us that opportunity.

Maybe dressing up and having a good scream allows us to escape from ourselves, and let loose.

We would imagine there are few among us who do not recall the Halloweens of their youth.

We recall that "treats" – like tons of candy – were something special and one of the only ways to get them was on Halloween. We remember storing our candy like squirrels in brown grocery-store bags in our bedroom closet to munch on after school for months.

We made our own costumes – and they could be very creative. Talking about who we were going to be on Halloween occupied us as kids for at least several weeks before the big day.

If you are old enough to remember "The Twilight Zone" and another show "Thriller" – which were not limited to Halloween – you may also remember being too scared to go upstairs alone and having trouble falling asleep. Scary movies before all the high-tech graphics seemed eerily more real. As young children we saw the "Creature of the Black Lagoon" – which our parents regretted allowing us to see – as it totally scared us all for months.

If you grew up in the 60s or before, you will likely recall there were tons of children in the area. In Scituate, for example – a family of five kids, like ours – was on the small side. While we, as children, were not as indulged as today's children – we were allowed to be "kids." Halloween was one of those times that we could walk the neighborhoods for hours, often returning for another big grocery bag, to collect our loot.

Halloween should be a fun time – a time to make special memories that our families can carry forward and recall fondly.

Town traditions like what is planned for Cohasset can help make that happen.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

School board chairman responds to letters

TO THE EDITOR:

In last week's Cohasset Mariner, there were several letters regarding the right of the public to speak at School Committee meetings. As chairperson of the School Committee, the decision for public participation is within my jurisdiction. Unlike my predecessor, I believe the public has a right to speak at our meetings. In fact, I strongly encourage the public to attend our meetings and let us know their concerns. We live in a democratic society. I believe that open and honest communication and feedback is the best way for us to have a strong and vibrant school system, that reflects the educational values that we all cherish. At a Mass Association of School Committee (MASC) workshop this year attended by several of our members, the speaker, Jim Hardy made the following observation: "The minute you don't allow public comment, you start losing public support." That will not happen while I am chair.

The right to public comment is not absolute. I will monitor comments to be sure they are concise and constructive. It is in no one's best interest for comments to degenerate into name calling or personal insults and if I feel the comment has veered off course, I reserve the right to stop those comments. At our next School Committee meeting, we will discuss this policy, however ultimately the final decision will rest with me. I will make those decisions using my best judgment of decency and fairness. As an example, I would allow Ms. McCarthy the right to speak at our meetings and disagree with my policy. I will not however allow her to denigrate my character and allow her to distort the record, as she did in her letter to the Mariner last week. As she well knows, after her public record request, I did not have advance knowledge of Ms. Tolman's comments. I never previously read what she had written, nor had any idea of what she was about to say. To write a letter to the Mariner, stating an untruth is an example of a comment that will not be tolerated.

As we begin our search for a new superintendent, I hope we can count on many of you for appropriate input. Let us move forward together for the benefit of the children of Cohasset.

Dr Helene A Lieb,
School Committee Chair

Clarification on tide gate opening

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to correct some of the impressions left by last week's letter describing the proposed opening of the tide gate to Inner Little Harbor. One implication was that the new sewer will do nothing to improve water quality. It is inconceivable that the elimination of leakage from the many old septic systems surrounding the harbor will do nothing to help clean it up.

Another impression conveyed was that allowing the harbor to drain to mud flats twice a day will remove the nutrients in the sediment. Anyone who has ever tried to dissolve a soluble substance in water knows that no dissolution occurs when the substance is uncovered. To decrease the nutrients in the sediment, not only must they be allowed to dissolve, the addition of new nutrients must be stopped. The sewer is one way. The other is to limit or eliminate the application of fertilizer, organic or not, to the lawns and fields that drain directly into the harbor and into Richardson Brook.

The last implication was that leaving the gate open is the only way to increase flushing of the harbor. This is the solution advocated by some of the families who live on the part of the harbor that is covered with water even when the mud bottom on the other side is exposed and smells bad in warm weather.

I do not doubt the sincerity of those who want to clean up the harbor. I only question their monocular vision of how to do it, a solution which they know will negatively impact their neighbors. Currently the gates are open for three months in the winter and three days each month year-round. Why not consider increasing the time of the winter opening and/or the number of open days per month? I trust that the Conservation Commission will evaluate fairly all the possible solutions, and take into account how they impact all of those who live on Inner Little Harbor.

Parent sets the record straight

COMMENTARY

JODI TOLMAN

Not a single word in my remarks constituted anything remotely hateful, destructive or disrespectful. My remarks were in no way of a personal nature.

After being attacked during the Public Comment portion of the School Committee meeting on Sept. 15 for speaking my mind and expressing the strongly held opinion of many parents, I'd like to set the record straight.

As we had an unbelievable replay of last year's mismanagement of President Obama's back-to-school speech to America's students, and as the upset and controversy engendered by Dr. Walsh's disturbing lack of leadership was ignored and dismissed – I came to a School Committee meeting to express my opinion, and that of many parents, that what would be best for our community, teachers and children would be for Dr. Walsh's tenure to be immediately ended.

In the words of Mr. Slanetz – my remarks were "hateful," "disrespectful" and "destructive." Dr. Walsh, red-faced and nearly choking back tears, experienced

Paving should be done before winter

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Paving news — We get lots and lots and lots of questions about, "When will the paving be completed?" We'd like to make a stab at answering this question as best we can. First, let us say that it is our intent to complete all of the paving on our agenda by the time winter starts. That should satisfy many of the routine questions we get.

But, some of you would prefer more detail, so we will do our best, with the information we have, to answer your questions. First, it is important to note that there are two distinct paving projects underway. The first is unrelated to the Little Harbor Project and has been in the hopper for a while. This is paving that is being funded by monies from the Commonwealth and includes three road segments that will be paved. They are:

- Sohier Street from Fair Oaks Lane to North Main Street.
- Pond Street from the High School to Route 3A
- Beechwood Street from Norman Todd Road to Route 3A

Each of these roads will be cold-planed and given a leveling layer of asphalt, where necessary, and then top coated with asphalt. (Remember, cold-planing is a grinding process that removes the top bit of the old road approximately to the depth of the new asphalt to be added back.) Its function is several-fold. First, it gives the road a rough surface so that the new asphalt adheres to the road better. Second, it is the first step in recreating a surface shape to the road that will allow it to drain properly and prevent ice build-up. Last, it prevents the road from ending up too high so that water cannot be properly managed at driveways and features that are lower than the road.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Jerusalem Lane / Jerusalem / Atlantic construction area.

Construction area near 123 Atlantic Ave.

After these roads are paved, Jerusalem Road will be paved from Rust Way to Atlantic Avenue and from Bow Street to North Main Street will be paved in a similar fashion.

These roads have all been released to our paving contractor and we await their paving schedule.

You may ask why we are skipping the portion of Jerusalem Road between Bow Street and Atlantic Avenue. The reason is that there is a small construction project in an area shown in the aerial view photograph of the Atlantic / Jerusalem area. Drains at the foot of Jerusalem Lane will be connected across Jerusalem Road to a Bioretention basin that will eventually outfall to the adjacent Inner Little Harbor. This construction will start very shortly and needs to be complete before we pave this part of Jerusalem Road.

The last two sections, Atlantic and the remaining portion of Jerusalem will be paved when their respective construction projects are completed. In any event all should be paved before winter sets in for good.

Other goings on around Town — We have spoken a bit about the project to restore the outfall channel at the American Legion and the replacement of the tide gate structures in the harbor. The contractor has been selected via the Town's competitive bidding process. The contractor will be Aqua Line Utility, Inc., a contractor that we have worked with in the past. We found them to be a willing construction partner and expect this project to continue the relationship.

This week we met with the contractor and our engineer to go over the construction strategy that they will be using. This will be a particularly challenging bit of construction since the harbor-side concrete work must work around the tides. Of course, the construction work in the channel must deal with Jacobs Meadow drainage as well.

The first sign of activity is likely to be in the harbor, behind the Veteran's Memorial. In the next several weeks the tides appear to be favorable for doing harbor-side work. We'll know more as time progresses, but that's what it looks like now. As always we'll do our best to keep you up to date.

Meeting House Pond — The project to reconstruct Meeting House Pond has officially started. This week the DPW has begun to drain the pond in preparation for the construction work. Construction fencing will be erected next week to isolate the construction site. Since this will be an active construction site, please help us keep the site safe.

HEALTH NOTES

Cohasset's own goosebuster: Zinger

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Once again Cohasset is exposed to a health threat from a bird. In 2001 under a Health Notes entitled Goosebusters, you were introduced to Zinger, a border collie once retained by the Board to solve a problem at Lily Pond with Canada geese which were, by their numbers, endangering our water supply and generally messing up the neighborhood. Now a similar problem has been reported at the Common. Since 2001, Zinger has found nearly full employment at venues like the golf club, the Hingham waterfront and several other places in this and neighboring towns. Zinger has become a real professional with an excellent reputation, references and his agent has been requested to contact the Board of Health with the intent, perhaps once again, to go on the Town's payroll.

Ten years ago, two strains of wild geese were making their presence in town: Canada geese as they flew South in the winter; North in the summer, and local geese, originally raised by farmers who used them as decoys. The geese, wintering over, became real pests. Cohasset also had swans; over 70 in Straits Pond alone. But scores of geese around Lily Pond were leaving their feces, adding to algae-causing nutrients in the pond.

Thus, nine years ago, the Board of Health with the Water Commission reached the solution for a goose outbreak anywhere in town. With the encouragement of the BoH, Judy St. Peter bought Zinger. Originally featured elsewhere in the Mariner we all read about the town's potential new employee. The Border collie came with impressive credentials, having trained on sheep, and also goose movements and identification.

He has since been expanding his career, serving Hingham and other neighboring venues until he can be considered a trained professional, having received further training by his owner, who has continued her research, cruising the Internet augmented by much reading and study. Zinger has cleared geese from Lily Pond Lane with great success and subsequently was taken out frequently to areas with high goose populations and released. He chases the geese with great joy, and after several such forays the goose population begins to thin.

Moreover, he has broadened his repertory to seagulls, crows, the occasional turkey and other types of animals that may represent a nuisance underfoot.

Of course, Zinger has learned and experience has made him more skillful. Moreover, he has broadened his repertory to seagulls, crows, the occasional turkey and other types of animals that may represent a nuisance underfoot.

Apparently, it's just a matter of keeping at it. The most important time of the year is early in the spring when nesting begins. Complaints about geese and swans, etc. continue and the Board of Health feels that Zinger will be a continuing asset to the town. Therefore subject to funding constraints, Zinger will be available to pay visits to various areas in town where geese or other nuisances are getting underfoot. Particularly near our water supply; the middle-high school playing fields, or any other place threatened by high coliform readings from fowl. And of course, the Common.

However, the problem has become more difficult. Most authorities indicate that domestic goose lifespan is as high as 22-26 years but those in the wild have a probable lifespan of 13 -16 years. And despite common perceptions, they are not stupid.

Accordingly, it has become necessary to invoke a diverse number of suppression methods and in view of the fact of goose intelligence, cycle the remediation methods over a period of time perhaps as long as six years accounting for a long goose memory, the principal goose control methods include:

- Border Collies - Zinger and his colleagues
- Lawn Treatment - Turf and Grass Goose Repellents
- Exclusion Methods Goose Fence
- Hatch Control by feed modification
- Scare Devices floating plastic crocodile heads, since we in Massachusetts now have real ones.
- Cannons/Scare Guns
- Hand-held Laser Dissuader available in red and green, but very bright and are at best, a nuisance.

Now when such a problem arises, we hope to have the staff on board to solve it: Zinger!

For more information call Tara Tradd 383-4116.

Sunday marks major historical milestone

COMMENTARY

MICHAEL MULLALEY

Sunday, Oct. 3, marks the 20th anniversary of one of the most significant events of our lifetime – the reunification of Germany as a European Union nation and member of the NATO alliance.

Even after the fall of the Berlin Wall in November 1989, a peaceful end to the Cold War was not a certainty. The Soviet Union had previously cracked down on other democratic movements: 1956 Hungary and 1968's Prague Spring. And earlier that same year, Communist China brutally suppressed a nascent democratic movement at Tiananmen Square. In 1991, hard line members of the communist party tried to wrest back control of the Soviet Union in their ill-fated August Putsch. It was not until Christmas 1991 that the Soviet Union peacefully dissolved, effectively ending the Cold War – one of the best Christmas presents the world has ever received.

In 1990, a reunited Germany was not a shared dream for many Europeans. In the previous 120 years, a unified Germany waged three major wars against its neighbors (Franco-Prussian War, World War I and World War II). And many thought it safer to keep Germany divided – particularly the Russians who suffered the most devastating casualties of German aggression. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and French President Francois Mitterrand joined Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev in initially opposing a re-united Germany. American President George H.W. Bush was the only major power to support German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's vision of a re-united Germany.

Eventually, President Bush and his foreign policy team (National Security Advisor Brent Scowcroft and Secretary of State James Baker) convinced Thatcher, Mitterrand and Gorbachev of the inevitability of German re-unification. There was no stopping the shared aspirations of over 80 million Germans. The only question was how a unified Germany would be integrated into Europe. All agreed that a unified Germany should be a European Economic Union member. Thatcher and Mitterrand would only agree to a unified Germany if it was a member nation of NATO. Soviet Premier Gorbachev insisted that a unified Germany be unaligned. In one of the most brilliant diplomatic accomplishments in United States history, President Bush convinced Gorbachev of the historical danger of an unaligned Germany and why it must be a NATO member.

Europe has historically been plagued by wars of various alliances – with a Germanic power as a shifting ally. All the major European wars of the last three centuries were afflicted with balance of power considerations. In 1756, Prussia allied with Great Britain against Austria, France, Russia and Sweden in the Seven Years War – a world war that is known as the French and Indian War in North America. The Prussians along with the British, Austrians and Russians fought against the French in the Napoleonic Wars of the early 19th century. In 1870, Central Europe again erupted in a major war as the Prussians and French fought the Franco-Prussian War, a warm-up for World War I. In World War I, Germany, Austria and Turkey fought against Britain, France, Russia, Italy and the United States. In World War II, Germany, Austria and Italy fought against the Soviet Union, France, Great Britain and the United States. These wars have resulted in the loss of hundreds of millions of lives and the destruction of infrastructure as well as great works of art and architecture. And, of course, many other peoples and cultures of the world have been dragged into these devastating European wars, including the United States.

President Bush was able to convince Soviet Premier Gorbachev that it would be a mistake to leave a major economic power in Central Europe like Germany unaligned. That would create the exact conditions that had led to other European wars – wars that had devastated Russia. It was much better for Germany to be safely ensconced in a powerful alliance. There were only two options: NATO and the Warsaw Pact. With the rapid dissolution of the Warsaw Pact in 1989 and 1990, the best solution was for Germany to be a NATO member. Gorbachev reluctantly agreed.

Many wars have been fought in human history. Too often, wars have ended with conditions that planted the seeds for subsequent wars. The 1871 Treaty of Versailles after the Franco-Prussian War set the stage for World War I. The 1919 Treaty of Versailles after World War I created the conditions that sparked World War II. The allies' division of Europe after World War II led to the Cold War. It is truly rare when a war ends with lasting peace. We are indeed fortunate that 20 years ago we witnessed an attempt to break a 2,000-year cycle of violence – European wars of shifting alliances. Thanks to brilliant American diplomacy near the end of the Cold War, we now have a major Central European economic power (Germany) firmly ensconced in stable economic and political alliances – that is, the European Economic Union and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, respectively. For the first time since the Roman Empire, the world has now enjoyed 20 years when we have not had to fear an imminent eruption of another Central European war. And, it appears that our old fears will not be returning.

This Sunday, while we celebrate the 20th anniversary of German re-unification, let us remember the countless sacrifices Americans made to make this hopefully lasting peace. Let us thank all the members of our uniformed military, diplomatic corps and intelligence agencies that helped make this dream a reality.

Michael Mullaley is now an international sales and marketing consultant residing in Hingham. He worked with the US Air Force and NATO during the Cold War.

Help us improve your community

FOR THE RECORD

GREGORY MATHIS

There's no "Spotlight Team." No "I Team." In many cases, there's really no team at all waiting to delve deeply into all the misspending, corruption or controversy that might be going on in your community.

As your community newspaper, much of our reporters' and editors' time is making sure we get to as much news as possible during a given period of time in print and online. From covering town government news, to the latest crime in town, features on interesting and inspiring people in the community, results from high school or youth sporting events or previewing important upcoming community events, we're trying to be many things to meet the needs of our entire audience.

It's not an excuse. It's the reality.

It's not that we don't want to or don't care about those types of in-depth investigative stories. It all comes down to time and resources. The fact of the matter is many of us got into journalism because we want to make a difference. We want to right the wrongs, bring injustice to light and provide answers to questions that inform and educate the public.

Public service journalism is a step — albeit a small one — in that direction.

In the coming weeks and months, we'll be turning to you to find out what issues you care about most in your community. We have a few different ideas we're considering and want to try to narrow it down to two or one if possible.

Here are the options:

What's The Problem? Readers will be asked to send us a problem they see in the community and we'll use our resources to get answers. Some examples might be potholes, no streetlights in a particular neighborhood, growing class sizes or poor cable service. Really, it could be anything you have a question or concern about.

What's Going on Here? You're driving home from work, or passing through the downtown on the way home from the grocery store, and you notice something you haven't noticed before. It might be new construction — perhaps a new store or restaurant, but you're not sure. Send us an e-mail and we'll look into it for you.

Budget Breakdown: OK, as journalists we're sometimes challenged by budgets. It's a numbers thing and there's a reason many of us went into a liberal arts field. We weren't good with numbers. I can say that because I fall into that category. But that shouldn't stop us from taking a close, hard look at the town and school budgets. And frankly, there are many in the community who look even closer and have a better understanding then we might. With your help, we can help readers understand how town government is spending their money beyond the sound bites and rhetoric of town officials.

Too often we sit around our newsrooms and talk about what our readers want — like we really know what our readers want. So here's your chance to tell us what you want. We're listening so make your voice heard.

I have a poll on my blog for you to vote on the best of the three options listed above. We'll use that information to decide how we proceed with the public service journalism initiative.

Like many of our other recent reader initiatives, the success of this will depend on you — our reader.

We are at your service.

To vote in the poll, visit For the Record blog online at blogs.wickedlocal.com/fortherecord.

Their South Shore network creates one for Boston teens

By Glenda Garland
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

STEP is not an acronym, but a description of its process, as the program aims to give students a step up into the working world and company personnel a vehicle to participate in developing talented employees.

The idea came to Lucinda Baxter of Norwell as she was driving around with one of her clients. Herself from the United Kingdom, Baxter helps people relocate from other countries. While she and her client talked about the work involved in finding jobs, it occurred to Baxter that the process must be even more incomprehensible and frustrating to teens, especially those who have no one to talk to about what opportunities are available. What if, Baxter wondered, these kids had a way to get a peek inside companies, and see what jobs existed? What would they do?

She right away sketched out a plan to connect students with companies through tours, then talked to Christina Brown of Cohasset, a former client and now friend. Brown was enthusiastic right away because she had a great mentor at Mackenzie Financial of Canada, a large mutual funds company. When she started working for them out of school, she had thought she would be answering phones forever. Instead, before she moved here from Vancouver, British Columbia, she had risen to senior vice president.

Baxter discussed the idea with Jennifer Bardsley of Hingham while walking, and hit a chord. An interior designer, Bardsley had just taken some students from Hingham High to a design studio, and seen students amazed to realize how many career choices the business world offered. Several came away rethinking how they would structure their educations to target specific design careers.

Encouraged, Baxter reached out to Katherine Tedeschi and Amy Zintl Koch, both of Norwell. Tedeschi brought sharp financial skills. Koch serves as Chairman of the Norwell School Committee, and with her husband, does quality assurance surveying and metrics. "Amy's knowledge of school systems, which button we can push and what we couldn't, was just invaluable," Baxter said of Koch's first contributions to their planning. Bardsley added, too, that, "We wouldn't have been able to move forward without the measurement."

Measurement told the group where to target their new plan. "We asked Hingham and Norwell students if they knew what they wanted to do, and 70 percent of them said yes, based on talking to someone who told them about their jobs," Koch said. "When we asked the kids in Boston, only one third of them did."

Meetings with corporations, universities, and high schools also focused the decision to implement the program in Boston. "It's amazing how quickly a South Shore organization has moved to Boston," Koch said. "It's because of a very quick connection with corporate partners."

The new organization they formed, called STEP, trains high school students in business etiquette and coordinates tours of various companies throughout the Boston area. STEP is not an acronym, but a description of its process, as the program aims to give students a step up into the working world and company personnel a vehicle to participate in developing talented employees.

At first the five of them did everything, including putting up the seed money. Now they break out individual jobs and run with them. "We are incredibly productive," Baxter, Brown, and Bardsley said together, and laughed.

They have also brought in volunteers to help with training, tours, and registration, most of them friends and South Shore residents. [I can name names, but there're a lot of them.] Other local professionals have donated their services.

The high school they started working with was the John D. O'Bryant School of Math & Science in Roxbury, one of Boston's test schools. They encountered bright, curious kids, but kids who lacked the opportunity to discover companies and career paths. "These kids have a lot of risk because they're the first generation going to college," Brown said.

From left: Lucinda Baxter of Norwell, Amy Zintl Koch of Norwell, Jennifer Bardsley of Hingham, Christina Brown of Cohasset and Katherine Tedeschi of Norwell (seated), formed a new organization, called STEP, that trains high school students in business etiquette and coordinates tours of various companies throughout the Boston area.

She explained that when they had a STEP graduation last spring, the students were allowed to invite whomever they liked. Only a few parents came. "We didn't realize the mentoring role we were taking on. It gives you a deeper appreciation of their commitment."

Committed to learning, yes, but most of them also lacked what Baxter calls the soft skills, such as making eye contact, having a firm handshake, and knowing how to write a thank you note.

Eduardo Cintron, 16, of Roxbury mentioned what a difference those soft skills make. He attended STEP last year and is back again, after working the summer at a Tedeschi's. "I'm like the youngest guy to work at my Tedeschi's, and the guy there said, 'We need more kids like you.' From STEP you know how to shake hands, how to be polite."

Other STEP graduates sing the program's praises. Said Sheldon Catan, 17, of Dorchester and now a freshman at Wentworth Institute of Technology, "I didn't know what to expect when I went the first time to STEP. I liked the way they explained it. It gives me a lot of direction, and you need that. I know kids who aren't doing well in school, but it wasn't until I realized what I wanted to do that I focused and started doing well. I wish freshmen and sophomores could go so they'd know, oh, I really do need to pay attention in math."

"It's so nice to see results and so quickly," Baxter said. "Otherwise I don't know if we wouldn't have gotten tired."

Brown credited their success to focusing on their one idea, which they all describe as impossibly simple, and working hard so it's easy for everyone else involved. "We've whittled down what we do so we do it really well," Brown said. "When you're working with corporate partners, you don't want to make mistakes."

So far they have impressed their corporate partners, which represent a diverse cross section of employers. Said Sheila Walsh of Plymouth Rock Assurance about being approached by STEP's founders, "They explained briefly what they were about, and right away I thought it was a great idea. It took me right back to when I was in high school and thinking what am I going to do?"

STEP's founders know exactly what they're going to do next. They're branching into an additional Boston school this fall, looking around to find the funding within the schools for counselors that coordinate from that end, and bringing on more corporate partners. "Sometimes we think we should just ride the ferry to Boston and talk to the people on it about STEP," Baxter said. "It's a Boston-South Shore connection, right?"

But what they each take away for themselves as treasures are the little moments, when kids come to them and tell them how the program has changed their goals and plans. Even better, said Brown, "The kids are already paying it forward."

"They have the capabilities," Baxter said with a smile. "We're just teaching them how to fish."

STEP in Action at John D. O'Bryant High School

The last bell of the day rings, and students flood the hallway. Amid the goodnatured jostling and noise, some of them head right to the three tables where the STEP volunteers check in those who have preregistered. Others wander by asking, "What's this?" A volunteer explains, and some students nod and sign up. Another volunteer makes them a nametag, and shakes their hands before sending them into the auditorium for the first meeting of the year.

Inside there are snacks and two trainers, Dennis Zaia of Hull and Stephanie Dromeheuser of Norwell, who greet the students with handshakes. After all 56 students sit down, Headmaster Steve Sullivan says to them from the stage, "I'm happy you're here. I'm happy STEP's here, and I expect a lot of you are going to be up here next year talking about all you've learned and accomplished."

Lucinda Baxter and Amy Koch, both of Norwell and two of STEP's five original founders, put a slide up. It reads, "Turn your curiosity into techniques that will help you to be remembered in a positive way."

Then they outline the STEP program. The STEP team — its five founders all from the South Shore and the network of friends and neighbors they've pulled in to help — coordinates tours of various companies for students. The idea is simple: to show high school students how relevant their educations are to real-world career opportunities, and to allow companies to reach out to and help develop the future workforce.

The founding STEP graduates, Class of 2010.

They have worked hard to interest companies and organization in participating. One founder, Jennifer Bardsley of Hingham, even wrote a manual for companies to reassure them about giving tours. They've had donations of services, including software programming, legal counseling, accounting, grant writing, and transportation.

Companies involved include MIT's Lincoln Labs, MIT Department of Facilities, Microsoft, Boston Medical Center, Bloomingdales, Amory Architects, Conaccord Genuity, Continuum, Archstone North Point, Essential Design, Tedeschi Foodstores, State Street, Novartis, Ferrari, Sun Life Financial, Plymouth Rock Assurance, Boston College, and Johnny Cupcakes.

Koch and Baxter also outline their expectations for the students. "We'll send you an email," says Koch. "It might be tomorrow, or today, or this weekend, but you have to answer it so we know you're ready to go." They also ask the students to sign up for at least three tours, one not at a company a student might think to look at.

The students are enthusiastic about what they'll learn. Yessica Lopez, 17, of East Boston is back for a second year. She works for Amway, but, "I wanted to see what it was like to work in a company." She's looking forward to seeing what kind of jobs there are out there that might make use of her interest in writing, psychology, and languages.

Angel Baez, 17, of Jamaica Plain says, "I'm looking for a career in marketing or management, but I don't really what that means. So I'm hoping to get that sort of information figured out here."

Strict oversight needed on water tank issue

COMMENTARY

MICHAEL RONZONI

In the spirit of having accurate information published for consumption in the public domain, I feel the need to correct certain misinformation that appeared in the Aug. 20, 2010, edition of the Cohasset Mariner in the article concerning the Water Commission looking into access options to the Bear Hill Water Tank (BHWT). That article concluded with the following content: "Steve May, water department construction manager, reminded the Water Commission that the path off Reservoir Road was once used for about two years during the construction of the water tank. 'We would only be restoring something that was always there,'" May said. What Mr. May appears to be suggesting is that an access road/driveway off of Reservoir Road to the BHWT has always existed and that it should be no big deal for construction trucks to re-continue to use it.

To set the record straight, at least as far as I understand it, on or about Sept. 4, 1958, the Town of Cohasset was granted an easement allowing for the laying and maintenance of pipe from the BHWT area to Cohasset Estates (the "Reservoir Road Easement"). The Reservoir Road. Easement did not allow for an access driveway, rather just the laying of pipe to connect to the water system. As such, this area presumably was not designed to have any vehicles driven over it. The pipes that were laid within the Reservoir Road Easement are made of asbestos cement. Subsequently, on or about April 14, 1969, the actual land on and under which the town enjoyed the Reservoir Road. Easement was conveyed to the town. So, despite Mr. May's allusion to the contrary, there has never been an appropriate access road off of Reservoir Road to the BHWT and there is, in fact, nothing of the kind to restore.

It is precisely the Water Commission's acting or relying upon this type of misinformation that I feel warrants a thorough and methodical review of this matter and strict oversight by the Board of Selectmen. Unfortunately, notwithstanding that the Water Commissioners likely do not even have the authority to enter into a contract that has absolutely nothing to do with the distribution of water, such a review should have taken place prior to entering into a contract with a cell phone company. Given the pipes traveling under the land are made with a known hazardous material, it's scary to think that, for about two years during the construction of the BHWT, the now-town owned land consisting of the former Reservoir Road Easement experienced significant heavy truck traffic. I truly wonder about the wisdom of proposing to have more heavy trucks drive over these pipes, potentially damaging them (further?) and releasing asbestos fibers into the water supply. I further wonder whether the Water Commissioners even know what condition these asbestos cement pipes are in today.

What has always existed, however, at least since 1886 as a result of the easement granted by the instrument of taking dated Aug. 18, 1886 (the "Taking"), is an access driveway off of Pleasant Street. The original 30-foot wide easement and the access driveway were relocated in 2009, within the development area, to facilitate the development of several new homes on Pleasant Street. But the Taking easement wasn't just moved; it was inexplicably reduced from 30-feet wide to 12-feet wide — a reduction of 60 percent in property rights formerly enjoyed by the town. At the time the Water Commissioners agreed to the relocation and reduction, they presumably determined that the relocated easement was reasonable and sufficient in size, location and nature for their purposes. Now we're supposed to accept that that is no longer the case? And, it's just a coincidence that during the time that the Water Commissioners were negotiating the easement relocation agreement they were are also entertaining responses to their requests for proposal from the cell phone companies, if not negotiating with them?

"heartbreak" that such an opinion could be expressed in her community and demanded that respect be duly paid to her title. Dr. Shubert feels that the Committee should screen and approve any communication from the community prior to anyone being allowed to speak before their body.

Not a single word in my remarks constituted anything remotely hateful, destructive or disrespectful. My remarks were in no way of a personal nature. Nor, as Ms. McCarthy contends, do I have a vendetta against Dr. Walsh. My criticism was of a public official sorely lacking in leadership in her official capacity, disingenuous and deaf to the concerns and upset of parents.

Dr. Walsh is a public servant. Her professional behaviors and decision-making style and process are subject to public scrutiny and public criticism. If she is heartbroken by an honest and heartfelt critique of her professional judgment in a public forum, intended for exactly that purpose, she does not belong in a public position.

What transpired on Sept. 15 was a colossally classic example of shooting the messenger. Rather than taking up the issue for consideration and discussion, the focus was on how communication to the Committee should be handled going forward. Rather than address the outrage, concern and opinion expressed on behalf of many parents, I was attacked for being hateful. If you can't argue the message, you discredit and silence the messenger.

When Ms. Snowdale demonstrated that she not only heard the message but expressed her belief that the Committee bore some responsibility for mismanaging the issue and offered a sincere apology in light of the second debacle, she displayed responsiveness, accountability and real leadership. When Mr. Slanetz and Dr. Walsh continued to plead ignorance and indignation, they displayed a disconcerting lack of awareness of and concern for the duties and priorities of their positions.

I would also point out the tremendous hypocrisy inherent in Ms. McCarthy's remarks to the Committee that public comment be curtailed and managed, as she was making her un-curtailed and un-managed public comment. Had the Chair functioned as Ms. McCarthy suggests she should, her own public comment would not have been allowed.

Ms. McCarthy cynically suggests that the School Committee chair knew in advance of the content of my remarks. I did not share my remarks with the chair prior to reading them at the meeting, nor did I enlighten her ahead of time as to the nature or gist of my comments.

Lastly – the assertion that an informed and outspoken community will discourage attractive candidates from pursuing the superintendent position in Cohasset – I would only say that if candidates are dissuaded by the prospect of parents speaking their minds in our district, they should be strongly discouraged from applying for the job. What we need, especially now, is a superintendent well attuned and hopefully responsive to the upset and dissatisfaction felt by so many of our students' parents.

Help in fight against breast cancer

TO THE EDITOR:

A world with less breast cancer is a world with more birthdays. That world gets closer every October, when the American Cancer Society observes Breast Cancer Awareness Month in communities across New England. Through our Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walks throughout October — including the nation's first and largest walk on October 3 in Boston — we honor breast cancer survivors, raise awareness about the disease, and help save lives. With every step you take, you'll be giving people facing breast cancer more candles to light.

One important way we are getting the word out about hope and help in the fight against breast cancer is through the American Cancer Society's partnership with GateHouse Media for the second annual Paint the Town Pink Project. We are grateful to GateHouse Media for once again devoting the month of October to sharing the stories of local breast cancer survivors, caregivers, and researchers with their readers. I know you will be as inspired as we are to also read about the efforts of our Making Strides Against Breast Cancer participants and volunteers, as they raise awareness about breast cancer, while also raising the funds needed to provide more local services to patients and families, and more research to prevent and cure the disease.

Thank you for joining us this October as GateHouse Media and your American Cancer Society help create a world with less breast cancer and more birthdays. For information and services day or night, you can always call us at 1-800-227-2345, or visit us online at cancer.org.

POLITICAL NOTES

Job growth is my focus

By Garrett Bradley

As you know, the current global economic recession is the worst in living memory. Therefore, I have focused on statewide and local initiatives to grow jobs and I believe we are starting to see some results.

I supported bio-tech, life sciences and film tax credits that have grown new jobs here in Massachusetts. A great example is Powderhouse Production, a film production company based in Massachusetts, which has tripled its work force because of the tax incentive.

Locally, I have passed legislation that allowed construction, and permanent, jobs to be created at the Hingham Shipyard and Derby Street Shops. In addition, I helped secure millions in grant funding for infrastructure improvements in the Cohasset Village and Hingham Square areas that improved access to the businesses in those locations. I also secured $750,000 in funding this year that allowed South Shore Hospital to start construction of their new Bone and Muscle Center in Hingham that is creating over 225 new jobs. Also, this past year, we passed a law to transfer the unused DCR property in Hull to the town for development purposes.

Our efforts have made a difference locally as the unemployment rate continues to decrease and currently is 6 percent in Hingham which is significantly lower than the National Average of 9.6 percent and the State average of 8.8 percent. However, this is not enough and, if reelected, I will not rest until everyone who wants a job can find a job.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley is seeking reelection. He represents the Third Plymouth District consisting of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and one precinct in Scituate.

Coffee with Bradley

Rep. Garrett Bradley announces coffee hours: Saturday Oct. 2nd from 9-10:30am at Bradley's district office in the Sons of Italy Hall, located at 88 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Hingham; and at home of Gerard and Lorraine Burn located at 5 Pine Grove Road, in Hingham from 7-8 pm on Thursday, Oct. 7th. Cohasset's Mitch McNary breaks away for a big kick return against Scituate on Friday night. McNary's 35-yard return set up a touchdown and a quick answer to Scituate's second quarter field goal.

Skippers headed into Crusader territory

The Scituate football team had a plan on Friday night in their Border War game against Cohasset - run the ball, don't make mistakes and keep the ball away from Cohasset's potent offense.

For the better part of the first half, the plan worked to perfection, but quickly unraveled in the waning minutes of the second quarter when Cohasset exploded with their quick strike ability and excellent special teams play on the way to a 21-18 win at Scituate.

The Sailors scored first, driving from their own 30 to the Cohasset 8, capped by a 25-yard field goal by Manny Gomes in a drive that chewed up more than 10 minutes of the first and second quarters, but Cohasset answered quickly when Mitch McNary found a gap in the middle after a fake reverse on the kickoff and raced to the Scituate 35 before Casey Burns saved the touchdown with 1:29 left.

"McNary's return was big," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "He hit a seam and hit it hard. He's a tough kid to take down."

The Skippers, playing without running back Thomas Flibotte, who ran for more than 100 yards last week against Hingham, capitalized on the field position by scoring in six plays, including a fourth-and-12 conversion catch from Jeff Cavanaro to Chris Murphy that set up a 25-yard touchdown catch by Jack Carrier.

Scituate (1-2) didn't throw the ball until the final seconds of the half, when Tyler Park tried to go deep twice as time ran down.

Cohasset (3-0) took a 6-3 lead into the half.

Scituate started the second half strong when Mike Stewart nabbed his fifth interception in two games and ran it back to the Cohasset 19.

The Sailors scored two plays later on a 19-yard catch-and-run by Mike Spinola, who caught a short outside screen to the left from Tyler Park and went the distance down the sideline for the touchdown and a 10-6 lead with Gomes' extra point with 8:20 left in the third quarter.

Cohasset looked for a quick answer and got it when Cavanaro came out throwing, moving the ball into Scituate territory on a pair of long passes to Carrier, including a bomb that covered 41 yards to the one with a strong wind at his back.

Two plays later Jake Kissick ran through the middle for a 14-10 lead with Kyle Livingstone's two-yard conversion run with 4:51 left in the third.

Livingstone filled in capably for Flibotte, taking the bulk of the carries

Frustrated Incorporated

Misery is 1-0 losses

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The name of the song is called Misery by Soul Asylum and it came out in the 90's.

The chorus is Frustrated Incorporated.

That may well apply to the Cohasset boys soccer team this week after suffering a pair of 1-0 losses to Scituate (non-league) and Norwell (league).

"That 1-1 tie (with Norwell Sept. 14) is even more frustrating now," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said shortly after Wednesday's 1-0 South Shore League setback. "We were tied for first in the league, now they're in first."

Not that Willis is worried.

He likes what he's got with his 5-2-1 squad and despite the loss, felt his team played well in the Norwell game.

"Their goalie (Tom Koch) played an outstanding game," Willis said. "We hit some bullets that he laid out for. He had a great game in net. He stoned us a few times.

"It was a pretty even game. Both teams went up and down the field and had some great chances. Sam (Cohasset goalie Sam Richardson) had some unbelievable saves too. The game could have gone either way. We're in a bit of a scoring drought right now. That can happen when you play good teams. We're playing well, but when you play good teams you have to

FIELD HOCKEY

Rolling, rolling, rolling

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset field hockey team faced their first bit of adversity on Tuesday when they couldn't come out of East Bridgewater with a victory, ending with a 0-0 tie in the rain.

They responded like champs however, beating Hull 5-0 on the road on Wednesday.

Kelsey Erler scored two unassisted goals, Olivia Murphy added one and Caitlin DeAngelis and Natalie Dignam both scored for Cohasset.

"It was a great team effort," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "Whitney Jaffe hasn't allowed a goal yet, but she's had help from the midfield and the forwards. She hasn't seem a whole lot of shots, but when she does, she stops them all. It really is the whole team."

Giuliano said she talked to the team after the tie with East Bridgewater.

"We talked about how great they played," she said. "It was just a little hard luck (and a really difficult field saddled with rain). We controlled most of the game. The girls all gave 110 percent on the field. You can't ask for more than that."

Giuliano is now preparing for today's showdown with Norwell and a home battle on Monday against a Harwich team looking for payback after Cohasset beat them at Harwich a few weeks ago.

"The second time around, everyone is a little better," Giuliano said. "It gets a little harder. That's fine. It's really

The color stands out and grabs your attention, especially when Major League Baseball sluggers like David Ortiz and Alex Rodriguez come to the plate carrying pink bats, Chad Ochocinco wears pink gloves and cleats, and LeBron James runs the court in pink and black hi-tops.

It's amazing to see the support from such high-profile male players, ones who represent such great programs like the NBA's Box Out Breast Cancer and MLB's Going to Bat Against Breast Cancer. The women's game has helped support the fight against breast cancer for years. The WNBA has teamed up with the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation for its Breast Health Awareness campaign. Each April, women's college soccer teams take part in the Kicks Against Breast Cancer Tournament. During its final home weekend of the 2010 season (Oct. 8-10), the University of Notre Dame women's soccer team will wear white and pink uniforms and later auction off its autographed jerseys.

In July, another professional sport became involved. Women's Professional Soccer (WPS) teamed up with PUMA to start the Project Pink campaign. As part of the initiative, PUMA outfitted players in pink jerseys during five WPS matches. Teams auctioned off the jerseys following the games.

Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings Week Three

In the third week of action, the strengths and weaknesses of each team started to become more evident. There are 11 changes in the rankings, including two new entries – one for the boys and one for the girls. There's also a new number one on each side, one which included the biggest jump of the season. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Sept. 26.

BOYS

1. Hingham – The Harbormen overtake Marshfield after going 2-0-1 coupled with Marshfield's winless week, the team's first two losses of the season.

2. Hanover – Another move for the boys comes from Hanover. The Indians jump one rung up the ladder after they improved to 4-0-1 with a commanding win over North Quincy and a 2-2 tie with Randolph, a surprisingly dangerous team this fall.

3. Marshfield – It was a disappointing week to say the least for the Rams, who dropped two straight. They started the week with a 5-2 loss to No. 10 Sandwich (Marshfield's first loss of the season) followed by a 4-3 loss against a beatable Nauset side.

4. Weymouth – The Wildcats jump from not ranked a week ago to the number four spot. The Wildcats deserved this spot after three impressive victories against legitimately strong teams (Silver Lake, Needham, and Wellesley).

5. Cohasset – Back-to-back wins (1-0 over Abington and 2-1 against Mashpee) pushed the Skippers record to 5-0-1.

6. Norwell – With a 5-1 win over Carver and a 2-1 win over Mashpee, the Clippers improved to 4-0-2, their best start in years.

On the bubble: Duxbury, Braintree, Holbrook, Scituate, and Silver Lake.

Week two rankings:
1. Marshfield, 2. Hingham, 3. Hanover, 4. Silver Lake, 5. Norwell, 6. Cohasset

GIRLS

1. Marshfield – For the first time in the two-year history of Inside the 6, the Lady Rams earn the top spot, and deservedly so as they stretched their winning streak to six straight to start the season. They beat Norwell, Sandwich, and Nauset last week by a combined score of 7-0.

2. Plymouth South – The Lady Panthers still hold down that number two spot. They improved to 4-0-2 with a 3-0 win over Dennis-Yarmouth, a 1-1 tie against Falmouth, and a 7-1 win over Sacred Heart.

3. Duxbury – Falling from the number one spot for the first time since last year, the Lady Dragons lost their first game of the season, a 1-0 defeat to Hingham. Duxbury did beat North Quincy, 3-0, but couldn't hold on to that top spot in the rankings.

4. Scituate – Ross Maki certainly has a squad that could make a great run come tournament time. The Lady Sailors, making their Inside the 6 debut this fall, ran their record to 5-1 with wins over Hingham (3-0), Hanover (1-0), and Quincy (5-1).

5. Weymouth – The Lady Wildcats had a great week and recorded their fourth straight shutout and fifth straight victory to retain their number five ranking. They beat Needham, 2-1, and drew 1-1 with Wellesley.

6. Norwell – The biggest plunge of the week came from Norwell. Two tough losses to Division 1 powerhouses Marshfield and Bridgewater-Raynham coupled with solid performances from Scituate and Weymouth last week, sent the Lady Clippers down a few notches. The Norwell girls did score a 6-0 win over Harwich last week.

On the bubble: Plymouth North, Pembroke, Holbrook, Braintree, and Hingham

Week two rankings:
1. Duxbury, 2. Plymouth South, 3. Norwell, 4. Marshfield, 5. Weymouth, 6. Pembroke

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@cnc.com.

This Week's High 5 (Week 5):

Pembroke Boys (Pembroke)- No sense in picking one guy off of this list. Proving last year's All State title was no fluke, the Titans arrived at Bowdoin Park in upstate NY for the Bowdoin Classic Saturday, and just put their stamp on the Northeast. Embroiled in a dogfight with Lincroft, New Jersey's US No. 6 Christian Brothers Academy, the Titans would eventually lose 52-55, but take 2nd by over 70 points. Pembroke (US No. 25) used a great performance from Wesley Gallagher in 4th (16:26) to lead the way, but the real story was the short spread from #1-5, with Ryan Kelley (6th, 16:42), Brendan Adams (12th, 17:01), Joe Vercollone (12th, 17:10), and Ryan Moran (20th, 17:29) holding down the fort.

John McKeon (Abington)- McKeon ran teamless at Warwick, RI's Ocean State XC Invitational this weekend, and simply did work, holding his own against some of the region's best. McKeon's 41st place 17:35 was run in brutal conditions, featuring dust, heat, and wind, and not only does he look like a favorite to win the South Shore League's individual title, but is a threat in DVI EMass as well. Look for that 5K time to head south in the upcoming weeks, as the weather and training start to cooperate for some fast efforts.

Owen Wiggins (Norwell)- Clippers Coach Chuck Martin told me earlier this season that his top harrier, Wiggins, would show much improvement throughout the year. Apparently, this is what he meant. Wiggins led all local finishers at Ocean State in the Division I (small schools) race, taking 21st place in 17:40. Norwell placed 20th out of 38 teams, and needs its pack to tighten up quite a bit to make noise in DVI, but Wiggins's performance bodes well for the Clippers, who need a front-runner to take a small number at EMass to prevail.

Kelsey Steeves (Notre Dame)- Placing 4th at the Amherst Invitational is an impressive feat for any team, but #2 NDA did it and knocked off two teams (No. 4 Hingham and No. 5 Marshfield) chasing them in this poll. Steeves (19th, 20:55) finished right behind teammate Kelsey Whitaker and will play the role of glue-girl this fall, trying to keep together a solid pack that features Sophia Love, Jessica Bouzan, and freshman Olivia Lanagan. Those in the know see NDA as an All State team, and Steeves's performance on Saturday makes me a believer as well.

Andrea Hicks (Weymouth)- The senior captain led a strong pack to a 19-43 drubbing of archrival Newton North, cementing Weymouth's place as a true state champion contender. Jill Corcoran was the race winner in 19:15, but it was Hicks's strong effort in 21:01, only behind North's Margo Gillis, that held the pack of Molly Barker, Julie Tevenan, Bridget Jaklitsch, and Morgan Fitzgibbon ahead of North's No. 2 runner, and gave the Tigers their most lopsided loss in recent memory.

Meet to Watch (Week 5):
The first in-state invitational meet is this coming Saturday at Wrentham, and should feature most of the South Shore's best teams and individuals. The Bay State Invitational comes on the heels of Amherst, Ocean State, and Manchester, all New England area meets that have grown in popularity in recent years. However, Bay State's is usually a solid indicator of where Mass. teams will end up come November, especially when it is run this late. Look for Weymouth's boys and girls teams to make their invitational debut here, and appearances from Notre Dame (last year's best local girls finishers) Pembroke's girls, and both Duxbury teams.

Mike Miller is the long-time running coach at Weymouth High School and lives for the sport. His poll will appear weekly during the cross-country season.

for the Skippers running for more than 70 yards on the night.

"Kyle Livingstone did a great job," Afanasiw said. "He ran his butt off, especially in the second half. He had an extra step in him. He took it on his shoulders."

Cohasset's defense stepped up on Scituate's next possession, sacking Park on second down for a huge loss.

Two plays later, Scituate found itself in trouble after a punt into the wind netted two yards, giving the Skippers a first down at the Sailors' 17.

"The conditions were tough," Afanasiw said about the punt. "The wind negated half the field. That punt could have been us."

Two plays after that, after a penalty took it back to the 22, Livingstone blasted through the middle to the four on third down and added a four-yard touchdown for a 21-10 lead with Jamie Faber's extra point boot with 43 seconds left in the third quarter.

With 6:20 left to play and Cohasset facing a fourth-and-inches at their own 25, the Sailors were called offside to extend a Skipper drive.

With the 21-10 lead, Cohasset was looking to run the ball and play Scituate's game of keeping the ball away from Scituate.

The Sailors battled to the end, keeping hope alive when Park connected with Lucas Barisano on a fourth-and-very long bomb that gave Scituate a first down at the Cohasset 8 with 1:10 left to play.

Two plays later, Park hit Casey Burns in the end zone and Wes Hawkins ran in a conversion to cut the lead to 21-18 with 1:04 left.

Cohasset put the game away when Justin Yeager pulled in Scituate's onside kick and ran the clock.

"This was not an easy win," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "This is a very good Scituate team. Tonight the whole team played very well, offense, defense and special teams."

Friday night, the Skippers will be on the road for the second week in a row, but the ride is a little longer with a trip to Carver.

"It's always tough to play there," Afanasiw said about the upcoming trip.

Carver has some weapons.

Two weeks ago in a 19-6 loss to Pembroke, Mike Bambery ran for 96 yards and Zach Wiggins added 88 yards, while the Crusaders had nearly 350 yards of total offense.

Carver kept the game close into the second half, trailing just 7-6 at the break.

That said, last week, Cardinal Spellman's Blaise Branch ran for 201 yards on 15 carries and the defense held Carver to 26 yards of total offense in a 35-8 Spellman victory that dropped the Crusaders to 0-3.

Kickoff is at 7 p.m.

put the ball in the net. Last week we won the close games. This week we lost them."

Anders Goetz had a few excellent chances that were stopped by Koch and Jamie Timothy played well for the Skippers.

While Cohasset has two losses, one thing that hasn't changed is the defense, which still hasn't allowed more than one goal in a game.

"John McGoldrick played well," Willis said. "And so did Travers Craven. Joe Buckley had his best game of the season. They're all playing very well."

Cohasset plays Rockland and Carver on Friday and Tuesday, then has eight days until the next game.

"We're going to work hard to take care of business with Rockland and Carver then we're going to have another training camp," Willis said. "We have to keep winning. The league isn't over just because we're a game behind Norwell. There are a lot of teams in the middle of the standings who lost by a goal to both of us. They'll be looking for payback. It will be interesting to see how the rest of the season plays out."

exciting. We're having so much fun. The girls are doing what they want to be doing."

For anyone wanting to watch the Harwich game, there will be a small pep rally at about 2:30 p.m. before the game, to help fire up the team.

With the win in Hull, Cohasset improved to 7-0-1 and needs just three points to fulfill one goal, qualifying for the MIAA Tournament.

"I'm knocking on wood as you say that," Giuliano said. "Anything can happen. There's a long way to go."

PUMA scores with Project Pink

FROM PROJECT PINK, PAGE 17

"I wanted to get involved more as a professional athlete last year, and since there were a bunch of us, Puma decided to create this initiative called Project Pink," Osborne said. "I think that's why it's so special because we wanted to get more involved. I have had friends who have had family members go through the process and you just never know when you or your loved ones (might) ever have to go through it."

In addition to the five WPS games that highlighted Project Pink, PUMA also launched a Project Pink line of merchandise. PUMA athletes such as Osborne have gone all over the country to talk about Project Pink.

"I think it's really special and powerful how we can help as WPS athletes, (and) I think it's really cool how Puma has set it up and let the public, fans, and everyone donate to their favorite charity," Osborne said. "Plus, lots of girls that play soccer need to know what the pink represents, and since they love pink, they got even more involved with Project Pink. I went to tournaments to talk about Project Pink, and it was so great to see how many kids got involved."

More than 20 pink Boston Breakers jerseys were auctioned off after their July 31 game against the Washington Freedom. The auction brought in more than $7,000. The players never lost sight as to what the pink jerseys stood for and how much breast cancer affected most of the people on the field that night.

"My grandma had breast cancer, and I know a lot of people that have been affected," Boston Breakers and U.S. Women's National Team forward Lauren Cheney said. "To be playing for this cause and to be auctioning off these jerseys, it was fun, and it made me want to work a little bit harder."

Project Pink gear will be available to purchase on PUMA's website through the end of October. The best part is that all of the proceeds of the sale of the merchandise will be donated to a breast cancer affiliated nonprofit. PUMA held a national online contest that ran through the end of September where people could vote for a nonprofit. The jerseys look great. I went to the game the Breakers wore them. And now you can buy replica game jerseys as well as T-shirts.

"It means so much," Boston Breakers midfielder Jordan Angeli said. "All of us have been affected in some way by breast cancer. My great-grandma had it and fought it. It meant something a little bit extra for us to be out there and that our fans bid and raised so much money for the charity meant even more."

PUMA came up with yet another brilliant idea for its Project Pink campaign. They used the power of Twitter to spread the word. PUMA will donate $1 (up to $25,000) anytime someone tweets the hashtag #projectpink, meaning that anytime you write something on Twitter, just put #projectpink (all one word) at the end. You just contributed $1. PUMA started its Project Pink push on Twitter back in August, which is one more reason this whole initiative makes people aware of the disease throughout the year.

Oftentimes, we're reminded of causes during the months dedicated to raising awareness. PUMA started this initiative more than two months before National Breast Cancer Awareness Month with a goal of making people aware before and after October. Chalk this one up as a win PUMA.

Inspirational visit

COURTESY PHOTO/JEANNE DOUGHTY

Scituate/Cohasset third and fourth grade youth football players got a big unexpected treat on Thursday (Sept. 23) when they received a visit from New England Patriots receiver Wes Welker, who is one of the most inspirational athletes in the area, and a growing legend because of the way he came back from a crippling knee injury months before he was expected to play. Welker, a friend of coach Paul Doughty, talked about staying healthy with diet and exercise, health in general, then stuck around and signed autographs.

Cohasset Sports Complex celebrates Grand Opening indoor facility also contains four garage door that can open or close depending on the season.

Cohasset Sports Complex also offers outdoor field space with the same turf field. The outside field has professional standard flood lights meaning rain or shine, night or day play is possible.

Inside the complex there is a pro-shop and a snack shop, along with a sky-lounge area with plasma screen TV's and food and beverages available.

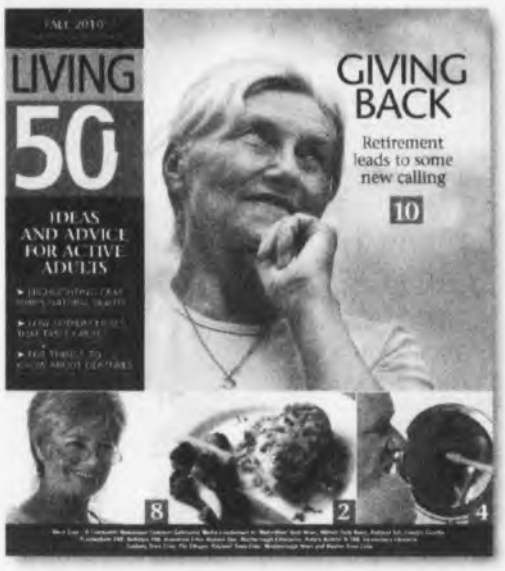
The Complex is affiliated with the Galway Rovers Football Club, one of the top soccer clubs on the South Shore.

They have already had college teams training at the Complex and the Boston Breakers have had events at the site.

The opening festivities went extremely well.

"It was very much a family oriented event," said Complex Director of Marketing Michael Ridley, who also coaches Youth Soccer in Cohasset. "We had future stars from 18 months to people who may have fancied themselves as pros in their younger days. It was a nice dynamic, a carnival atmosphere. There were a lot of Galways and Youth Soccer people there. That was what we were hoping for. We don't want to be just a facility. We want to be a sports community. We're here for anyone who loves sports and wants to be a part of a healthy lifestyle."

Ridley expects to see a wide cross section of people using the facility.



They don't just rent fields, but there are camps, all kinds of training, facilities for birthday parties and events both large and small. Along with soccer, there will probably be some lacrosse plated there and other sports as well.

For more information, visit www.cohassetsportscomplex.com

The new sports complex in Cohasset had its grand opening on Saturday. There is an outdoor turf field and an indoor turf field.

October: National Physical Therapy Month

Let's get physical

LIVING WELL

JOAN F. WRIGHT, CMC

With the dramatic increase in obesity among children and adults, and the consequential rise in Type 2 diabetes, great effort is being made to promote daily exercise among all age groups.

Editor's note: Living Well is a new monthly column provided by Joan F. Wright on behalf of the NVNA & Hospice. The monthly subjects of the column will coincide with National Health Observances as outlined by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The column will appear the first week of each amonth.

When we think of physical therapy, we usually think of recovering or rehabbing from an injury. But the focus during National Physical Therapy Month is to promote healthy practices that prevent injuries. The American Physical Therapy Association has produced "Smart Moves for Families" to encourage incorporating physical activity and exercise into our daily lives.

Exercise and physical activity often conjures up visions of gyms and tracks and places that many of us dread to enter. We find excuses that we have no time, don't like to exercise in front of others, can't keep up with the class, etc. But, the advent of Wii Fit, Dance Dance Revolution and a host of other DVD fitness programs squelch those excuses in short order. Now, contemporary technology brings a myriad of exercise options right into our family rooms through our televisions and computers so we can get fit in the comfort of our own homes. And, we can actually have fun doing it.

In fact, one doesn't even need an actual fitness program on the television to use it for "workout time." Doing sit-ups or push-ups during commercial breaks is a good practice to keep on target. Having an exercise buddy is another good practice. Meeting someone for a daily walk or yoga class or bike ride makes the activity social and fun. It also makes it more difficult to skip an activity when you know someone else is counting on you!

With the dramatic increase in obesity among children and adults, and the consequential rise in Type 2 diabetes, great effort is being made to promote daily exercise among all age groups. The key to anyone's success is simple: find activities that you like to ensure you'll actually do them. Start small; do activities for 10 minutes at a time. The U.S. Dept. of Health & Human Services' physical activity guidelines suggest moderate exercises for at least 2.5 hours per week or vigorous activities for at least 1.25 hours per week. Moderate exercise includes activities where you can talk while you do them such as ballroom and line dancing; biking on level ground; canoeing; basic gardening such as raking or trimming shrubs; doubles tennis; and water aerobics. Vigorous activities push the body harder and include aerobic dance; biking faster than 10 miles per hour; fast dancing; heavy gardening such as digging; hiking uphill; jumping rope; basketball, soccer, and hockey; and martial arts such as karate.

Another preventative measure offered by physical therapists is backpack safety tips. We've all seen kids with their backpacks slung over one shoulder or sagging from excess weight, which creates posture problems, muscle imbalances and pain. Wear both straps to evenly distribute the weight of the backpack. Position the backpack over the strongest mid-back muscles by adjusting the shoulder straps so the pack does not extend below the low back. And keep the load of the backpack no more than 15 percent of the child's bodyweight.

Healthy practices and smart moves keep us moving forward.

LIFE AT CHS

NATALIE DIGNAM

Hello CHS! School is in full swing and this week has been all about the Wiz! Callbacks have been posted in the lower lobby, so check them out! A reminder that this Sunday is Discover the Woods Day at Holly Hill farm, so drop by Mr. Buckley's if you want to volunteer.

Also this week, check out the International Club, which is focused on educating students about different cultures around the world. Mr. Kotter, the club advisor, noted that the club is much more than their lunch meetings suggest. The International Club has piqued student interest by cooking food from a different country one day each week. However, they hope to expand their activities as the club grows. Cally Altholz, one of the club's presidents, advertises the International Food Night that takes place every spring and encourages students to come and enjoy the food and entertainment. She also hopes to create an international cookbook by the end of the year.

Rhiana Fitts and Pat Dunn, the other club presidents, express a similar ambition to expand interest in the club. Rhiana Fitts described the goals the club plans to accomplish, stating, "We will be working throughout the year to create the international cookbook. We want to raise enough money to provide an international scholarship for one of our members."

All three-club presidents enthusiastically welcome new members, so head down to Mr. Kotter's and find out more about International Club!

National Merit Commended Students named

Principal Joel Antolini of Cohasset Middle High School announced that William Craven, Patrick Dunn, Jay Michael Monaco, Greta Shwachman and Emily Toomey have been named Commended Students in the 2011 National Merit Scholarship Program. About 34,000 Commended Students throughout the nation are being recognized for their exceptional academic promise. Although they will not continue in the 2011 competition for National Merit Scholarships, Commended Students place among the top 5 top percent of more than 1.5 million students who entered the 2011 competition by taking the 2009 Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test.

"Recognition of high-achieving students is essential to advancing educational excellence in our nation," said a spokesperson for NMSC. "As demonstrated by their outstanding performance in our highly competitive program, the young men and women named Commended Students represent some of the most academically talented students in our country. We sincerely hope this recognition will enhance their educational opportunities and encourage them in their pursuit of academic success."

Sunrise of Cohasset hits a homerun

Sunrise Assisted Living of Cohasset and many local businesses teamed up for a raffle to support the South Shore Memory Walk at Plimoth Plantation. James Barber and Susan Gregorio, both directors of sales and marketing for Sunrise, said, "It was so encouraging to see how many local businesses supported the cause." Most of the local businesses donated gift certificates and Ocean Edge Resort & Club donated a free weekend stay at the resort. Raffle tickets were sold at the Sunrise community and Cohasset Farmer's Market. Local donors were: Cohasset Pizza, Victoria's Pizza, Papa Gino's, Curtis Liquors, A Taste for Wine & Spirits, Cohasset Plaza Dry Cleaners, Hingham Lumber, Bella Aesthetics, Constantine's Mediterranean Restaurant and South Shore Athletic Club.

After all the donations of gift certificates, the raffle raised more than $300, which was given to the South Shore Alzheimer's Association. Chris Mele, executive director of Sunrise Cohasset, said, "Sunrise specializes in memory impairment and we are constantly working in conjunction with all organizations and associations dedicated to finding a cure for dementia." Registered nurse Donna Marshall R.N said, "our healthcare team and our staff strive to provide a quality of life that our seniors deserve. Preserving dignity and enriching the lives of our seniors is our passion and we will continue to support all organizations dedicated to fighting Alzheimer's disease."

Cultural Council grant applications due

Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community. In anticipation of the Oct. 15 deadline, the Cultural Council will host a Community Input Meeting at 7 p.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 6., at Town Hall. All are welcome to attend and contribute thoughts on the funding initiatives of the town Cultural Council.

According to council spokesperson Selene Eymer, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset including exhibits, festivals, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures. Cohasset Cultural Council will also entertain funding proposals from schools and youth groups through the PASS Program, which provides subsidies for school-age children to attend cultural field trips.

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state Legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute approximately $3,800 in grant funds. Previously funded projects include: South Shore Art Center Arts Festival, Chorale Art Society, Town of Cohasset Recreation Department Summer Concert Series, Rusty Skippers concert band, and more.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 11, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your moodier side might emerge this week. But the dark period should pass in time for the party-loving Lamb to go on a happy gambol with some very special people this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Yet again, you show your skill at being able to indulge in your love of the arts this week while still taking care of practical matters, including some still-unfinished business matters.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A potential change might appear to be what you've been looking for. In any event, consider both the negative as well as the positive possibilities before making any sort of decision.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Relationships continue to dominate your aspect this week on a mostly positive level, with just a few problem areas you can smooth over. Also, try to be flexible about travel plans.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You love being on center stage, and while you absolutely purr at the sound of all that praise, be careful not to take on too many commitments at the expense of time spent with loved ones.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might feel that you need to get involved in a matter concerning a friend or relative. But while the issues appear to be cut and dried, they might not be. Get more facts before you act.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A suggestion about a policy change could create heated reactions. Keep your mind open and resist joining in with naysayers unless they can show a real basis for their position.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) While potential career changes warrant your interest, don't ignore current job responsibilities. A personal relationship can also benefit from more of your attention.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Don't guess at what the facts might be if you hope to make the best decision possible. The wise course is to ask direct questions and act on the answers you get.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your efforts involving that pesky problem should soon show positive signs of being resolved. This would allow you to shift some of your focus in another direction.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) While you enjoy well-deserved praise for getting a difficult job done, there's no time to relax. A new challenge looms. Expect more support from a once-strong critic.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might still have explaining to do about your decision, but support grows as you continue to make your case. You also might want to start making plans for the upcoming holidays.

BORN THIS WEEK:
You insist on making decisions based on facts, not on popular opinions. Have you considered a career in science?

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Blessing of the Animals for the whole community

St. Stephen's Church is inviting all of God's creatures, along with their human owners, to a special "Blessing of the Animals" at 5 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 3rd on the Cohasset town common. The blessing is being held in conjunction with the Feast of St. Francis of Assisi, the patron saint of animals.

Every pet will receive an individual blessing and a special St. Francis paw print pet tag that reads, "St. Francis, keep my friend safe." There will be home-baked treats for our canine and feline friends made by the St Stephen's ROX youth group, and light refreshments will be provided for pet owners.

All who attend are invited to bring a donation of dog or cat food for the Scituate Animal Shelter.

We all know how much pets enrich our lives. Don't miss this opportunity to acknowledge the special relationship you have with your pet. Bring your furry, feathered or finned friend to the "Blessing of the Animals" this Sunday. Cats, dogs, birds, frogs and all pets great and small, regardless of denomination, are welcomed! Best pet behavior and leashes are especially encouraged.

St. Francis of Assisi is remembered as the patron saint of animals and the environment. Born in Italy in 1182, he was noted for his commitment to justice and his deep love of all creation. Francis died on October 3, 1226.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Charlotte Ann Sommerfeld

COHASSET – Charlotte Ann Sommerfeld (nee Abrams) passed away Friday, Sept. 24, 2010 after a short illness. Born in 1932 and raised in Long Beach, Calif., she graduated from the University of Arizona in Tucson. Charlotte began her long teaching career on a Navy base in French Morocco, where she met and became engaged to Nicholas Sommerfeld. Charlotte and Nick settled in Cambridge, where she taught at Shady Hill School for almost 20 years. They have lived in Cohasset for the past 24 years. Charlotte was an avid cook and gardener, and she and Nick traveled abroad as often as they could.

Donations in Charlotte's memory may be made to Shady Hill School, 178 Coolidge Hill, Cambridge MA 02138.

Nancy Black

COHASSET – Nancy Black of Cohasset looked for perfection on the golf course her entire life. Mrs. Black, who passed away at the age of 89 after a short illness Thursday, Sept. 23, never found the perfect round of golf, but she came close.

During her lifelong quest for perfection, she made a mark on the game that may never be duplicated. She won the Massachusetts Amateur championship in 1946 and 1947 as a young woman.

After taking time away from the game to raise her children, Debby and Paul, she returned to the game and became the most dominate woman golfer in Massachusetts for over 50 years. She won the state senior title 13 times, Cohasset Golf Club's championship six times, and dozens of other state and national titles during her career.

Prior to joing Cohasset Golf Club, Mrs. Black was a member of Marshfield Country Club.

Her ability to remain at a high level of performance was due to her never ending quest to improve.

"I enjoy the challenge of the game as much now as I did in my 20s." Nancy said in a 1989 interview. "To this day I am looking for the perfect round of golf although it may never come. I am always trying to improve."

Mrs. Black was always keeping up with the changes in the game. When the big headed graphite drivers first came out, she was one of the first to add one to her bag. She never resisted the changes in technology that have been so prevalent in the game of golf.

"My father told me when I got started that the bram will only pass on one thought at a time." she once said. "So go out and just hit the ball. He told me if you're going to miss it, at least miss it quickly. That's why I play 18 holes in three hours."

Mrs. Black gave back to golf in a number of ways. She served as president of the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts from 1968-1971 and was vice present before that. She was president of the Women's South Shore Golf League and served as a member of Cohasset Golf Club's executive committee. Nancy also served as a member of the USGA's Women's Committee and as treasurer of the New England Women's Golf Association.

Mrs. Black was a mentor to many younger golfers over the years. Her intense desire to win never dissipated and her respect for the game and its rules was legendary. A few years ago she was playing in a major two-ball tournament with a younger partner. The twosome was among the leaders in the event after their first round. Nancy was reviewing the round with her partner when she noticed she had put a wrong score on the card on one of the holes. It was a higher score than they actually made. Nevertheless, she realized she had signed an inaccurate score card and immediately went to the scoring committee to disqualify her team.

"Golf being an individual sport teaches patience, honestly, humility and good sportsmanship - all important qualities in developing one's character." Nancy once said. "Golf, I believe made me a better person."

Mrs. Black grew up in Boston and summered in Halifax. She graduated from LaSalle Junior College and lived in Hingham and Scituate before settling in Cohasset.

Mrs. Black leaves her daughter, Debby Drain and her husband David of Duxbury; and son Paul Black Jr. and his wife Monica of Hingham. She also leaves four grandchildren, Geoff and Tim Drain and Ian and Hannah Black. Her beloved husband, Paul Black Sr., predeceased her in 1990, as did her dear sister, Priscilla Bailey in 2003.

A celebration of life will be held Friday, Oct. 15, 2010, at 1:30 p.m. at the Hingham Congregational Church, 366 Main St., Hingham.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the First Tee of Massachusetts, c/o Joseph McCabe, Executive Director, 300 West Main St., Norton, MA 02766.

Arrangements by the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, Hingham. For online guest book, please visit www.downingchapel.com.

Pulse racing to rock

Wicked Local Web Jams winners to play Plymouth's Guru Grille Oct. 16

Pulse

Fate brought them together.

Fate and freshman year at Stonehill College.

Hingham brothers William and Paul Keough had been jamming together on guitar and bass for several years. But to build a rock band, they needed a drummer.

New York native and self-taught drummer Danny Padilla, it so happened, came to college looking for a band.

"Danny lived on the same (dormitory) floor," said William. The two freshmen became fast friends and began playing "casually" together around campus.

Paul, who had graduated Stonehill in 2009, returned to his alma mater to join William and Danny playing the school's coffeehouse circuit and it wasn't long before they were looking to start doing gigs beyond Stonehill.

In March, the Keough brothers and Padilla officially formed Pulse, an alternative rock group heavily influenced by bands like U2.

"We held our first rehearsals in my basement in Hingham," William said.

The group also put out a five-song EP this spring including the tune "Splintered Hearts", their winning entry in Wicked Local Web Jams 4 – GateHouse Media's online battle of the bands.

As for Pulse's particular sound, William describes the group as "harder than most alternative bands."

While Paul is a fan of the progressive rock music that bands like Yes and Rush made popular, and Danny digs punk and metal, alt rock is the common ground on which the three band mates meet.

All of Pulse's members got an early start in music. For Paul and William it was piano lessons and living room performances in front of relatives and friends in the beginning. William rebelled against piano and pushed to play the guitar as he was heading into high school. Luckily his mom supported his choice, got him lessons and a guitar and he played it "incessantly" for three years, he said.

Paul, who played keyboards in a band at Stonehill when he was a freshman, branched out and took up the bass, inspired by his friend, the bassist in the Johnny Scifo band.

"My brother was learning to play the guitar, and I decided to learn the bass," Paul said.

"It took me 2-1/2 years, but I taught myself." Danny's been playing drums for six years now and has played in a number of bands before becoming part of Pulse.

Since forming this spring, Pulse has played a few gigs off the Stonehill campus including a show at Worcester's Palladium and the "Stop, Drop, Hip Hop, and Rock" event at the Orpheum Theatre in Foxborough in August.

While they admit they could use some better equipment, Pulse members say they love rocking live.

"Every time we perform live, it's like living the dream," William said.

"Feeding off the crowd's energy makes our performance that much better," Paul adds. "We're able to take it to another level."

Playing gigs during the school year is tough for the student rockers, due to busy academic schedules. While William — a double major in music and business management, and Danny — a psychology and Spanish major, are busy with their sophomore class load at Stonehill, Paul works in marketing at Safety First in Foxborough and is going to grad school at Boston University for a master's degree in advertising.

Paul is counting on his marketing background to help promote Pulse. The group is already making good use of social networking websites like Facebook to grow their fan base.

"It's (Facebook) completely changed how you can reach out to people," said Paul. "It's an amazingly powerful tool."

William credits their use of sites like Facebook and their band's web page in helping them win the Web Jams 4 title.

"We posted links to the Web Jams voting page on Facebook – our individual and band site. It really carried us through the semi-final and final rounds."

Graceful winners, the group gives props to the other Web Jams bands in the competition.

"We really appreciate all the other great musicians in Web Jams," William says. "They were all amazingly talented."

With their win, Pulse members are looking forward to making the most of their Web Jams prize – 10 free hours of recording time courtesy of MDI Productions in Plymouth, and a chance to perform live in the Wicked Local Web Jams 4 winners' show at the Guru Grille, also in Plymouth.

"It's tough to do shows during the school year," said Danny. "It'll be good to get in the studio," he said, adding the group has 10 original songs they're thinking about recording.

"There's about 35 songs we could record," William says, correcting Danny, "including an awesome version" of their winning tune "Splintered Hearts."

As Pulse members balance books and keep the beat, they remain focused on a goal of being a full-time touring rock band.

"Our dream is to make a living on music," says William.

"Nothing could be better than getting paid for what you love to do," adds Danny.

For those about to 'Rock'...

Memorable '80s music takes center stage

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Singer Sean Jenness knows a thing or two about 1980s rock bands – having formed his first before he even hit high school.

"I was only 13 when my friends and I started the now legendary 'Tinted Images.' We played our first gig at the Mansfield VFW Hall. We were very young, but we were playing Rush, Tom Petty, and J. Geils," recalled Jenness by telephone recently from a Chicago tour stop of the musical "Rock of Ages." The Tony-nominated show, which has been on Broadway since March 2009, comes to Boston's Colonial Theatre next week on its first national tour with Tony-nominated star, and fourth-season "American Idol" finalist, Constantine Maroulis in tow.

Whether he is on-stage in the ensemble or backstage in the booth

Mansfield native Sean Jenness.

"Rock of Ages" will be at the Colonial Theatre in Boston, Oct. 6-17.

beefing up the male dancer vocals in "Rock of Ages," Jenness is putting his first-hand knowledge of some of the iconic rock songs of the '80s to use on a score that features hits by Journey, Styx, REO Speedwagon, Foreigner, Pat Benatar, Whitesnake, and Boston's own Extreme to tell the tale of a small-town girl and a big-city dreamer who find romance in an L.A. rock club in 1987.

"The thing about this show is that it is undeniably a lot of fun. It takes '80s big-hair-band songs and weaves them into a funny and sweet love story set in a 1980s Sunset Strip nightclub. There are so many great songs in this show – including 'Wanted Dead or Alive' by Bon Jovi, 'Here I Go Again' by Whitesnake, and Journey's 'Don't Stop Believin'' — and the lyrics really resonate with the story. And who doesn't love a Whitesnake tune?"

Jenness has not only fronted many different bands since Tinted Images played its final gig at his Mansfield High School Senior Banquet in 1986, but has also appeared in tours of Broadway shows known for rock-infused scores, including "Hair" and "The Who's Tommy."

"I did a show called 'The Civil War' in Washington, D.C., and 'Jerry Springer: The Opera' at Carnegie Hall, but I do often get hired to do rock shows, because that's where my voice lands. I'm a power singer. I probably won't be doing 'Guys and Dolls,' although I did do it at Mansfield High. These days, however, they pay me to scream."

As the current lead singer of The Doug Flutie Band — featuring the former pro football quarterback and Heisman Trophy winner on drums — Jenness plays some regular gigs where the fans have also been known to do some screaming.

"We play the Super Bowl every year and we'll be in Dallas for next year's game. We also play a lot of other NFL events and many shows to benefit the Doug Flutie Jr., Foundation for Autism. It's a great group, too, with Doug, of course, and also his brother, Darren, on guitar. We play classic rock like Rod Stewart, AC/DC and Boston."

During his two weeks in town next month, Jenness is pretty sure that when he is not on stage at the Colonial, he might just be on other local stages.

Two of my friends from Tinted Images, Matt Tighe and Zac Casker, are still playing together in a group called Radio Daze. If the scheduling works out, I might join them for a gig in Mansfield. My best friend, Dave Baker, is also drummer with bands all over the South Shore. I imagine we'll also be getting together to play at The Next Page in Weymouth. My aunt, Rosemary Minehan-Maher, lives in Duxbury. Rosemary and her daughter Ann are coming to see 'Rock of Ages,' so I'm looking forward to spending time with them, too."

"Rock of Ages" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., Boston, Oct. 6-17. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-982-2787 or go online at BroadwayAcrossAmerica.com/Boston.

Hollywood makes a comeback

Independent movie sets up shop in town

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset has gone Hollywood again.

After a long hiatus from the big screen the Town of Cohasset got its close up this week.

On Monday morning, a film crew for an independent movie set up shop at the Red Lion Inn. It is the first location of several landmarks in and around the South Shore where the film is being shot.

The movie is called "Sunny Side Up" and stars a local actress and producer Christy Scott Cashman (she also wrote the screenplay) and Parker Posey, who starred in "Best in Show" among other movies.

The crew could be found at the Red Lion Inn most of this week, but also shot scenes in the village on Thursday, and JJ's Dairy Hut.

The movie follows Millie Bartlett (Cashman), who is struggling to keep the chicken farm that has been in her family for generations afloat. A chance meeting (shot at the Red Lion Inn) brings her together with Angelica Feelgoode (Posey), an energy and fitness guru to the stars. To help support her farm and keep her business afloat, Millie agrees to film a reality show with her new friend.

Cohasset and the South Shore were chosen because "it's got the look," said Ryan Cook, assistant location manager for the film. He was charged by the film's producers to find the spaces and locations that fit the feel and look desired for the film.

"Cohasset has a quaint feel to it. A fishing town feel and that's what we were looking for," Cook said. The film is meant to take place in a small

Triathlon approved

Selectmen meet again with organizers, police, fire

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The 2011 Cohasset Triathlon is a go.

After the second discussion with the Board of Selectmen Cohasset resident and triathlon race director Bill Burnett walked away with approval for the race. On Sunday, June 26, 850 athletes will compete, starting at 8a.m., in the Fifth Annual Cohasset Triathlon.

That end result was supported by all the members of the board of selectmen, but not without discussion and concerns expressed. The start time and the impact on residents' ability to go about their business, whether it was to church, a cup of coffee or a day at the beach, were key issues.

The Cohasset Triathlon is a swim, bike, run race and its course includes much of the town's main roads. This past year, complaints about the triathlon's impact on the town were up as some residents found it difficult to get to where they needed to be.

Some changes to the race, in an effort to lessen the impact on the town, were agreed to. In particular, the way the athletes enter the water (the first leg of the race is a swim off Sandy Beach) will be changed with the slowest waves (beginner triathletes) entering the water first. The expectation is to shorten the time racers are on the course overall.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley suggested the race begin at 7a.m. to lessen the impact on the rest of the town. However, the heads of public safety (fire, police and harbormaster) had concerns with having the race begin before 8a.m.

Cancer centers at South Shore, Jordan hospitals mark first year

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBS@CNC.COM

Thanks to today's medical technology, breast cancer is no longer an unbeatable disease.

That modern technology is available on the South Shore at institutions like Jordan Hospital's new breast center in Plymouth and South Shore Hospital's new Dana Farber/Brigham and Women's Cancer Center in Weymouth.

The breast center at Jordan Hospital is now a year old, as is the new cancer center at South Shore Hospital.

"We've exceeded all of our expectations this year," said Fran Friend, executive director of South Shore Hospital's cancer center. "We've gained about 1,000 new patients. That means we're capturing the market we've been after — the people traveling to Boston for cancer care."

South Shore Hospital Cancer Center Executive Director Fran Friend says there is a device called the linear accelerator at SSH that helps target breast cancer tumors directly, without harming any of the tissue near the tumor.

Dr. Matthew Koomey, a medical oncologist at Jordan Hospital and also director of the facility's cancer center, including the new breast cancer division, said many new patients are visiting his facility as well.

"People come to us from far away because of our reputation," he said.

Koomey added Jordan Hospital has a very strong history in the way of breast cancer surgery, noting that Dr.

Haunted happenings event correction

In an article that appeared on page 1 of last week's Mariner titled "Haunting and history" about the Historical Society's upcoming Haunted Happenings event it was reported there would be a psychic medium at the dinner party event at Stoneleigh. This was inaccurate. No psychic readings will be available at the dinner party. We apologize for the error.

Psychic medium Dee White Dove will offer personalized readings to those interested at the Historical Society headquarters on Saturday, Oct. 16 from 10 a.m. to 4p.m. Call the society at 781-383-1434 to make an appointment. Cost is $20 for 20 minutes.

AWOL soldier sent to Fort Knox

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police confirmed the warrant out of Fort Knox, Kentucky, and notified the Army they had the man in custody.

A 23-year-old Weymouth man, who is allegedly a deserter from the U.S. Army, was arrested in Cohasset following a traffic stop on Monday at 2 p.m., police said.

An officer on traffic patrol ran a random registry check on the plate of the 1998 Acura that was traveling on Route 3A that revealed the registered owner was wanted by the U.S. Army for desertion.

Police confirmed the warrant out of Fort Knox, Ken., and notified the Army they had the man in custody.

A fax was sent to Cohasset police with plane tickets to Louisville, Kentucky and orders for the man to report to an officer at the end of the gangway in Louisville International Airport and report his deserter status, police said. The man deserted from Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Because he was not a flight risk, the man was released on his own recognizance. He reported to Logan Airport and it was confirmed he arrived in Kentucky at 9 p.m.

Fort Knox is the United States Army Deserter Information Point. The USADIP services arrest warrants for apprehension of soldiers through U.S. military. USADIP's services and support significantly impact the implementation of Army deserter policy, which directly affects Army strength and operational readiness issues.

Teens arrested

Police arrested four teens – two boys and two girls – following a traffic stop for a defective taillight at 3:27 a.m. on Sunday (Oct. 3).

The officer observed the 1998 Nissan Altima with the defective taillight and stopped the car at Highland Avenue and Beach Street.

Police observed open beer cans inside the car and more investigation showed there was more beer and vodka. The operator was not impaired but the three passengers were, police said.

Arrested for being minors in possession of alcohol were: two 19-year-old Cohasset boys; a 20-year-old Scituate girl; and a 16-year-old Rockland girl, police said. The vehicle was towed. The juvenile girl was released to her parents.

The 20-year-old Scituate girl was placed into a diversion program before arraignment.

The two 19-year-old boys were arraigned and held over by the court on pending probation matters, police said.

Cast-iron urns

A 52-year-old Border Street resident reported last Monday (Sept. 27) that his two cast-iron urns that mark either side of the end of his driveway were missing. They are valued at $350 each and weigh 200 pounds apiece, police said. Police suspect that someone may have picked them up for scrap metal. Police canvassed the area and there are currently no suspects. The resident reported the missing urns at 8:30 a.m. that Monday.

Counterfeit $20

Detectives are investigating the passing of a $20 counterfeit bill at Tedeschi's in the village last week. The manager called police at 10:07 a.m. on Monday (Sept. 27) to report that a clerk had received a counterfeit $20 over the weekend. The manager took the bill to Rockland Trust that confirmed it was counterfeit. Police responded to Rockland Trust and took possession of the bill. The US Secret Service was contacted but is not involved at this point, police said.

Not stolen

A 22-year-old Cohasset man, who had left the keys in his car, reported to police that his 1999 Volkswagen Jetta had been stolen from outside his North Main Street apartment at 11:59 a.m. on Monday (Sept. 27). An officer took the report; the car had been missing for two hours, police said.

As it turned out one of the man's friends had borrowed the car without telling him. The car owner notified police who cancelled the BOLO (Be on the Lookout) to area towns.

Intoxicated

Police took a 54-year-old Hingham man into protective custody after receiving a report from Mary Lou's News on King Street at 7:06 p.m. on Monday (Sept. 27) about a suspicious person in the store. Police responded and found the man, whom they described as "highly intoxicated." He apparently had walked to the coffee shop. He was taken to the station until he sobered up, police said.

MV crash

At 5:31 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 28), police responded to a one-vehicle accident by USA Fitness on King Street. A 1998 Mercedes, operated by a 55-year-old Cohasset woman, who was traveling north on 3A, stopped to make a left into USA Fitness when a 2002 Hyundai Sonata, operated by a 39-year-old Scituate man, ran into the rear of the Mercedes. Both cars were towed; there were no apparent injuries, police said. The Scituate man was cited for following too closely.

Texting

Police are investigating obscene and threatening text messages that a 13-year-old Cohasset girl has been receiving on her cell phone. The girl's mother reported the messages to police on Tuesday (Sept. 28). The messages include obscenities and threats to burn the girl's house down. Police plan to subpoena the phone records to see where the messages are coming from. It is not clear if they are even coming from within the United States.

Deceased dog

A neighbor who found her neighbor's dog, a Newfoundland, dead in her yard, contacted police about conducting a welfare check on the neighbor last Wednesday (Sept. 29). She thought there might be something suspicious going on and had not been able to contact the neighbor. Police could not raise the neighbor and forced their way in, but he was not there. As it turned out the neighbor, a 23-year-old man, was at a friend's house. The dog, which weighed 100 pounds and was older, may have died of natural causes, police said.

Work signs

The 46-year-old owner of a local business reported to police last Thursday (Sept. 30) that three of his work signs, each worth about $200, were missing from homes on N. Main Street (2) and Beach Street (1). The matter is under investigation.

Shingles

Hingham Lumber reported to police that a 46-year-old Hull contractor had taken four bundles of siding shingles, put them into his truck, and left without paying. The report came in at 8:58 a.m. on Thursday (Sept. 30). The employee reported that the contractor is known to the business and was caught on videotape. The store said they called the contractor, who admitted to taking the shingles with a total value of $138. He promised to pay up by Tuesday (Sept. 28), but he had not. The store contacted police two days after the Tuesday deadline.

When police called the contractor, he the responded right away with payment, police said.

Summonses

• At 6:42 a.m. on Friday (Oct. 1), police stopped a 26-year-old Norwell woman, operating a 2005 Saab, for speeding on Forest Avenue. The Saab was traveling 46 in a 30 mph zone, police said. A registry check revealed the registration of the Saab had been revoked for nonpayment of insurance. The driver is being issued a criminal citation for operating an uninsured motor vehicle, for operating a vehicle with revoked registration and speeding.

• At 11:07 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 1), police stopped a 1999 Toyota Solara with no taillights and spoke to the operator, a 43-year-old man from New York City. A computer check revealed the man's right to operate a car in Massachusetts had been suspended. He is being issued a criminal citation for operating with a suspended license and for defective equipment.

Both cars were towed, police said.

Cohasset police arrest burglary suspect

An Abington man was charged in a criminal complaint in Quincy District Court on Oct. 6 with breaking and entering in the daytime with intent to commit a felony and larceny in a building.

The Complaint alleges that on Aug. 30, 2010, Robert L. Fernandes, age 24, of Abington, broke into and entered a residence on Reservoir Road in Cohasset and stole jewelry and cash. Fernandes was identified as a result of a latent fingerprint recovered from the crime scene by Cohasset Police detectives.

Fernandes was arrested by Cohasset Police detectives at his residence in Abington on Oct. 6 and was transported to the Cohasset Police station where he was held on $5,000 cash bail.

"I am very pleased that we were able to identify and arrest an offender with an extensive history of violent crime who victimized one of our residents," Cohasset Police Chief Mark DeLuca said. "The Cohasset Police Department takes residential burglary very seriously and we will mobilize all available resources to identify and arrest those that commit such crimes in Cohasset. If not for the dedication and training of our detectives, this crime would never have been solved."

The Criminal Investigation Division investigated the case.

Cultural Council grant applications due

Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to council spokesperson Selene Eymer, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset including exhibits, festivals, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures. Cohasset Cultural Council will also entertain funding proposals from schools and youth groups through the PASS Program, which provides subsidies for school-age children to attend cultural field trips.

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state Legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute approximately $3,800 in grant funds. Previously funded projects include: South Shore Art Center Arts Festival, Chorale Art Society, Town of Cohasset Recreation Department Summer Concert Series, Rusty Skippers concert band, and more.

For specific guidelines and complete information on Cohasset Cultural Council, contact Selene Eymer, selene@eymer.com. Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available online at www.mass-culture.org/lcc_public.asp.

Finance Director could be leaving town

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

About 10 years ago Buckley took over as finance director, a position that oversees the finance department, which includes the accounting, assessors, treasurer, collector and payroll services.

After 18 years working for the Town of Cohasset Finance Director Michael Buckley could be leaving.

The Town of Hull has tapped Buckley for the position of treasurer/collector. Town Manager Phil Lemnios appointed Buckley, but the Hull Board of Selectmen has 15 days (until Oct. 19) to veto the appointment.

In a phone interview on Wednesday, Buckley said he had accepted the job for the Town of Hull, but declined to comment further as he is waiting official word the job is his.

Buckley grew up in Cohasset, graduated from Cohasset High and started working as the town accountant when he was 29 years old. About 10 years ago he took over as finance director, a position that oversees the finance department, which includes the accounting, assessors, treasurer, collector and payroll services.

In a letter from Lemnios to the Board of Selectmen obtained by the Mariner it states Buckley was one of 23 applicants that applied for the position. According to the letter the appointment is effective Nov. 1.

If the appointment passes muster with the Hull Board of Selectmen, Buckley will take over the treasurer/collector position from former Cohasset treasurer/collector Joe DiVito. DiVito left his position with the Town of Cohasset in 2005.

Buckley's departure comes at a time when the town's leadership is in flux. Town Manager Bill Griffin is leaving Cohasset for a job in the private sector at the end of this month.

ELECTION 2010

Bradley challenged by Finnerty, Chambers

Three-way race for Third Plymouth District

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, who is seeking his sixth term, has got some competition this time out.

Tim Finnerty, a Republican, and Carlton "Al" Chambers, an unenrolled independent candidate, have both thrown their hats into the ring to represent the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and North Scituate. All three men are Hingham residents. The state election is Tuesday, Nov. 2.

Although a balloted candidate has not opposed Bradley since 2002, he says he welcomes the competition. (Bradley faced write-in candidates in 2006 and 2004).

"I always work hard during the election season by going door to door, talking to voters to see what is on their minds and holding signs," said Bradley, 40. "Regardless of the opposition — I let people know that I still want the job."

Finnerty, 48, is a former bond trader whose current focus is investing in high-tech startup companies in Massachusetts. He works out of his home and explains his work helps create jobs for Massachusetts residents.

Government's response to the current economic climate propelled Finnerty, who moved to Hingham from Long Island in 2005, to get involved.

"In my work, I pay close attention to what is happening in government and the economy," he said. "The things that are happening in the economy are largely as a result of government policy and excess spending."

Finnerty said he decided to run when he realized that Bradley might be running unopposed. "It is in the best interests of the district to hear more than one point of view," he said.

Chambers, a former Republican, says that a legislature that is 90 percent Democrat does not represent the people. Upwards of 60 percent of the registered voters in the district are unenrolled, he said.

"I was a Republican for years but I don't think Republicans represent the people either and they have been relatively ineffective in this state," he said.

If elected, Chambers, who says the key issue is fiscal responsibility at the legislative level, would work to eliminate unfunded mandates from the state that hurt education. "To do that the state has to live within a real budget," said Chambers who would look to layoffs and early retirements of state administrative personnel.

Finnerty, who was encouraged by the number of votes he received across the district in the Sept. 14 Republican primary, stressed there are no checks and balances in state government – with Democrats controlling the Senate, House and Governor's Office. "My goal is to bring a little balance to the House of Representatives," he said. If Charlie Baker wins the keys to the Governor's Office – in what, Finnerty says, is looking like a good year for Republicans – then being a voice to help sustain a gubernatorial veto would be important.

Finnerty believes in cutting wasteful spending on Beacon Hill and holding the line on any further local aid cuts. He also pledges to raise ethical standards in the House.

After 10 years in office, Bradley – whose first campaign was against long-time incumbent Mary Jeanette Murray, a Republican, in 1998 – has a record that he is proud to defend. He lists accomplishments at the local and state levels. (Bradley lost to Murray in 1998 but was elected in 2000).

In answer to critics who say Bradley, who is an attorney at Thornton & Naumes LLP in Boston, is not a full-time legislator – he is quick to point out that he is willing to work 80 hours a week to pay the bills and raise three children. "There is not an event or vote that I have missed due to legal work," Bradley said.

Bradley said he is also proud of being an independent voice, who has worked tirelessly for the district. He cites his accomplishments in ethics and campaign reform, pension reform and transportation reform. Looking ahead, Bradley's priorities include giving communities more tools in dealing with health insurance for municipal employees; maintaining high education standards while maximizing federal funding; and implementing the law that just passed that allows small businesses to pool together to purchase health insurance. Bradley stressed he has the experience and the motivation to continue as state representative.

"I want to return on the investment the folks have made in me," Bradley said. Bradley said that the late Mary Jeanette Murray (who was in office 24 years) told him that she knew she was doing the job when people referred to her only as "Mary Jeanette."

"People know me," Bradley said. "They say, 'Hey Garrett – what about this?'"
